ABANDONMENT OF EASEMENT

Easement—Abandonment—Discontinuance of right.

In a suit brought by plaintiff to close certain water spouts belonging to the defendant the facts found were that the defendant had formally two water spouts on the roof of his house, the rainfall of which was thereby discharged on to land, which now belonged to the plaintiff; that about 40 years ago, the part of the roof from which the rainfall was thus discharged fell in, and continued a ruin, until recently the defendant having restored it, set two new water spouts (the subject of this suit) in the very position where the old ones existed. It further appeared that during the period the defendant's house remained unroofed, plaintiff made erections on his own land which would suffer by the defendants' restored spouts.

Held, that the question for decision on the above facts was, whether or no there had been an abandonment by defendant of the easement which once existed, and the point to be determined was whether the long period that the site remained in a dismantled condition was enough to show either that the defendant abandoned at a former time the intention to rebuild or gave the plaintiff reasonable cause for believing he had so done. (CHURRUT SINGH v. SIMBOO, 68 P. R. 1880 cited). GHULAM MUHAMMAD v. GULSHAIR MUHAMMAD KHAN. 38 P R 1886

ABANDONMENT OF LAND.

See DECLARATORY DECREE.

ABANDONMENT.—1. Sixteen years' absence.

Held, per Boulnois, J., with reference to the Punjab Civil Code, section 21, clause 7 ("absentee sharers are usually held to be entitled to re-admission within a reasonable time"), that returning after an absence of 16 years was not returning within a reasonable time. KISHEN LAL v. MOOTSADDEE.
52 P R 1866

2. Plaintiff's father deserted his village for more than 15 years, and on his return obtained the land which afterwards came into plaintiff's possession. Defendant had held his larger share for more than 12 years. At settlement it was recorded that the land and jama were divided according to "shares."

Held, that this did not mean ancestral shares, and that defendant could not now be disturbed. MEHNDOO v. PHULLEE KHAN.
5 P R 1868 Rev

3. Re-admission—Absence of 40 years.

Plaintiff returning to his village after an absence of 40 years, claimed re-admission to his ancestral share of land under a clause in the Wajib-ul-arz by which sharers in possession at last settlement agreed to restore the shares of absent proprietors on their re-appearance. The lower Courts held that the claim was barred by limitation, as the claimant had been more than 12 years out of possession.

Held, by the Financial Commissioner in appeal, that as plaintiff's name was recorded at last settlement as an absent proprietor, and defendant agreed to give up the land on re-appearance of the absentee, their possession was not adverse and the claim was within time. GURMUKH SINGH v. PREM SINGH.
7 P R 1868 Rev

4. Adverse possession—limitation.

Plaintiffs sued for share of land in possession of defendant according to ancestral shares. At last settlement both parties were recorded as holding in common. Defendant admitted plaintiff's claim so far as it related to land inherited from a common ancestor, but as regards the rest he pleaded that it belonged to kindred who had deserted it, and that he had held adverse possession since S. 1908.

Found, as regards the disputed portion, that defendant's possession had been adverse beyond the period of limitation the entry in the settlement record notwithstanding; and held accordingly that the plaintiff's claim was barred by time. GULAB RAI v. JEYDIAL.

5. Estoppel.

Where plaintiffs sued to establish proprietary rights in land in defendant's possession, defendants pleaded that the claim was barred, (1) by limitation, in that plaintiffs had been out of possession ever since the land was thrown up by river action 15 years ago; (2) by abandonment, in that at last settlement, more than 11 years ago, they refused to occupy the land or engaged for the Government revenue; it was held by Boulnois and Simson, JJ., on the first plea, that plaintiffs were within time, as their cause of action accrued when the land was settled with defendants, and on the second plea, that after abandoning their rights for so long a period, and thereby inducing defendants to expend labour and money on improving the land and bringing it under cultivation, plaintiffs were estopped from asserting the title which they previously had. MEHTAB v. HEERA.

6. Wajib-ul-arz—Re-admission at any time.

Held, per Lindsay and Cunningham, JJ., that where the Wajib-ul-arz provided that the absentees might return and recover their share after any lapse of time, the clause must be taken to mean a reasonable time, and that 17 years absence barred plaintiffs' claim. ATU v. LABA. 67 P R 1870

7. Right of absentee's sons to restoration of the land.

In the ikrar khewat certain shares were recorded to be in the possession of J. K. and others, on condition that the shares should be restored to the absentee or fugitive proprietors on their return to the village, provided such proprietors made good to the holders any loss sustained by them during the absence of the proprietors. The defendant purchased the shares from J. K. and the other shareholders. About 14 years after this purchase, the sons of the absentee proprietors returned to the village and claimed their father's shares from the defendant.

Held, that the sons were entitled under the ikrar khewat to possession of the shares (per Lindsay and Cunningham, JJ.). CHANDER BHAN v. BALDEO SINGH. 4 P R 1871

8. Thirty, years' absence—trust.

Where the Wajib-ul-arz provided that absentee proprietors should on their return receive their proper shares from the holders, without regard to any profit or loss to such holders, that the held, holders took in trust the shares of the absentees, and that the claim of a proprietor after 30 years' absence was not barred by limitation (per Lindsay and Chunningham, JJ.). RULDO v. KESARA SINGH. 5 P R 1871

9. Settlement record not binding on those who did not assent to it.

A mere entry by a Settlement Officer which is not proved to have been accepted as correct by those in possession of the absentee's land, establishes no right in favour of the absentee—(per Lindsay and Cunningham, JJ.). But, per Lindsay, J., where there is clear and undoubted evidence of proprietors having admitted that they held the shares of absentee proprietors in trust for them till their return, such absentees and their children ordinarily, at any rate during the term of settlement, had a legal claim to obtain possession on the terms entered in the record. SHIB DIAL v. RAMCHAND.

10. Suit by representative of absentee—Limitation.

It was recorded at settlement 20 years before suit, that on the return of A, an absentee, he should receive back possession of his land. A died upwards of 12 years before suit without having returned to the village and his son died after him without having made any claim to the land. A month or so after the death of the last surviving, son the plaintiffs, the distant kindred of A, sued for the land.

Held, that it did not follow from the defendant's agreement to restore the land to A, that the plaintiff's suit was maintainable even if A's sons could have claimed the land under the agreement, and that the 12 years' limitation had run against the plaintiffs (per Boulnois and Campbell, JJ.). HAKIM v. KANHA

11. Trust—Expiration of trust.

Ten years after settlement, and about 28 years before suit, plaintiff's father absented himself and settled in Patiala. When the plaintiff was 10 years old his father died, and the father of the defendant, Jodh Sigh, who was also plaintiff's uncle, took the plaintiff into his family, where he was brought up and remained until Jodh Singh's death, which took place in 1871. At settlement it was recorded on the part of Jodh Singh that he agreed to surrender to his brother (plaintiff's father) his share of the land on his return to the village. Plaintiff now sued Jodh Singh's sons for his father's share.

Held, that the question to be determined was whether the trust recorded at settlement had, under the circumstances, expired or not; and that the circumstances of Jodh Singh's having brought up the plaintiff as one of his family vitally affected the question (per Boulnois and Melvill, JJ.). MEGHA SINGH v. CHETA. 46 P R 1872

12. Plaintiff sued to recover land of which he was recorded 18 or 20 years ago as an absentee proprietor; he alleged that he returned to the village about 2 years after settlement, and had lived in it ever since, cultivating with a relation of the defendant. There was evidence that the plaintiff occupied land of which the jama was Rs. 20 but for which he paid Rs. 32 as rent.

Held, that he had abandoned his rights as proprietor, and the defendant's long possession barred his suit (per Boulnois and Campbell, JJ.). JODHA v. GHULAMI.

13. About 45 years before suit, the village owned by 3 brothers, A, M and H, was burnt and they went off in different directions. A returned and at settlement agreed to restore to his brothers their shares when they returned. In 1864 A died and his sons took possession in 1868 M and H's son (H being then dead) came to the village and took from A's sons two ghumaos of M and H's shares (their full shares being 46 ghumaos). Up to 1868, the absentees had lived in a village a few miles distant, as tenants of the proprietor. In 1870 a dispute arose and A's sons ejected M and H's son from the two ghumaos. M, and H's son then sued A's sons for the full 46 ghumaos.

Held, that the plaintiffs had lost their proprietary rights (per Lindsay and Melvill, JJ.). MEDU v. BAHADUR. 34 P R 1874

14. Right of Representative to benefit of agreement made with absentees.

On 11th August 1864, defendants admitted before Superintendent of settlement that F. D. was an absentee sharer in the land held by them and that when he returned to the village he should be re-admitted. Within 12 years from the above date, and 60 years after F. D. had left the village, his descendants sued defendants for their share as F. D's. heirs.

Held, that plaintiffs were entitled to F. D.'s share (per Melvill and Thornton, JJ.). BUDHAN v. SHARAFU. 68 P R 1874

15. Trust.

Plaintiff left his village 26 years before suit, and married and took service in Jammu. He occasionally returned to the village to see his relatives. Two years after he left his village, his father died. Defendants took possession of the land now sued for, which was recorded in both regular settlements in the name of plaintiffs; in the first settlement, he was entered as absconded proprietor and in the second, an absentee.

By the Wajib-ul-arz absconders might regain their lands on paying up losses

Held, that he had not relinquished his land and that defendants held in trust for him (per Boulnois and Melvill, JJ.). GHODAR v. GURBAKASH. 73 R P 1874

16. Trust.

Plaintiff sued to recover his father's share in a village. At the time of settlement, about 1860, plaintiff's father was absent (having left his village through poverty and taken up his residence in another village about two kos distant) and had then been absent some ten years. The defendants were present at the settlement, when it was recorded that they would restore Murad Bakhsh (plaintiff's father) his share on his return. Murad Bakhsh died 4 years before suit, and the fact of the entry in the settlement record came to plaintiff's notice two years later.

Held, that the defendants held in trust for Murad Bakhsh, and the plaintiff having sued within 12 years of his father's death was entitled to possession (per Boulnois, Lindsay and Melvill, JJ.).

The judgment of Lindsay, J. in Khazan Singh v. Dhyan Singh (page 264, P. R. 1874) approved of, viz., that the inference to be drawn from such entries at settlement is that the land is held in trust for the absentee; but that the party in possession may convert his possession from permissive to adverse, by taking sufficient steps to signify that he holds for his own benefit alone, and that the absentee may by his conduct show abandonment of his rights.

Per Boulnois, J.—The lapse of a very long period is some evidence of an intention on the part of the absentee of actual abandonment. HAJI AHMED v. SHEKH AHMAD.

16*a* Plaintiffs, sons of the recorded absentee proprietor, sued for possession after an absence of about 30 years. Plaintiffs' father died in Bombay 14 years before suit, but the plaintiffs themselves went no further than Ferozepore, where they were in the service of a Bania, and every year visited, for about 3 weeks or a month, their native village. The Wajib-ul-arz signed by the defendants in 1851 in the absence of plaintiffs and their father, contained an undertaking on the part of defendants and others to restore the lands of absentee proprietors on their return.

Per Boulnois, J.—The reasonable construction of the Wajib-ul-arz did not permit the plaintiffs to return after such acts as theirs.

Per Campbell, J.—This was not a case in which a trust could be inferred, and the defendants' possession had been adverse for upwards of 12 years.

Per Lindsay, J.—The defendants, in subscribing to the Wajib-ul-arz, created a trust

in favour of the absentee proprietor and his lineal descendants ; but the trust could be determined (and not otherwise) by an overt act or omission of the trustees showing that they intended to hold adversely or by some act or omission on the part of the recorded absentee or his lineal descendants, showing a relinquishment of claim. KHAZAN SINGH v. DHIAN SINGH. P R 1874 p. 264

17. Abandonment—Limitation.

N., plaintiff's father, in 1856, left his village, where he owned land and was cultivating with his uncle, H. S., and settled in a neighbouring village where he adhered to H. S.'s enemies. In 1859, N. died in the village to which he had removed. In 1874, plaintiff, who was then about 20 years old, sued defendant, son of H. S. (deceased), for N's share, of which he, N. had been recorded proprietor at the settlement in 1856 shortly after he left his village.

Held, that plaintiff's claim was not barred by limitation, and that he was entitled to recover his father's share (per Boulnois and Lindsay, JJ.). GYAN SINGH v. HAZARA SINGH. 37 P R 1875

18. Acknowledgment.

D., the father of plaintiff, died in 1843, in possession of his land. The plaintiff was then an infant; he came of age in 1861.

In 1846, an entry was made at settlement that D's brothers, who had absconded taking plaintiff with them, were D's heirs and that his share was held by the proprietors of the Pana, who would restore the land to the absconders on their return upon payment of what was due. The brothers died, one in 1847, the other in 1852. In 1853 plaintiff and his mother returned to the village, when plaintiff and H, a son of one of the brothers, were entered as sharers in the abadi. H. died, and plaintiff and his mother again left the village is 1863. The proprietors of the Pana had the names of the deceased brothers of D erased from the settlement record and themselves substituted as proprietors of D's share. In 1873, plaintiff claimed his father's share.

Held, that plaintiff had not abandoned D's shares and having sued within 12 years of the proprietors asserting adverse possession he was entitled to recover (per Boulnois and Lindsay, JJ.). HAIT RAM v. CHAITAN. 46 P R 1875

19. Admission.

Admission by locum tenens does not enure to the benefit of the son of absentee. In 1855 defendant admitted the proprietary right of P and S, absentees. At the second settlement of 1863 the absentee had not returned, and defendant the locum tenens did not repeat his admission or make any engagement to restore the land to the absent owners. In 1875 P's son sued defendant for his father's shares, P and S having died more than 12 years before suit.

Held, that plaintiff's claim was barred by time (per Boulnois and Campbell, JJ.).

Per Boulnois, J.—The admission by the locum tenens does not do more than prevent limitation running against the absentee; and on the death of the absentee, the possession of the locum tenens immediately becomes adverse, unless the admission expressly relates to the absentee's descendants. NOOR MUHAMMAD v. SHARFU. 75 P R 1875

20. Entry personal to actual absentee.

In 1850, the land in suit was in possession of the defendant's father, when an entry was made in the settlement record to the effect that defendant's father held possession of A B's share, who was absent, and that, as nothing was due from the absentee for revenue, he (defendant's father) agreed to restore him the land when he returned. A B never did return, but died in 1872 in a neighbouring village, holding land there. His son then sued for the land referred to in the above entry.

Held, that A B had abandoned the land, and the plaintiff had no action (per Boulnois and Campbell, JJ.).

Per Boulnois, J.—Semble—the entry was personal to the actual absentee. ROSHAN-UD-DIN v. FATTA. 78 P R 1875

21. Plaintiffs, who had been out of possession for more than 20 years, were absent at the time of settlement, when it was recorded that upon their return and paying Rs. 200 they should get possession. In April 1851, plaintiffs returned and applied to the Settlement Court for possession. Defendants who were holding the land opposed the application and plaintiffs were referred to a regular suit.

More than 12 years from April 1851, plaintiffs sued.

Held, that their claim was barred by defendants' adverse possession (per Boulnois and Lindsay, JJ.). DALEL SINGH v. BIRBAL. 21 P R 1876

22. At settlement (about 17 years before suit) the land in dispute was recorded in the names of M. S. and K. (who had then been absent since 30 years), and was in the possession of G. R. their cousin ; it was then recorded that when M. S. and K. or their descendants returned, the land should be given up to them. The land was a joint ancestral khata ; M. S. and K. resided some 25 or 30 kos from the village, and died without making any claim. In 1873, the son of S. and grandsons of K. (M. died without issue) sued for the land. M. S. and K. died within 12 years of the action brought.

Held, per Campbell, J. (Boulnois, J., hesitating), that the land had been abandoned, and plaintiff's suit failed. MAKHAN v. DADU. 47 P R 1876

23. In 1842, at settlement, A. C. being present and in possession as proprietor of a plot of land, it was recorded that it was the custom of the village that absconders might return at any time and recover their land. In 1847, A. C. left his land without making any arrangements concerning it and defendants took possession. A. C. died about the year 1867, and within 8 years of his death (in 1875) his son sued for possession.

Held, by Lindsay, J., that with regard to the entry at settlement, defendants held in trust for A. C., and plaintiffs' suit was not barred.

Held, by Boulnois and Campbell, JJ., that A. C. abandoned the land in 1847, and was not merely an absentee and his son's claim was barred by limitation. JAIMAL v. YADU. 49 P R 1876

24. The land in suit was acquired by the grandfather of plaintiff and defendant, who was first cousin, and at the settlement of 1852 was recorded as belonging to plaintiff and his brother deceased. Plaintiff for nearly 20 years was absent in Patiala, where he held land during that period, and in no way concerned himself about the land in suit, which was occupied by defendant. There was no provision in the Wajib-ul-arz for the return of absentees. Held, per Boulnois and Campbell, JJ., that defendant's possession had been adverse ; plaintiff's suit dismissed. BURA SINGH v. VIR SINGH. 54 P R 1876

25. Per Plowden and Fitzpatrick JJ.—An entry at settlement that certain absent persons are owners of land, and that whenever the absentees return and make demand, their shares shall be restored without demur on the part of the occupants, does not necessarily prevent the law of limitation (12 years' adverse possession) from running against the absentees ; and even if the claim is not barred by limitation, it is a question of fact in every case, whether the absentees have so conducted themselves as to evince an intention to retain or abandon their property. The law of limitation operates upon a proprietor's rights independently of his will :—A proprietor, however, may so conduct himself that by an act of his own volition, he loses his right of ownership ; intention is as essential to the continuance of ownership as it is to the acquisition of it. The mere fact that an absentee is ignorant of a recorded entry, in his favor or his belief that there is no such entry, is not an absolute bar to a conclusion that he has relinquished his rights. The latter fact might tend to influence him to conduct from which it might fairly be inferred that he had resolved to abandon his rights. GANDA v. GURMUKH SINGH. 115 P R 1876

26. Limitation.—Where plaintiffsa bandoned the land claimed in 1861, and defendants promised to restore it within 12 years. Held, per Lindsay and Campbell, JJ., that a suit brought to recover the land after the lapse of 12 years from 1861 was barred by limitation. MAHTAB v. RAHMAT. 25 P R 1877

27. Abandonment—F. & A. were absentees at first settlement and their land was entered as in possession of defendants, with an agreement to restore the land to the absentees on their return. At second settlement, defendants again agreed to restore the absentees land when they returned. After settlement defendants divided the land. The absentees, who were living 18 kos from the land in suit, never returned. In a suit by S, son of F and nephew of A, to recover the land. Held, Per plowden and Smyth, JJ., affirming the order of the Commissioner that F and A had abandoned the land, and, therefore, that S had no claim. Long absence by an absentee, who though residing near the land takes no steps to assert his claim, raises a strong presumption that the absentee has relinquished all claim to the land recorded in his name, and this presumption is not affected by the conduct of those who permit the absentee's name to be borne in the settlement papers. ROSHAN-UD-DIN v. FATTA (78 P. R. 1875), approved and followed. SHERA v. QUTBA. 38 P R 1878

28. Absentee—Adverse possession.

The land in suit originally belonged to plaintiff's father (who died before the first settlement) and to plaintiff's uncle (who died during the same settlement) in equal shares. Plaintiff was an absentee at both settlements, but his land was recorded as being in possession of the defendant who agreed to restore it on the absentee's return. Defendant, who was brother of plaintiff's uncle's wife, acted as her agent as regards the land which belonged to her husband. Some ten years before suit plaintiff returned to his village and obtained eventually his full half share of the land to cultivate, since which time he cultivated jointly with defendant and on the death of his uncle's widow brought the present suit to be confirmed in proprietary possession of his own half share and to recover the other half which defendant had been cultivating as agent of the widow.

Held, reversing the order of the lower appellate court, that plaintiff was entitled to succeed in the whole of his claim, as no portion of it was shown to be barred by adverse possession on the part of defendant. GOHAR v. FATTEH DIN. 75 P R 1880

29. Agreement at first settlement and repeated at second settlement—Limitation—Abandonment. N. and S., two brothers, were out of possession of their lands at the first settlement, the former residing in the village and the latter being recorded an absentee. In the wajib-ul-arz of this settlement, which was for a term of 10 years to which period the operation of its provision was expressly limited, there was a provision that absentees on their return would be entitled to recover their land on payment of losses, and with regard to N. there was a distinct agreement on the part of two of the proprietors, who held a portion of his share, that they would restore it to him when he was in a position to cultivate the land with his own plough and cattle.

In the second settlement, which took place in 1865, neither of the above agreements was repeated. Both N. and S. died more than 12 years before the present suit the latter without heirs. In a suit by the two sons of N. to recover their father's and uncle's share of the land held by defendants.

Held, (1) that as regards S's land the suit was barred by limitation, as S had died 12 years before suit and hence the suit of his nephews would not lie; and (2) as regards N's land the plaintiffs were not in a position to enforce the special agreement which only enured for the term of the first settlement.

Held further, that plaintiffs had shown by their conduct that they had abandoned their right in the land claimed. ARORA v. MOHRA. 114 P R 1880

30. Absentee—Suit for re-entry—Adverse possession—Abandonment—Effect of admission at settlement in favour of absentee by party in possession.

In a suit by an absentee for re-entry on land of which the defendants were recorded as in possession, in which the defendants pleaded long adverse possession, the lower appellate Court, on the ground that at the time of settlement the defendants had themselves admitted the plaintiff's right to re-entry in a statement recorded by them, which completely disposed of the pleas of adverse possession, confirmed the decision of the first Court, which had decreed the plaintiffs' claim.

Held, that the lower Court had attached undue weight to the statement recorded by the defendants at settlement; that the presumption, arising from long continued absence and the omission to take steps to keep alive a once existing right that the absentee had relinquished all claim to his land, is not affected by a promise on the part of the person in possession of the land to restore it on the return of the absentee to the village; and that the question whether the absentee can be deemed to have abandoned his right to the land is one of fact to be determined with reference to the circumstances of each case, an enquiry into which should not be excluded by the mere existence of such a promise as that relied upon in the present case. 31. Adverse possession.

Held, following the previous decisions of the Court, that the question of abandonment in absentee cases is one of fact, to be determined on the circumstances of each case as it arises, and such abandonment may be found as a fact, notwithstanding the existence of entries in one or more settlement records, which show that the possessor is not holding adverse possession.

On the facts of the present case, held, that abandonment was not affirmatively established. GANGU v. JAWAHAR SINGH. 121 P R 1884

32. Burden of proof.

In a suit by certain absentee proprietors to recover possession of their land it appeared that at the first settlement the plaintiff's ancestors were recorded as the absentees, while, on behalf of the defendants in possession the condition was laid down that when the absentees should come and settle in the village, they (the holders) would make the land over to them. At the revised settlement the plaintiffs were recorded as absentees from 16 years, but a petition was taken from the defendants by the settlement officer in which they promised to give the plaintiffs their share when they came and settled in the village. It was found in the present suit, contrary to the plaintiff's own account, that during the 19 years preceding the suit they had neither demanded the land nor taken rent from it, nor settled in the village nor obtained possession, but had remained absent all along in a village some ten kos away.

Held, that on the above facts the lower Courts were justified in inferring that the plaintiffs had abandoned the land and given up their rights to it.

In all cases of absenteeism of more than 12 years' standing in the absence of an express and direct trust, the onus of proving that they have not abandoned the land rests with the plaintiffs. SHERA v. QUTBA (38 of 1878) and GANGU v. JAWAHAR, 121 P R 1884 cited. NIHAL SINGH v. DULA SINGH. 38 P R 1885

33. The garden in dispute was recorded in 1861 as the property jointly of the plaintiff and defendants, who formed a joint Hindu family. In 1861, plaintiff mortgaged to a third party some house-property belonging to the family, and entered in the deed a clause to the effect that if the defendants were to redeem it, he, plaintiff, would have no further claim to it. In the same year plaintiff left the village and went in to foreign territory where he married and settled, taking no further interest in the property or its management for 21 years, when, hearing that at the new settlement the defendants had recorded their own names as owners and excluded his, he returned and brought the present suit for possession of the garden.

Held, that the facts as found in the case were not sufficient to warrant the inference of abandonment. GANGU v. JAWAHAR SINGH, 121 P R 1884 cited. MEHAR CHAND v. DUNI CHAND. 18 P R 1886

35. Abandonment of land—Absentee—Adverse possession.—In cases in which an absentee seeks to be restored to his share in the ancestral land in possession of his co-sharers, inasmuch as mere absence from possession for a length of time does not work a loss of any rights unless an adverse title has been set up, the only other ground ordinarily to be considered is, whether the plaintiff has, as evidenced by his conduct, voluntarily given up his share, intending that his right to it should cease. Such intention is not manifested merely by absence, though long absence, coupled with an entire severance from all concern with the land, might be a strong circumstance to be taken into consideration in determining the question.

In cases where it is not shown that there has been any real burden on the land borne by the holder thereof for the time being, or that the holder could make out any account which would show himself a loser in the whole transaction, the indications of a final surrender of right by the plaintiff would have to be very clear. 36. Exclusion—Adverse possession.—A. and B. were joint owners of land. In 1857 A. sued B. for his share and got a decree. In execution formal possession was given. In 1861 A. asked for partition. B. then contended that A.'s share was one-third, of which he offered to give over possession, but A. would not consent to this. Subsequent to this A. was never in joint possession.

Held, that A. had abandoned his rights in the land. SAIYAD ALI NAWAZ v. SAIYAD ABDUL HUSSAN. 104 P R 1889

37. Suit to recover possession—Abandonment.—At the first settlement, plaintiffs' grandfather was recorded as absent. At the second settlement, the plaintiffs' father was entered as present and in possession. In 1872, when a portion of the common land was required by Government for public purposes, one of the plaintiffs received the plaintiffs' share. But in 1879, when more land was taken up by Government, the compensation was paid to defendants, who, however, took it on behalf of the plaintiffs, absentees.

In a suit to recover possession, it was pleaded that plaintiffs had abandoned their land.

Held, that there had been no abandonment. In cases of absenteeism, the question of abandonment should be decided on a consideration of the particular facts of each case and other cases should not be appealed to as precedents for a proper decision. JHANDA SINGH v. ISHAR SINGH. 9 P R 1890

Held, that these facts were sufficient to justify the presumption that the land had been abandoned.

Held, that these facts constituted a clear abandonment and were not affected by the promise recorded by the defendants in the settlement of 1869, but not repeated in the revised settlement of 1897, that they would restore the property on the return of the absentee to the village. ABANDONMENT—contd.

On the death of the original owner about twenty years ago his widow succeeded him, she being unable to pay a sum of Rs. 98-10-0 due to Government, on account of land revenue, left the village and went away to her parents. The plaintiffs being the reversioners were asked to take up the land and pay the revenue, due which had been realized from the defendant as lambardar, who was also a distant relation, declined saying that after the death of the widow they would set up their claim in the form they might consider proper. The defendant then asked to be put in possession of the land as he had already paid the amount due from the defaulter, and agreed to give it up after cutting the standing crop whenever the widow paid him Rs. 98-10-0. Thereupon the widow was entered as absent and the defendant in possession of her land. Shortly after the widow died without having made any effort to regain her land. In 1885 the land was mutated in the name of the widow's husband's mother, who was also an absentee, defendant being recorded in possession as before. The mother-in-law died ten years before the present suit, and the plaintiffs now claimed possession from the defendant on payment of the sum of Rs. 98-10-0 paid by him on account of the land. The defendant pleaded limitation and also abandonment of their rights by the plaintiffs on the widow's leaving the village and the land being offered to them by the Revenue authorities.

Held, that no abandonment had been proved either on the widow's or plaintiffs' part. The fact of the widow's going to her parents at a time of distress did not indicate any intention to give up her life interest in her land, but even had any such intention on her part been proved, the plaintiffs would not have been bound as they did not derive their title from or through her. The plaintiffs declining to take land in 1879, when called upon by the Revenue authorities, cannot be held to amount to an abandonment, as their title to possession had not accrued at that time.

Held further, that the circumstances under which the defendant obtained possession of the widow's property in 1879 and the mutation in her mother-in-law's name in 1885 after her death indicated the nature of the defendant's possession. In order to be adverse the possession must be like that of an owner, and with an intention on the part of the holder to hold the property for himself as such. The mere holding of the property without such intention does not confer a prescriptive title or extinguish that of the original proprietor out of possession.

Held also, that article 141 of the Second Schedule of the Limitation Act, 1877, was applicable, and that the plaintiffs' suit would not have been barred even if adverse possession of defendant in the lifetime of the widow had been proved, as plaintiffs' right to sue did not accrue until after the death of the mother-in-law of the widow, and that the discontinuance of possession which might have been fatal had the person absconding in 1879 been a male could not for the same reason bar the application of Article 141, and therefore Article 142

44. Common land—Possession of one co-sharer—Adverse possession.

Held, that as in common holding the possession of one co-sharer is the possession of all, mere occupation and enjoyment by one to whatever period it may extend to does not constitute an adverse possession as against the other co-sharer, unless the one in possession is able to show most clearly and emphatically his own adverse possession or abandonment by other.

An absentee in a common holding who leaves his property in the hands of a co-sharer, asserts his rights to succeed to a relative on the opening out of a succession in the village and objects on the first invasion of his rights by the person left by him in charge of his share of the holding, cannot be deemed to have abandoned his property, as in such cases mere length of time or absence does not affect his rights. 45. Absentee—Entry in Wajib-ul-arz subsequent to abandonment—no trust—Adverse possession.

Held, that an entry in the record of rights providing that when the plaintiffs absentees (who left their land 20 years previously without making any arrangements for the payment of the revenue return and want the land, they can take it back) does not constitute a trust, and antedating to the original abandonment by the plaintiffs, and that the plaintiffs having failed to prove that during the last 40 years they have had any connection with the land or shared its profit, the respondents have acquired title by adverse possession. Plaintiff sued to recover certain shares in a joint holding from defendants, who had been absent and whose ancestors had been absent from the village for a very long period, alleging that defendants had returned lately and taken possession of the shares, the right to which had lapsed through long dispossession.

Held, that in such a case the circumstances and specially the long silence and inaction of defendants and their ancestors, are evidence of abandonment, and therefore the possession of defendants and their ancestors, ceased when they left the village and ceased to take a share of the profits, and so forth. Where during the pendency of a special appeal to the Chief Court by the decree-holder from an order passed in execution proceedings, one of the two judgment-debtors (respondents) died, and no application was made to enter the legal representative of the deceased on the record.

Held, that by the combined operation of Sections 582 and 587 of Act X of 1877, the provisions of Chapter XXI of the Code extended to the present appeal, and that section 368 and not section 362 applied to the circumstances of the case, as the word "alone," in both sections means "exclusively" or to the "exclusion of all other persons."

In a suit brought by a collateral relative of a tenant with right of occupancy to set aside a deed of gift executed by the latter in favour of his daughter's son, both the Lower Courts decreed in plaintiff's favour. Held, that the appeal did not abate with reference to section 363 of Act X of 1877, as amended by Act XII of 1879, as by virtue of the gift the donor's interests in the property in suit, as between him and the donee, must be

During the pendency of an appeal by the plaintiffs in asuit for cancellation of a mortgage of immoveable property, one of the defendant respondents died, and no application was made till after the lapse of 60 days from the date of the respondent's death by the appellants to place the names of the legal representatives of the deceased on the record in his stead, nor was the case one in which the cause of action could be held to have survived against the surviving respondent alone.

Held, by the Full Bench, that section 368 of the Civil Procedure Code of 1877 and not section 372 was applicable to the above case, as the expression "cause of action" in Chapter XXI of the Code means any cause of action whether the suit be for damages, or for personal property, or for immovable property, or for some peculiar relief, and the expression "a cause of action which survives" means a cause of action which is not extinguished by the death of the plaintiff or of the defendant, as the case may be. BENODE MOHINI CHOWDHRAIN v. SHARRAT CHUNDER DEY (10 Calc. L. R. 449), not followed.

Held, therefore, by the Division Bench (Plowden and Smyth, JJ.), that Article 171 B., and not Article 178, of the 2nd Schedule of the Limitation Act applied to the above case, and accordingly under section 368 of the Code the appeal abated. 8. Civil Procedure Code 1882, sections 366, 372—Death of appellant during pendency of appeal—Suit against Sovereign as ruler of state—Public functionary—Evidence Act, 1872, section 57 (8).

During the pendency in the Chief Court of an appeal from a decree given against the Maharaja of Kashmir during the lifetime of the late Maharaja, the Maharaja died, and as no application was made within 60 days to put a representative of the deceased appellant upon the record, it was contended for the respondent that the appeal abated under section 366, Civil Procedure Code. It appeared that the suit was not to enforce any liability contracted by the defendant personally, but that the decree must be taken to have been passed against the Maharaja as Ruler of Kashmir, and that he must be regarded as having appealed against it in that capacity.

Held, that as the Court was bound, under section 57, clause 8 of the Evidence Act, to take judicial notice of the facts that the State of Kashmir existed, and that the Maharaja was its Sovereign recognized as such by the British Crown, and as the decree was against the Maharaja in his capacity as Ruler of the State, and was appealed from by him in that capacity, the appellant must be regarded as a public functionary who was sued under, and appealed by, his official designation, and the appeal did not therefore abate under section 366 of the Code, as the true appellant was not dead, the decree not being against the Maharaja in his private capacity, and the State, which he represented for the purposes of the suit, still existing. 9. Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), section 368—Application to make the representative of a deceased respondent a respondent—Sufficient cause for not applying within the prescribed period—Ignorance of law.

The question referred for the decision of the Full Bench was whether for the purpose of ascertaining what is "sufficient cause" within the meaning of section 368, Civil Procedure Code, and other similar provisions of the Code, it is necessary to exclude altogether from consideration mistakes arising from ignorance of law.

Held, per Burney, Tremlett and Smyth, JJ., that it cannot be laid down as a general proposition that ignorance of law can never be considered but that the principle laid down in ALLADITTA v. ZIADAT, 39 P R 1885, viz., that the excuse that the heir of a deceased respondent was not put on the record, within the prescribed period, because the appellant did not know the requirements of the Code and the Limitation Law, could not be accepted as "sufficient cause" in the terms of section 368 of the Code for the appellant's omission should only be departed from under special circumstances.

Held, per Barkley, J. (while otherwise concurring in the reply to the reference made), that it is inexpedient to lay down any general rule to control the discretion of the Court in dealing with each case with reference to its particular facts. GHULAM SHAH v. MALIK and MUZAFFAR. 81 P R 1886

During the pendency of an appeal by plaintiff in the Chief Court, arising out of a suit for partition of what he (plaintiff) alleged to be the undivided estate of a Hindu joint family, one of the defendant-respondents died, and no application having been made within the 60 days prescribed by Article 171 B., Schedule II, Act XV of 1877, to put his heir on the record, it was contended on behalf of the remaining respondents that the appeal abated. It appeared that after the period of limitation for such an application had expired the appellant did put in an application, praying that, in addition to one B. D., brother of the deceased already on the record, one R. C., another brother, and also the widow of the deceased should be placed on the record as respondents, but in a subsequent application it was pointed out that neither R. C., who had separated from the family, nor the widow were entitled to be regarded as the legal representatives of the deceased, and the appellant therefore prayed that the suit be proceeded with under section 362, Civil Procedure Code, without adding any parties to those already on the record.

As regards R. C., held, that the suit having hitherto proceeded on the footing that he would have no claim to a share in the property on division, the Court would not be justified in assuming in a case where no custom modifying the Hindu law had been pleaded or proved, that a custom allowing separated brothers to share with associated brothers in the property of a deceased brother was applicable to the parties, and that R. C. was not therefore a necessary party to the appeal. ABNASHI RAM v. MUL CHAND.

As regards the widow, held, that in a suit for partition brought by one member of an undivided family against another, the widows of deceased brothers and cousins are not necessary parties, though in many cases it might be convenient that they should be made parties, in order to ascertain what provision should be made for their claims against the estate.

The right to sue was, therefore, held to survive against the surviving respondents, against whom the appeal was directed to proceed under section 362, Civil Procedure Code. BUDHA MAL v. BHAGWAN DAS.

II.—ABATEMENT OF EXECUTION PROCEEDINGS.

See CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE, SECTION 230.

Execution of decree—Death of decree-holder—Abatement of execution proceedings—Admission of application to set aside abatement after time—Sufficient cause—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, sections 365, 371, 372 A—Limitation Act, 1877, section 5.

In an execution proceeding the decree-holder having died in September 1898, the judgment-debtor, on the 18th October 1899, obtained an order from the executing Court for the removal of the attachment on the ground that no application in accordance with the provisions of section 365, Civil Procedure Code, had been made by the representative of the deceased decree-holder within the prescribed period of limitation. The circumstances were that the decree.holder who was a Sikh Jat had died and left a will probate of which having been keenly contested by his heirs was not granted to the executors until April 1900. In May 1900 two out of the three executors filed an application for execution, but the judgment-debtor contended that by section 365 of the Civil Procedure Code the application was time-barred.

Held, that the word " suit " includes all proceedings in a suit including the proceedings in execution, and that the executors were bound to make and capable of making the application at the time of the death of the testator, but that, under the peculiar circumstances of the case, there was sufficient cause preventing them from continuing the execution proceedings originated by the testator within the meaning of section 371, Civil Procedure Code, and that therefore under the provisions of section 372 A, Civil Procedure Code, and of section 5 of the Limitation Act they were entitled to an extension of the time for making the application to set aside the abatement order.

III.—ABATEMENT OF SUIT.

1. Luntaic defendant—Abatement of suit until appointment of manager—Act XXXV of 1858—The defendant was sane when he contracted the debt sued upon, but became insane before the suit was instituted.

Held, that his wife could not be summoned as his legal representative to appear and defend until she had been appointed manager of her husband's estate under section 9 of

2. Custom—Alienation—Alienation by a Jat proprietor of ancestral property—Suit by the son of the alienor to declare the alienation invalid and not binding after the alienor's death—Competency of the reversioners of such son to continue the suit or appeal on the death of the son.—A. sued for a declaration that a sale made by his father K of ancestral property for Rs. 11,151-14 would not affect his reversionary rights, on the ground that there was no valid necessity for the alienation, and that K was not competent to effect it. The District Judge found that the alienation was valid to the extent of Rs. 5,794. Both parties being dissatisfied, the vendees preferred an appeal, and the plaintiff filed cross-objections against the decree of the District Judge. During the pendency of the appeal in the Chief Court the plaintiff died. The vendees applied for the substitution of the plaintiff's parents, and the Court brought his mother and uncles on to the record as representatives for the purposes of the appeal and the uncles alone for the purposes of the cross-objections. At the hearing of the appeal, the vendees contended that the claim being personal to the plaintiff, the cause of action did not survive, and that the suit should, therefore, be dismissed. The parties were Sidhu Jats of Attari, Tahsil Tarn Taran in the Amritsar District.

Held, that the cause of action survived to the plaintiff's uncles who were entitled to defend the appeal and to support the cross-objections filed by the deceased ; that under the Punjab Customary Law a reversionary heir does not derive his title from or through the last male owner of the estate, but from the customary rule which places a restriction upon the owner's power of disposition of ancestral property and renders him liable to be controlled in that respect by his collateral heirs, and that a suit for the declaration of such a right consequently does not abate on the death of a plaintiff who leaves reversioners, as that right can be exercised by those reversioners. See CUSTOM—ALIENATION.

3. Husband and wife—Suit by husband for dissolution of marriage—Death of respondent—Abatement of suit.

Held, that a suit by a husband for dissolution of marriage abates on the death of the respondent pending the suit and that such abatement entails the abatement of a claim for damages against the co-respondent. S. v. S. and B.

4. Application for substitution—Death of one of several defendants—" Sufficient cause" for not applying within the time prescribed—Limitation Act (XV of 1877)—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), section 368.

II.—ABATEMENT OF SUIT—concld.

Held, that ignorance of defendant's death is sometimes "sufficient cause" for not applying for legal representatives to be brought on the record in place of the deceased within the period prescribed therefor and a plaintiff can successfully plead his ignorance of the fact as a justification for such delay where defendants are numerous and live in a different village from plaintiff. 6. Account Books—Evidence.
In a suit for balance of account, account books kept in the ordinary course of business are admissible only as corroborative and not as independent evidence of the balance claimed as due. But to let in the books as corroborative evidence, it is not essential for plaintiff to show that defendant attested or acknowledged the balance; it is sufficient for plaintiff himself, or some one else acquainted with the fact, to testify that the balance claimed was due by the defendant to plaintiff. The plaintiff did not himself give evidence in support of his claim, nor was his absence from the witness-box accounted for.

Held, that plaintiff having declined to support his claim by the best evidence available was not entitled to succeed. HIRA BHAGAT v. GOBIND RAM. 63 P R 1897

31. Where plaintiff, the owner of a fourth share in a piece of building ground, sued to eject the defendants, who had built on the land with the consent of the proprietors owning a half share.

Held, that plaintiff was entitled to possession of her fourth share on her paying compensation to the defendants. MUSSUMMAT ZUHOORAN v. BUNSEE. 21 P R 1867

32. Where property was sold in execution of a decree by a Court that had no jurisdiction to hear the suit, and the judgment-debtor sued to recover the property (house and premises), the sale was cancelled, mesne profits were allowed to the plaintiffs, as the purchaser had full notice from plaintiff, and the purchaser was allowed compensation for improvements. HAMILTON v. PATTERSON.

33. According to the general usage in rural villages, the proprietor cannot oust the occupier of a house at pleasure on payment to the latter of the value of the materials of the building. BUKSHA v. FEEDA.
20 P R 1868

34. Defendant began to build on land to which his title was not disputed at the time and when the building was nearly finished, plaintiff came forward and objected.

Held, that where an owner of land omits to sue for demolition of buildings, when the infringement of his right is first threatened or commenced, he is estopped from claiming demolition, and is only entitled to compensation. MUSSUMMAT BHAGU v. NADIR ALI.

35. Possessor with knowledge of defective title—Right to compensation for improvements.

A person in possession of the land of another with knowledge of his defective title is not entitled to compensation for improvements where such improvements, not being necessarily of any direct advantage to the real owner, were objected to by him at the time when made. BABA KHEM SINGH v. DHUNNA SINGH. 7 P R 1872

36. Ejectment—Rent.

A piece of land was given by the plaintiff to defendants more than twelve years before suit, for the purpose of building a house upon it, not as an absolute grant, but with a reservation of plaintiff's proprietary right in the land. The defendants built upon the land, and occupied without paying any rent. Plaintiff sued either to eject the defendants, allowing them to remove the building materials or pay them compensation, or to receive rent for their occupation of the land.

Held, that it would not be equitable to allow the plaintiff to eject the defendants, but that the plaintiff was entitled to a fair rent so long as the defendants continued to use and occupy the land. MOULVI SADID-UD-DIN KHAN v. AGHA MIR. 19 P R 1875

37. Occupation of land by person without title—Erection of buildings—Delay on part of owner in bringing suit—Relief to which occupier without title is entitled.

Defendants occupied and erected katcha buildings upon land belonging to the plaintiffs. After a period of 6 or 7 years plaintiffs sued to eject the defendants from the land.

Held, that defendants were not entitled to continue in possession of the katcha buildings, but were entitled to remove the materials thereof.

Mere delay on the part of an owner of land in suing a person in possession without title, who erects buildings on the land he has illegally occupied, does not entitle the possessor to be maintained in possession. The particular relief to which a possessor so situated is entitled must depend upon the circumstances of the case. GOUHAR v. FAZLA.

38. Custom—M. Saroki, Gujrat district—Sale of houses by non-proprietary residents.

By the custom of the village of Saroki in the Gujrat district, non-proprietary occupants of houses cannot sell them unless they hold the sites by purchsse or gift from the proprietors.

The fact that the proprietors silently acquiesced in some 18 sales of houses and sites by non-proprietary residents between 1864 and 1877.

Held, not to deprive them of the right of objecting to a particular sale; as the mere non-assertion of a discretionary right in certain instances does not necessarily imply a renunciation of it for all time and in all cases.

The decision in Punjab Record, No. 25 of 1875, cited and approved. ALLA DITTA v. DINA. 125 P R 1879

39. Consent to jurisdiction—Acquiescence.

Held, by the Full Bench, that the consent and acquiescence of the parties to a suit cannot give jurisdiction to a Court of limited jurisdiction. HAMA v. RAN SINGH.

set aside the alienation, but where the collaterals not only delayed to attack the alienation, but were also concerned either in purchasing from the alienor to the exclusion of other collaterals, or cultivating under or exchanging with the defendants-alienees the disputed lands.

Held, that they had acquiesced in the alienation, and were estopped from bringing the suit. NIHALA v. BHIKAM RAM (81 P. R. 1898), approved. AMIR AND OTHERS v. MUSSAMMAT ZEBO AND OTHERS. 42 P R 1902

41. Occupancy right—Sale of, without consent of landlord—Acquiescence—Right of tenant under section 5 not less than that of one under section 6—Punjab Tenancy Act, 1887, sections 5, 53, 55, 60.

In a suit instituted in 1903 by a landlord to set aside a sale made by occupancy tenants holding under section 5 of the Punjab Tenancy Act on the ground that it had been effected without his previous consent and was therefore void, it appeared that the sale deed was registered on 27th February 1890 and mutation effected in the following April, and that the rents were paid by the alienee after that and accepted by the plaintiff.

Held, that the landlord's conduct and acts amounted to acquiescence and he was estopped from contesting the sale. JIWAN SINGH v. MAHARAJA JAGGAT SINGH (1 P. R. 1898, Rev.), and BAKHSH v. FATEH MUHAMMAD (2 P. R. 1898, Rev.), referred to. BHAGA AND OTHERS v. KRISHAN DEO. 8 P R 1904 Rev.

1. Muhammadan Jats of the Ghumman tribe—Ferozepore district.

Found, by custom, that only a son could object to the alienation of acquired property. JAWAN v. ESA. 2 P R 1877

2. Bedi Khatris of Pak Pattan—Self-acquired property—Gift of extra share to youngest son—Will.

Found, that among Bedi Khatris of Pak Pattan in the Montgomery district, there is no established custom whereby a proprietor's power of alienation of self-acquired property is limited—where therefore, a Sikh father of the above tribe disposed of two shares of his self-acquired property by will in favour of his youngest son, to the exclusion of the two elder ones.

Held, that such disposition was valid. BABA NATHA SINGH v. WAZIR SINGH. 63 P R 1880

3. Hindus of Kapuria caste—Property, ancestral and acquired.

Found, that no custom was established restricting either the alienation of acquired property or of property derived from the maternal line by inheritance.
SONU v. LOKU. 2 P R 1881

4. Udasi Faqirs of Jullundur—Self-acquired property—onus of proof.

In a suit to succeed as heir under a will of one B. D, an Udasi faqir, to his self-acquired property, where the defendant, the disciple of the deceased, alleged that he was incapable of disposing of such property as he pleased, and it appeared that the deceased B. D., was not one of those Udasi faqirs who have totally renounced worldly affairs, but who both trade and marry.

Held, that it lay upon the defendant to establish a custom among Udasi faqirs of this class overriding the general rules of law as to the acquisition and disposition of property by private persons, which in this case he had failed to do. LACHMAN DAS v. MUSSAMMAT THAKUR. 29 P R 1881

5. Pathans of Dipalpur tahsil, Montgomery district—Will—Acquired property.

Found, in a suit the parties to which were Pathans of the Dipalpur tahsil in the Montgomery District, that the parties were governed by custom and not by Muhammadan Law, and that under the custom a disposition by a proprietor of his acquired property by will was valid. MUSSAMMAT BUBU BEGAM v. ASADULLA. 170 P R 1888

6. Awans of Peshawar district—Will—Acquired property—Bequest with remainder.

A will by which a proprietor bequeathed his self-acquired property to the defendant's mother with remainder to the defendants, found, not to be invalid by the custom of Awans of the Peshawar district. MUSSAMMAT KHEMO v. FAZAL DIN. 176 P R 1888

7. Chib Rajputs of mauza Chak Natha, district Gujrat—Gift by a sonless proprietor of his self-acquired property to a daughter's sons.

Found, that no custom exists among Chib Rajputs of the Gujrat district which prevents a childless proprietor from making a valid gift of his self-acquired immovable property to his daughter's sons in the presence of near agnates. SHARAF ALI v. KARIM-ULLAH. 125 P R 1890

8. Custom—Alienation—Ancestral land—Non-ancestral house and movable property—Arains of Ferozepore district—Will.

The plaintiffs sued their half-brother to recover their share of the property left by their father, an Arain of the Ferozepore district, consisting of (i) ancestral land, (ii) a non-ancestral house and (iii) movables. The defendant set up a will, the validity of which as exceeding the power of the donor, was denied by the plaintiffs.

Held, that the alienation of the ancestral land in favour of one son to the exclusion of the others, without their assent, was invalid; but that the bequest of the rest of the property in dispute should be maintained. ACHHA v. GAMAN. 120 P R 1893

9. Custom—Gift by sonless proprietor to daughter's husband—Puriwal Jats of Daska tahsil, Sialkot district.

Found, that by custom among Puriwal Jats of mauza Noiki, tahsil Daska, Sialkot district, where ancestors had migrated from the Raya tahsil, a sonless proprietor is not competent to make a gift of his property, whether ancestral or self-acquired, to his daughter's husband without the consent of the persons who would otherwise succeed to the property. SAHIB DITTA v. SURJAN. 17 P R 1894

10. Bans Jats of Ludhiana tahsil—Custom—Alienation—Gift by sonless proprietor to daughter—Ancestral and acquired property.

Found, that the plaintiff had failed to prove that by custom among Bans Jats of Ludhiana sonless proprietor was incompetent to gift his acquired estate to his daughters. DULA v BUTA. 53 P R 1897

11. Self-acquired property—Gift during lifetime with possession—Sister's son.

Found, that a gift of self-acquired property followed by possession and mutation of names by donor in his lifetime to his sister's son was not invalid by custom. JOWAHIR SINGH v. DIAL SINGH. 76 P R 1898

12. Awans of Khushab tahsil, district Shahpur—Custom—Gift of immovable property.

Found, that by custom among Awans of Khushab tahsil, district Shahpur, in the absence of male lineal descendants, a male proprietor has an unrestricted power of gifting his immovable property, whether ancestral or acquired, to his daughter, daughter's son, sister, sister's son, son-in-law, or to one of his agnates to the exclusion of the rest and without their consent. SHER MUHAMMAD v. PHULLA. 9 P R 1899

13. Alienation of property acquired from income of ancestral property—Custom.

As under customary law property acquired from income or profits of ancestral property does not constitute it ancestral, the onus of proving that such property cannot be alienated by the last full owner at his pleasure rests on the person alleging such a custom. SHER SINGH v. KISHEN SINGH (4 P. R. 1900, cited). MEHR KHAN v. KARM ILAHI. 13 P R 1902

14. Alienation by Hindu widow of self-acquired property of her husband—right of reversioner to question such alienation.

Held, that there is no distinction between ancestral and acquired property inherited by a Hindu widow from her husband, and a reversioner has as much right to contest her alienation of the one as of the other. KIRPA RAM v. RAKHI. 114 P R 1907

15. Competency of father over self-acquisition—Validity of a testamentary disposition of his share by a member of a joint Hindu family—Effect of partition by testator before death.

Held, that a Hindu father is competent to dispose of all his self-acquired property at pleasure, and his sons cannot dispute the disposition even though it be in favour of a stranger.

Held, also, that a testamentary disposition of his share of the joint property by a member of an undivided family would not be invalid if the interest of the testator had been separated off by means of a partition before his death. SOHAN LAL v. LABHU RAM. 150 P R 1907

16. Awans of Pind Dadan Khan tahsil—Custom—Inheritance—Rights of daughters succeeding to their father's property.

In a suit the parties to which were Awans of Pind Dadan Khan tahsil,

Held, that the defendants, on whom the burden of proof lay, had failed to establish a custom under which the daughter of a sonless proprietor, who has succeeded to the non-ancestral property of her father by inheritance has an unlimited estate or has full power of disposition in the presence of collaterals related to the deceased in the ninth degree. Distinction between a gift by a father of his self-acquired land to his daughter and the inheritance of such land by her in absence of male lineal descendants explained. BAHADUR v. ABDULLAH. 121 P R 1908

17. Hamdani Sayads of tahsil Talagang—Custom—Bequest by male proprietor—Ancestral and acquired property.

Found, that among Hamdani Sayads of Talagang tahsil, in the Jhelum district, a bequest by a male proprietor of his immovable property is valid by custom so far as it affects only his self-acquired property. AHMAD SHAH v. FATEH BIBI. 132 P R 1908

18. Custom—Inheritance—Right of daughter to inherit in presence of near male collaterals—Hindu Rajputs of Kangra district.

Found, that defendant had failed to prove that by custom among Hindu Rajputs of the Kangra district, near male collaterals were entitled to succeed to the self-acquired property of a sonless proprietor held by him in a different village in preference to the daughter. NIDHU v. RAM SINGH. 2 P R 1909

Acquired and ancestral property—Profits of ancestral immovable property and purchases effected with such profits—Custom—Unequal distribution of such profits and purchases among sons.

"ACQUIRED" AND "ANCESTRAL" PROPERTY—concld.

Held, that the profits of ancestral immovable property and purchases effected with such profits are not ancestral property, under Customary Law in such a sense that descendant of the ancestor from whom such property devolved can interfere with the disposal of such profits or purchases. 1. Sections 3, 4, 15—Court giving effect without enquiry to a will the validity of which was disputed—"Legal directions."

Where on an application being preferred under Act XIX of 1841, the Court, considering itself bound by the existence of directions in the will of the deceased proprietor for the possession of the property after his death to give effect to these directions, ordered with reference to section 15 of the Act that the applicant should be put in possession, but did not consider whether the directions contained in the will, the validity of which was disputed, were legal directions, nor take any evidence except the examination of the applicant and of the parties in possession, who denied the truth of the applicant's allegation, held, that the enquiry made was not such as to satisfy section 3 of the Act, but that the case must be remanded for the Court to determine summarily the right to possession after determining whether the directions, contained in the above mentioned will were legal directions, and, if not, whether the applicant was entitled to be put in possession on the grounds specified in section 3, or the opposite party to be restored to possession. ACTS—contd.

Held, that the mere fact that a Judge issued citation under section 4 of Act XIX of 1841, without in the first instance satisfying himself whether the party in possession had no title and that the applicant was likely to be prejudiced if left to the ordinary remedy of a regular suit as contemplated by section 3 of the Act, does not bar that officer or his successor from arriving on the evidence at a conclusion that the party in possession should not be disturbed. Interpretation of the expression "rights."

Held, that the expression rights in section 1 of Act XXI of 1850, includes something more than actual rights in property, and that the right to the guardianship and custody of his children by a Muhammadan who has been converted to Christianity is a right within the meaning of Act XXI of 1850. ACT OF STATE.

1. Hostile seizure—Jurisdiction—Regulations III of 1793 and II of 1803.

No Municipal Court has jurisdiction to adjudge upon a transaction the character of which is that of hostile seizure made, if not flagrante, yet nondum cessante, bello. Nor can the fact that military occupation does not, according to the rules of modern warfare, work a transfer of private immovable property, render the matter one of forensic jurisdiction. Those rules belong to the law of nations, which, like the moral law is part of the law of England, but only to the extent that the Court will not help those who break it.

The property of a person resident in a place under the control of rebellious subjects treated by the Government as enemies, whether that person is attached to the rebel cause or not may be seized by the State as enemies' property.

A declaration by Government of its intention to restore, or an order issued by Government to the Executive Authorities to restore property seized in war, gives no legal title or right of suit to the former owner, nor does it confer any jurisdiction upon the Municipal Court.

By Regulation III of 1793 and Regulation II of 1803, Government subjects itself and its officers to the jurisdiction of the Civil Courts only in regard to the matters specified in those Regulations, and in no other matters; and the jurisdiction thus conferred has not been extended by any subsequent Regulation, Act, or Order. The Secretary of State for India in Council v. Wagentrieber.

2. Act of War—Rebellion.

A Government may exercise the rights of war in suppressing a rebellion of its subjects, and the seizure of property in the exercise of those rights is an act of power in a matter of State over which no Municipal Court has jurisdiction. Every direct consequence of the seizure is excluded from forensic jurisdiction; and a Civil Court cannot declare as to property seized by the Government after a mortgage thereof, that the mortgagee's interests are not affected by the seizure. Salig Ram v. The Secretary of State for India in Council. 7 P R 1867

3. Confiscation of Ex-King of Delhi's Estates—Jurisdiction of Civil Court—Power of Ex-King to charge his estate—Recognition of creditors' claims by British Government.

Plaintiffs sued to recover Rs. 68,853, alleged to be due for principal and interest on certain bonds executed by the late King of Delhi.

The bonds did not mention the property by which the debts were secured; but the late King had, as far as he lawfully could, assigned and appropriated to the discharge of the debts certain amounts which the Resident at the Court of Delhi was requested to pay yearly out of the revenues of certain of the royal Taiyool villages. In October, 1857, the British Government attached and took possession of the Ex-King's lands, who had been already captured by the Government and made a prisoner of war shortly after the Mutiny. By a Circular of the Judicial Commissioner of the Punjab, under the order of the Supreme Government, (No. 112 of 1859), all mortgages effected by the King on those estates which the Government thus confiscated were to be paid: but by a letter from the Government of India to the Government of the Punjab, dated 28th December 1860, published in Circular of 12th January 1861, in continuation of Circular 112, "the Governor-General was of opinion that neither Salig Ram and Devi Singh's [plaintiff] claim, nor that of any other creditor of the Ex-King, who had been convicted of rebellion, to the liquidation of their claims from the revenue of the Crown lands, should be admitted." Upon the Circular of the Judicial Commissioner plaintiffs based their claim, also contending that the King had only a right to that which remained after satisfying the plaintiffs' claim, and to this alone was Government entitled by virtue of the confiscation.

Held, by the Privy Council (affirming) the judgment of the Chief Court—No. 7 P. R. 1867) that the seizure or confiscation of the property of the late King was an act of State or war, in respect of which the Municipal Courts had no jurisdiction; that the King of Delhi had no such ownership or power of disposition in respect of his estates in British territory as to enable him to create charges upon them which survived his deposition, but that the territory was assigned to his grandfather, Shah Alum, for the support of his royal dignity and the due maintenance of himself (Shah Alum) and family, and all charges and incumbrances created out of that estate fell with the estate itself; and that even if Circular 112 of the Judicial Commissioner were a legislative recognition of the creditors' rights (which it was not) the Circular of 12th January 1861 was of equal validity and divested the plaintiffs of their claim. Salig Ram v. The Secretary of State for India in Council.

4. Jurisdiction—Sovereignty.

The assumption by Government, upon taking possession of conquered or ceded territories, of a jagir granted by former Rulers, is an act of sovereign power over which no Municipal Court has jurisdiction.

And if, when taking possession of conquered or ceded territories, the Government so limits the act of conquest as to exempt the lands of a particular jagirdar from being brought under its administration, the effect of such exemption is to maintain the jagirdar in political relations to the State, and to prevent any act of the Government towards the jagirdar or his property, whether public or private, from being made the subject of enquiry in a Municipal Court.

Perfect independence is not a necessary attribute of sovereignty, and the fact that a territory has been conquered makes no difference as regards the political independence of its ruler if such independence is recognized by the Government. FORESTER v. THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA IN COUNCIL. 13 P R 1867

5. This judgment of the Chief Court in what was termed the "Badsha-pore suit," was affirmed by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, on the ground that the plaintiffs had failed to prove the title asserted by them; their Lordships differing from the Chief Court as to the first ground of defence, (viz., that the Government took possession of the jagir in question as an act of State, the propriety and validity of which were not cognizable by any Municipal Court.) FORESTER v. THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA IN COUNCIL. 1 P R 1872 P C

8. Seizure of property in time of war—Qualified or absolute restoration—Evidence.—Plaintiff sued the Government for certain marble forming part of a tomb which was taken into the possession of Government by way of hostile seizure at the capture of Delhi in 1857,—the tomb being near the walls of the fort and within the space taken up after the occupation of Delhi by the British troops for the purpose of the defence of the fort. The tomb remained undisturbed, being respected as a tomb by the Government. In 1866, the Government sanctioned plaintiff's repairing the tomb, and in 1869 paid a purchaser from the plaintiff the value of certain marble then taken away; and it also appeared that the plaintiff had been permitted to burn a light in the tomb and take general charge of it. Upon these facts the plaintiff contended that though the original seizure in 1857 was beyond the province of forensic litigation, the plaintiff's rights in the tomb had been since restored to her by the Government.

Held, that though a slight amount of evidence is sufficient to show restoration of private rights in immovable property seized in time of war, there was in this case an absence of evidence showing an intention to restore, and that accordingly plaintiff's suit was untenable.

Per BOULNOIS, J.

That the Government had so acted in derogation of its absolute title, that the plaintiff, though not entitled to claim the possession or value of the materials, might restrain Government from disposing of them or diverting them from the purposes of the tomb. MUSSAMMAT IKRAMAL NISSA v. THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA IN COUNCIL. 14 P R 1872

9. Seizure of property in time of war—Restoration of property so seized—Public Agent—Scope of authority—Ratification—Act IX of 1859.

Plaintiff, a Mahomedan, was with all the residents turned out of Dehli in September 1857, after the fall of the city. The place was held by military occupation until January 11th, 1858, when the management of the city was transferred to the Civil authorities. On the 27th September 1857, the Collector, Mr. Egerton, recorded a proceeding to the effect that by a general order the houses of the Mahomedans in the city of Delhi had been attached, and the Kotwal had been instructed to seal up each house. On the 26th January 1858, Mr. Egerton issued a proclamation to the effect that as by general order the houses and lands of the Mahomedans had been attached, and it was desired to release the property of those who were not concerned in the mutiny, Mahomedans might prove their loyalty within one month, failing which their houses and lands would be confiscated to Government. A list of persons who had joined the rebellion was prepared, and in this list the plaintiff's name appeared, with the entry that Rs. 50 was offered as a reward for his capture. In March 1858, plaintiff was taken by the police from Sonepat, where he was then residing, to Panipat and there detained in custoly until 3rd April 1858, when he was released by the Magistrate of Panipat and allowed to return to Sonepat on entering into a personal recognizance of Rs. 400. In May 1858 he was again arrested and sent to the Deputy Commissioner of Panipat, who forwarded him to Delhi with other prisoners. At Delhi he was tried by the Special Commission, who, on the 10th July 1858, ordered that he should be released on security of Rs. 100 for one year, or in default suffer imprisonment for that period. The security was given, and plaintiff was released. On the 17th July 1858, on the petition of plaintiff, Mr. Egerton one of the Special Commissioners and Deputy Commissioner of Delhi, ordered plaintiff's name to be struck off the list of rebels. By the Queen's proclamation of 1st November 1858, there was promised to all, save those who had been or should thereafter be convicted of having taken part in the murder of British subjects or of having knowingly given asylum to such murderers or instigated revolt, unconditional pardon, on their return to their homes and peaceful pursuits.

In December 1858, plaintiff petitioned the Commissioner of Delhi for a restoration of his houses; the petition was sent to the Deputy Commissioner for report. A report was made, but no order passed on it. On the 29th December 1859, the Governor-General informed the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab of his (the Governor-General's) desire that the attachment upon the houses of the Mahomedans of Delhi should be removed. A copy of this letter (No 848) was sent by the Governor-General to the Commissioner of Delhi for information and guidance, and by the Commissioner to the Deputy Commissioner. On the 24th January 1860, the Deputy Commissioner was informed by the Kotwal that plaintiff was applying for the release of his property, with reference to the "general order of release." The Deputy Commissioner passed an order on the 9th March 1860, that plaintiff should be "informed through the Kotwal that he cannot take advantage of the general order of release, and that it cannot affect his property." On the 11th March 1860, plaintiff petitioned the Deputy Commissioner for a release of his property; on the 12th the Deputy Commissioner referred the matter to the Kotwal to inquire whether there were sufficient grounds for the release. The Kotwal reported on March 22nd to the effect that there were sufficient grounds for release. On the 27th March, Mr. Plowden, Officiating Deputy Commissioner, passed an order that the plaintiff's "property be released; Kotwal to put him in possession and give him a ticket as usual." On the 28th April, the Kotwal reported that plaintiff was in possession. In March 1861 plaintiff petitioned the Punjab Government for permission to travel where he pleased in search of employment, and sent with his petition certificates, one of which, signed by the Commissioner of Delhi, stated that plaintiff "had been cleared of all complicity in rebellion and all his property had been restored to him." The permission to travel was granted. In July 1861, Mr. Cooper, Deputy Commissioner of Delhi, reported to the Commissioner that Mr. Plowden had apparently released the property of the plaintiff without sufficient reasons. The Commissioner forwarded the papers to the Judicial Commissioner of the Punjab, who in July 1861, replied that Mr. Plowden had no authority to release the property, and that the release was void from the non-competency of the party who released." On this the plaintiff's property, by order, dated 5th August 1861, was re-attached, and he was ousted. Against this the plaintiff protested in a petition, which was sent up to the Local Government, but the Government declined to interfere with the order of the Judicial Commissioner. Again plaintiff petitioned, and the Government of India in January 1869, "disallowed the claim" of the plaintiff. Plaintiff then memorialized the Secretary of State for India, who refused to interfere. Plaintiff thereupon sued the Secretary of State for India to recover possession and for mesne profits; and the following issues were fixed:—

1. Was the original act of seizure in 1857 an act of State, and has the Civil Court jurisdiction in regard to a complaint arising out of it?

2. What is the effect on the plaintiff's rights of the order of restoration, dated 27th

March 1860, and the effect of the counter-order of the 5th August 1861, and the actual possession enjoyed by the plaintiff between those dates ?

3. What is the effect on plaintiff's rights of Act IX of 1859 ?

4. What, if any, mesne profits are to be allowed ?

Held, per MELVILL, J.

That the plaintiff lost all title to the property in suit by the act of seizure of 1857, which was an act of State, and the subsequent refusals to restore it, and he could only acquire a fresh title by the voluntary action of the Government performed with full knowledge of what it was doing. That the letter of the Governor-General (No. 848) could have no higher force than the Queen's amnesty ; that the latter had no retrospective effect, and therefore the former had no such effect ; that Mr. Plowden had no authority to put his own construction on the letter No. 848, and release the plaintiff's property ; for these reasons, that the letter was addressed to the Punjab Government, and not to the Deputy Commissioner ; the fact that a copy of it was sent to the Commissioner did not confer on the local officers any power which they would not have had if no such copy had been sent ; and the power of the local officers was not to release property at their pleasure, but to do so after reference to and in subordination to the Punjab Government. That Mr. Plowden's act was not ratified by the Government, the fact of the release being merely mentioned in correspondence the object of which was to ascertain whether plaintiff should be allowed to travel at his pleasure, and the Government tacitly accepting the statement regarding the release of the property without full knowledge of all the circumstances ; that the Government, as soon as it was aware of Mr. Plowden's unauthorized act, repudiated it. That Act IX of 1859 did not affect the case one way or the other ; for the reasons that, with regard to plaintiff's case, first, plaintiff had not surrendered himself for trial, but had been involuntarily arrested at Sonepat ; secondly, because he had not been acquitted by the Special Commission ; and, thirdly, because Her Majesty's proclamation was not retrospective : —and with regard to defendant's case, that Section 20 of the Act did not bar the suit on the ground of limitation, as the Act referred only to attachments and seizures made before the passing of the Act. That for these reasons plaintiff's suit should be dismissed.

Per BOULNOIS, J.—That although the Government had, before plaintiff became re-possessed of the property in March 1860, the matter entirely in their own hand to retain possession of plaintiff's property as well as every part of the captured city of Delhi, the fact that plaintiff became so re-possessed entitled him to put Government to the proof of their proprietary title ; in 1861, when he was ousted he was entitled to be maintained in possession until dispossessed in due course of law, and it was for the Government in this suit to show that they took back the property, from the plaintiff in 1861 by reason of the strength of their own title. That Government could not rely upon the original seizure alone, but must show that the act of restoration to the plaintiff in March 1860 was unauthorized and inoperative. That the restoration of the property by Mr. Plowden was not without legal operation with regard to a third party, one of the public, for the reasons that the Government did not establish any official department for dealing with the immovables of the conquered city of Delhi ; from the first the Deputy Commissioner, ex officio exercised no little control over the questions relating to the immovables and the disposal of them ; the general attachments of September 1857 and January 1858 were effected by the Deputy Commissioner ; the order of the Governor-General (No. 848) to the Commissioner was sent by the latter to the Deputy Commissioner, who seemed as much authorized to carry it out as the Commissioner, there being no organized department to which it was issued, no instructions from the Government of the Punjab as to the mode of carrying out the intention of the Governor-General, and no system of application for sanction in cases of restoration of property. That if Mr. Plowden exceeded his authority, the Government tacitly consented to and acquiesced in his act, as it was not to be presumed that for the space of a year the Government remained ignorant of what was done, while the plaintiff had, to a certain extent, brought home to the Government actual notice of the restoration of the property when he applied for leave to travel. That plaintiff was therefore entitled to a decree, unless his suit was barred by Act IX of 1859, and that it was not so barred, for if the Act applied at all the plaintiff had not been convicted of rebellion neither had he kept out of the way to evade justice : but that Act IX did not apply to the case, as the Act contemplated property actually remaining under seizure in the hands of Government, while the plaintiff, as soon as he recovered possession in 1860, was so placed that it would have been useless, if not impossible, for him to have taken proceedings to have his title declared.

Per LINDSAY, J.—That all property was not actually confiscated in 1857, but was appropriated for a time for various reasons and liable to be forfeited. That plaintiff's property was never formally adjudged to have been forfeited nor declared forfeited on conviction, and plaintiff was entitled to a restoration of his property as soon as he was released. That it was open to doubt whether Mr. Plowden had full authority to order the restoration of the property in 1860, but that under the circumstances Government could not equitably refuse to ratify that order, and in fact did ratify it with full knowledge of the facts.

Per BOULNOIS and LINDSAY, JJ.—That the plaintiff was entitled to mesne profits for 6 years previous to date of institution of suit until he should obtain possession under the decree, the actual amount to be adjusted in 10. Resumption of rent-free lands by the British Government in 1849—Jurisdiction of Civil Courts.

Plaintiff claimed possession of a rakh which had been granted by the Maharajah Runjeet Singh to plaintiff's father. The rakh was held rent-free for the purpose, chiefly, of supplying fodder to a contingent of cavalry which the owner was bound to supply for the service of the Government. Plaintiff alleged that the rakh upon the death of his father devolved by inheritance upon his brother, who was killed at the battle of Ferozepore in arms against the British troops ; that upon his brother's death his uncle, Raja Teja Singh, took possession of the rakh as his (plaintiff's) guardian, and that a grant of it was made by the British Government, after the conquest of the territory, to Teja Singh for his life. Teja Singh died in 1863, whereupon the property was resumed by the Government. Plaintiff sued for possession of the rakh as heir of his deceased brother.

In March 1849, a proclamation was issued by the British Government, that "jagirs and all the property of Sirdars or others who had been in arms against the British should be confiscated to the State ;" and two days later (31st March 1849) a Board of Administration was constituted, with special directions with respect to rent-free lands. Those directions stated that "by our occupation of the country, after the whole Sikh nation had been in arms against us, we have acquired the absolute right of conquerors, and would be justified in declaring every acre of land liable to Government assessment. There is no reason why we should maintain in perpetuity an alienation of the Government revenues which would not have been maintained by the power we have succeeded. All grants were resumed by the Sikh rulers at will, without reference to the terms of the grant. On the death of the grantor, they lapsed as a matter of course. Every holder of rent-free land, who is confirmed in his tenure by the Government, must yield up every document in his possession which entitled him to the exemption from revenue, and a grant must be given to him under the Board's seal, &c., declaring that the grant is "a free gift of the British Government."

Held (affirming the judgment of the Chief Court—See Punjab Record for 1875, Privy Council, p. 7, Note), that the Governor-General made as an act of State, a tabular rasa of these rent-free tenures, and that the grant to Teja Singh was made in pursuance of the right of conquest referred to in the proclamation, and was an act of State not questionable by any Municipal Court. ACT OF STATE—contd.

Chenab and Pulkhu rivers at Wazirabad for the years 1870-74, the leases entitling him to collect all tolls. He sued the defendant for damages, for that the Government in constructing that part of the Northern State Railway which crossed the Chenab and Pulkhu, had established their own ferry and by that means conveyed their material trucks and employés across those rivers.

Held, that the rights to establish a ferry and take tolls were State rights; but that plaintiff's suit was cognizable by a Municipal Court, as the Government had, by Regulation III of 1793 submitted, in regard to such a suit, to the jurisdiction of the Courts; and that the submission was not abrogated or taken away, as to the Punjab Courts, by the repeal of the Regulation by Act IV of 1872.

Held, upon the facts, that as the Railway Department had used the plaintiff's ferry as far as they possibly could, and had used their own ferry for carrying plant and materials which were too heavy for the plaintff's boats or bridges, and for carrying men and materials to places in the river to which plaintiff's ferry did not go, a cause of action had not been made out. SUJAN SINGH v. THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA IN COUNCIL. 56 P R 1876

12. Jurisdiction of British Courts to re-open executive orders of Foreign States.

The defendants entered into a timber contract with the Bahawalpur State, the plaintiff being surety for its due performance. The Bahawalpur State cancelled the contract, as it considered that there had been a breach on the part of the defendants, and plaintiff was compelled to pay to the State the amount of advances made, to the defendants, which had not been worked off. Plaintiff thereupon sued to recover from defendants the sum he had been compelled to pay as their surety to the Bahawalpur State. The defendants pleaded that there had been no breach of contract on their part with the Bahawalpur State, and that, therefore, thay were not liable, the plaintiff having wrongfully paid that State. The order rescinding the contract and compelling the plaintiff to pay was an executive one, passed by the Political Agent and Superintendent of Bahawalpur, and was an order which the plaintiff could not disobey.

Held (Boulnois, J., dissenting) that the order of the Superintendent of Bhawalpur which found a breach of contract was conclusive between the parties, and could not be questioned by the British Courts, and that the plaintiff having under that order been compelled as surety to refund advances made to defendants was equitably entitled to recover.

Per Boulnois, J.—The Courts of one country have never done more than recognize judgments of the Courts of another country as, under some circumstances, conclusive, and no committee requires that executive orders should be treated as conclusive in regard to facts proper for establishment.

Held, therefore, that the British Courts were bound to enquire into and decide the question whether or not there had been a breach of contract, the order of the Superintendent not being conclusive.

Held further, that the defendants not having committed any breach, the plantiff could not recover, the payment by him not having been rightfully made, notwithstanding that the order of the Superintendent of the Bahawalpur State was supposed by that officer to be right and by the plaintiff to be irresistible. SUJAN SINGH v. HARDYAL SINGH. 36 P R 1877

13. Jurisdiction of British Courts to take cognizance of an act done by a Foreign State in the exercise of its Sovereign powers and not professing to be justified by Municipal Law.

14 Act of State—Act done in exercise of Sovereign powers—Jurisdiction of Civil Courts.

Plaintiffs purchased certain standing trees in Ghund State from the Rana of Ghund. They felled the trees and brought over the timber to Sanjoli, a village in the Koti State. The Superintendant of the Hill States, acting under the authority of rule 8 of the rules regarding the conservancy of forests in the Simla Hill States which had been sanctioned by the Punjab Government on the 5th February 1904, confiscated the timber, it not having been marked by the State Forest Official with the State hammer mark as required by said rule, and sold it by auction for Rs. 5,115.

Thereupon the plaintiff sued in the Court of the District Judge of Simla for the restitution of the timber or for its value.

Held, that the act complained of having been passed by the Superintendent of the Hill States in his political capacity in respect of the property of a Foreign State in foreign territory was an Act of State, and as such was not liable to be questioned in a Municipal Court in British India. The fact that an Act of State, directed towards a foreign state, and done in foreign territory affected indirectly a subject of the state doing the Act, did not prevent that act from being an Act of State. ADHLAPI TENURE.

1. Adhlapi transaction—Sale—Punjab Laws Act, section 9.

Held, that a transfer of half a well with the land attached thereto in adhlapi tenure, i. e., in proprietary right in consideration of the transferee restoring a ruined well and paying a cash premium, is a sale within the meaning of section 9 of the Punjab Laws Act, so as to be subject to the right of pre-emption. See ALSO NOTE TO THE SAME RULING.

2. Adhlapidar—Agreement—Custom.

In a suit to establish occupancy rights in half a well, it appeared that the well in suit was sunk under the adhlapi custom, by which the sinker becomes owner of half the well and cultivator of the other half, the proprietary right in which belongs to the original owner of the land. The plaintiff's claim related to the latter or proprietor's half, of which it appeared he had held possession for 50 years, during which period he had cleared the, waste, and otherwise incurred charges for the improvement of the land.

3. Adhlapi tenure—Construction of deed of grant—Declaratory decree.

According to the terms of certain deeds of grant, executed more than forty years before suit by the father of defendant in favour of plaintiffs' ancestors, portions of a large tract of waste land were conveyed to the grantees on condition of their breaking up the waste, bringing it under cultivation and constructing embankments for storage of water, it being provided that on fulfilment of these conditions one-half of the area in each case was to become the property of the grantees. In the Revenue papers the latter were, in each instance, shown as proprietors, half and half, of the land.

Held, that according to the terms of the deeds of grant and the entries in the Revenue papers, plantiffs were adhlapidars and full proprietors of the lands concerned. S. BAHADUR KHAN v. JIWAN. 27 P R 1899

ADJUSTMENT OF DECREE OUT OF COURT.

1. Adjustment out of Court.—A obtained a decree against 'B' in a Civil suit, and subsequently B instituted Criminal proceedings against A for Criminal breach of trust. In consideration of B's withdrawing this prosecution. A gave B a receipt purporting to acknowledge payment by the latter to the former of Rs. 16,120, the amount of the decree mentioned. C, a servant of B, filed this receipt in the Court whose duty it was to execute the decree and the Court recorded an adjustment of the decree. Afterwards, A applied for execution of the decree, which was refused.

Held, that as it was found to be a fact that A authorized or permitted the receipt to be filed as a certificate of adjustment of the decree, the adjustment could not be questioned. RUTTONJEE CURSETJEE BUTTLEBHOY v. HORMUSJEE COWASJEE. 1 P R 1870

Kishen Chand was liable, as surety, for the payment of the amount of a certain money decree. The decree-holder gave Kishen Chand, out of Court, a receipt for Rs. 1,150, stating in the receipt that the matter was settled as far as Kishen Chand was concerned. Subsequently the judgment-creditor applied for execution against Kishen Chand for the full amount of the dceree, Rs. 1,350. Kishen Chand produced the receipt in Court with a view to stay execution, and the judgment-creditor on being questioned, admitted he had signed the receipt, but urged that he had done so because Kishen Chand threatened to become bankrupt. The Court disallowed execution against Kishen Chand.

Held, that the adjustment was virtually certified to the Court under section 206, Act VIII of 1859, and that the order of the lower Court was correct. BHOWANI DASS v. KISHEN CHAND. 32 P R 1871

Plaintiff sued on a bond executed by defendant in satisfaction of a decree passed in favour of plaintiff's husband.

Held, that the suit was not liable to be dismissed in accordance with the last sentence of section 258 of the Civil Procedure Code because plaintiff had failed to certify satisfaction of the decree to the Court, as the decree having been superseded by a valid contract between the parties, there was no reason why plaintiff should not sue on the new bond. 7. Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882*), section* 258*—Suit to recover money paid in satisfaction of decree, but not certified to the Court by the decree-holder.*

Held, by the Full Bench, that the language of the last clause of section 258 of the Civil Procedure Code does not exclude a suit to recover the money paid to a decree-holder and not applied in satisfaction of the decree, because he failed to certify the payment to the Court whose duty it was to execute the decree, as the words "any Court" in the above clause are to be construed as restricted to the Court executing the decree, and the Courts having jurisdiction over the execution proceedings as such. ADMINISTRATION OF INSOLVENTS' ESTATE.

Administration of Insolvents' estate—Punjab Laws Act, 1872, section 27, Imperial Act of Parliament 11 and 12, Vict. C. 21—Conflict of jurisdiction between two Courts having insolvency jurisdiction—Proceedings under Punjab Laws Act—Vesting order under Imperial Act, effect of.

On 12th December 1906 a firm of traders carrying on their business at Amritsar and other places in the Punjab and also at Bombay were, on the application of a creditor, declared insolvent by the Insolvency Court, Amritsar, and a receiver of their property was appointed on the same date under section 27 of the Punjab Laws Act. On 31st May 1907, certain other creditors applied to the Bombay High Court in its insolvency jurisdiction praying that the said traders be adjudicated insolvent under 11 and 12 Vict. C. 21. This application was granted and at the same time a vesting order vesting the property of the insolvent in the Official Assignee, was passed. On this the Official Assignee applied to the Amritsar Insolvency Court to abstain from realizing the property of the insolvents and asked that the property be made over to him. This was refused on the ground that the property in the Punjab had vested in a receiver appointed by the Court, and that there was, therefore, no property in the Punjab upon which the subsequent vesting order of the Bombay High Court could take effect. This order was confirmed by the Chief Court on revision, on the ground that the property vested in the Court itself, though not in the receiver. On appeal by the Official Assignee to the Privy Council, Held, that under section 27 of the Punjab Laws Act, 1872, what is entrusted to the Punjab Court is merely administration, and that under that Act no transfer of property takes place.

Held, also that under the Imperial Acts 11 and 12, Vict. C. 21 when an adjudication is made by the High Court the estate of the insolvent vests in the Official Assignee, and he is the person to administer it. THE OFFICIAL ASSIGNEE, BOMBAY, v. THE REGISTRAR, SMALL CAUSE COURT, AMRITSAR.

Held, that G. S.'s wife having no legal power to effect the mortgage, defendant's title was defective ab initio, and had not been cured by long possession, and that plaintiff was entitled to possession without paying off the mortgage debt. KISHEN SINGH v. THOOLA SINGH. 2 P R 1863

4. Lahore City wall.

The Sikh Government exercised the power of turning out occupiers of houses erected on land within 30 feet of the Lahore city wall, but the British Government having failed to assert its right to control the alienation of the land from date of annexation until the present suit, a period of 21 years, and there being nothing to show that the occupation of the land was permissive, the Chief Court held that the land had been held adversely, and that the Government had lost its right. THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA IN COUNCIL v. SOWAYA RAM. 56 P R 1871

5. Minority—Limitation—Dakhil-kharij.

In 1857, plaintiff, then 15 years of age, was sued by C, the father of defendant, for Rs. 25 on account of revenue due on the plaintiff's moiety of a well, the defendant's father being proprietor of the other moiety. Plaintiff, being unable to pay, stated before the Peshkar of the Tahsil that he had surrendered his share in the well to C, who gave in a razinamah to the effect that he had abandoned his claim for Rs. 25 in consideration of plaintiff giving him his share in the well and lands. This agreement was ratified by the Deputy Commissioner on the 26th August, 1857, and, plaintiff consenting, C took possession of the entire well and lands, dakhil-kharij however not being effected or applied for. In 1871, plaintiff sued for the half-share of which he was still recorded proprietor.

Held, that the possession of C (and through him, of the defendant) of plaintiff's half share had been adverse since 1857, and that consequently plaintiff's suit was barred by limitation.

Per MELVILL, J.—Dakhil-kharij is merely an administrative act–a record of an accomplished fact; and its performance or omission neither creates nor destroys a right. PATHAN v. SHEIKH AHMED. 34 P R 1872

6. Suit to establish right to land, based upon adverse possession for upwards of twelve years. –

Plaintiffs sued to have their right declared to the possession of certain land, and the settlement record altered in their favour alleging that they had held adverse possession for thirteeny ears.

Held, by the Chief Court (over-ruling the orders of the lower Courts), that adverse possession was not merely a good ground of plea in bar of a suit, but was also a good ground of action when plaintiff claimed to have his title declared and recorded. KARIM KHAN v. BAHADAR KHAN. 48 P R 1872

7. Makkhan, plaintiff, was son of Hassan. Kandhal, defendant, was grandson of Hassan, and son of Sulehman, who died during the mutiny; Hassan died some years later. Plaintiff sued for his father's shares of Sulehman's landed property.

Held, that if Hassan did not take possession at Sulehman's death, limitation then began to run against the plaintiff; but if Hassan did take possession, plaintiff's cause of action arose when Hassan died. MAKKHAN v. KANDHAL. 2 P R 1873

8. Decree for possession of land unexecuted—Subsequent suit by plaintiff for possession—Fresh cause of action—Adverse possession of defendant.

Plaintiff in 1855 obtained a decree for possession of certain land on the ground that defendant's possession of it was permissive. This decree was never executed. He again sued in 1874 for possession, alleging, inter alia, that he had, within twelve years of suing, removed one of the four trees on the land.

Held, that plaintiff's allegation as to removing the tree was not proved, and therefore defendant's possession, since the decree of 1855, had been undisturbed and adverse, and plaintiff's suit would not lie. BURA v. JOWAHIRA. 53 P R 1875

9. Arrears of revenue—Lease or Farm.

In 1856, plaintiff being unable to pay the Government revenue, his land was leased to the defendant for fifteen years (to the close of the settlement), it being recorded by the Collector conferring the lease that at the end of fifteen years plaintiff would be entitled to recover his land. The defendant fell into arrears, and a lease was given to S. This was after the mutiny had broken out. A short time subsequently the land was restored to the defendant. Plaintiff sued for possession of the land in 1874, and defendant pleaded that from the time the land was given back to him after the mutiny, he held it in proprietary possession adversely to the plaintiff.

Held, that defendant's possession had not been adverse, and plaintiff was entitled to recover the land. SARFARAZ ALI v. ASAD ALI. 63 P R 1875

10. Gift by Hindu widow—Suit by daughter for possession of property gifted—Adverse possession by donee.

Plaintiff sued for possession of land held by her mother, M. R., a Hindu widow, holding apparently on a life tenure. The first Court, —the Commissioner, on appeal, concurring,— dismissed the suit as barred by limitation, on the ground that defendant had held adverse possession of the land for 19 or 20 years under a deed of gift from M. R.

M. R. was the elder of two widows of Misr Ramji, the original owner of the property, and she died eight years before this suit was instituted.

Held, reversing the orders of the Courts below, that the claim was not barred by limitation, as the plaintiff's right to sue only arose on the death of her mother M. R., and it was not competent to the defendant, who admittedly held by virtue of a gift from M. R., to plead that his possession was adverse during her lifetime. MUSSAMMAT JAI DEVI v. SHIB DYAL. 15 P R 1879

11. Widow in possession of life interest in her husband's property.

A widow, while she herself retains possession of property in which she has a life interest, cannot by merely asserting an absolute proprietary title, in course of time acquire such title by prescription against the reversionary heirs of her husband who are not entitled to receive possession till the widow's death. MUSSAMMAT ANAND KOUR v. SODI NARINDAN SINGH. 83 P R 1881

12. Adverse possession—title.

The rule laid down by the Privy Council in GUNGA GOBIND MANDAL v. THE COLLECTOR OF THE 24 PARGUNNAHS (12 Moo. I. A. 345), decided in 1867, that as between private owners the law has established a limitation of 12 years, after which time it declares not simply that the remedy is barred, but that the title is extinct in favour of the possessor, is consistent with the law as contained in the Limitation Act, 1877, and applies equally to cases where the possession still continues and where it has been terminated. DAYA RAM v. BADRI MAL. 16 P R 1886

13. Adverse possession—Mortgagee in possession—Adverse possession as regards mortgagee, effect of, upon rights of mortgagor.

Held, that inasmuch as a mortgagor, who has transferred possession of the mortgaged land to the mortgagee, has no right to possession thereof until he has redeemed the mortgage, the possession of a third party, though adverse as regards the mortgagee whom he has ousted, does not, when unaccompanied by further acts of aggression upon the mortgagor's rights, give any cause of action to the latter during the continuance of the mortgage, and that, therefore, the burden of proving that his possession was adverse as against the mortgagor no less than as against the mortgagee rests upon such third party. I. R. L., XVIII BOM. 51, followed.

Held, upon the facts of the case, that defendants had failed to prove that their possession was adverse as against the plaintiff-mortgagor. KHANU MAL v. KHAN MUHAMMAD. 6 P R 1898

14. Limitation Act, 1877, schedule II, article 144—Adverse possession.

By a mortgage entered into between the plaintiff's ancestors and defendant, Kaka, in 1879, it was agreed that the whole amount should be repaid by instalments, and in default of payment of any instalment, the possession of the mortgaged property was to be taken by the mortgagee. In 1885 the mortgagor sold a certain portion of the mortgaged property to defendants 1 and 2, and in 1886 the mortgagee sued the mortgagor for possession without making the first two defendant parties to that suit and obtained a decree in 1886 for possession, but never got actual possession. Subsequent to the decree the mortgagor sold the remainder of the mortgaged property to the other defendants. In 1895 the mortgagee's heirs filed the present suit for possession of the land.

Held, that as the period for plaintiff's claim as regards the first two defendants could only be reckoned from the date of the original default in payment of instalment under the mortgage-deed of 1879, which could not have been later than 1882, and they having been in possession at the time of the prior suit to which they were not made parties and were therefore not bound by that decree and as with respect to that portion of the land, the mortgagor had no right, title or interest left in it subsequent to their sale in 1895, the suit was barred by limitation. But as regards those defendants who acquired their title subsequent to the decree of 1886 against the mortgagor that decree stands against them and they can claim no title by adverse possession, the suit having been instituted within twelve years from their obtaining possession. 15. Adverse possession—Joint owners, landlord and tenant—Non-payment of rent—Burden of proof—Limitation Act, 1877, schedule II, article 142.

The plaintiffs as proprietors sued for the possession of half the area of three wells in which the defendant who was owner of the other half share was occupancy tenant. The land having been washed away by the action of the river re-appeard in 1880. Since then the defendant got himself recorded as proprietor of the whole of the land, and had paid no produce to the plaintiffs, although there had been some partial cultivation by his tenants. The defendant resisted the claim, and raised a plea of adverse possession for more than twelve years.

Held, that although the defendant got his name recorded as proprietor of land, of which he was only occupancy tenant, there was nothing to show that plaintiffs were aware of the entry, and the fact of the defendants being owner of the other half of the land would afford no notice of an adverse claim, there being no alteration in the apparent character of the defendant's possession from which plaintiffs could become aware that

A plaintiff who had sued for possession of his share of certain immovable property left by his paternal grandfather having no right of inheritance under his personal law (his father having predeceased his grandfather) relied on a testamentary document under which his title, together with the defendants, originated some twenty-eight years before suit, but was unable to prove any possession of the property in dispute, either actual or constructive, held, that the onus of proof that his claim was within time being on him, and he having failed to prove jointness of possession, the suit must be held barred under Article 144 of the Limitation Act. 20. Adverse possession—Possession adverse to reversioner—Suit by more remote reversioners on death of such reversioner.

Held, that a person who has held possession of agricultural land adversely against the next reversioner of a deceased proprietor is competent, in a suit for possession, to set up such adverse possession against the more remote reversioners. KAKA v. LABH CHAND. 106 P R 1906

21. Adverse possession—Possession of widow in lieu of maintenance.

Held, that the mere fact that a widow of a predeceased son entitled to maintenance from the estate of her father-in-law had been in possession of the latter's estate for a long time would not in the absence of an assertion of any rival rights or pretention to adverse possession by her, raise the ordinary presumption that she had been in possession adversely to the real heir: especially where there was evidence that she had been in possession with the consent of the distant reversioners in lieu of maintenance. BURA MAL v. NARAIN DAS. 102 P. R. 1907

22. Adverse possession—Mortgage—Conditional sale—Void decree in foreclosure suit.

Held, that a mortgagee by conditional sale cannot, by obtaining a decree in and illegal foreclosure suit, or by asserting himself to be the proprietor and thereby obtaining mutation to that effect in his favour, alter the character of his original title, nor can he rely on a possession adverse to the mortgagor to deprive him of his right to redeem the property. INDAR v. ASA SINGH. 65 P R 1908

23. Occupancy rights, resumption of—Suit by landlord for, on the death of the widow of a deceased tenant—Competency of person holding under widow to plead adverse possession.

Held, that in a suit to resume land held on an occupancy tenure, instituted immediately after the death of the widow of the tenant, it is not competent for the person holding under the widow as her successor to set up adverse possession, based on mutation of names effected in his favour during the widow's lifetime, which had been unsuccessfully objected to by the predecessors in title of the plaintiffs, or subsequent long and uninterrupted enjoyment of the tenure. The landlords were not bound to sue until after the widow's death, as her occupancy rights could have been successfully pleaded against a suit for possession, and where lapse of time does not ipso facto create a right of adverse possession. GANDA SINGH v. KAIM. KHAN. 60 P R 1908

24. Indian Limitation Act, 1877, articles 142, 144—Absentee—Adverse possession in joint holding.

Where plaintiffs-absentees had, 29 years before the present suit for possession, brought a suit for a declaration that they were co-sharers, the cause of action being, that in consequence of the hoodwinking of the patwari by a defendant, the former had omitted plaintiffs' names from the list of proprietors in the naqsha girdawari (which suit was dismissed in default without defendants being summoned).

Held, that the conduct of the defendants which led to the previous suit, amounted to an overt act of dispossession and denial of title and so set limitation running, and that the defendants' possession was adverse, though ordinarily the possession of a sharer is the possession of his co-sharer. NAND SINGH v. NATHA SINGH. 86 P R 1909

25. Adverse possession—alienation by widow not challenged by nearest reversioner—suit for possession by remote reversioner after death of nearest reversioner—Limitation Act 1908, Section 2 (8), Schedule II, Articles 140, 141, 142, 144.

The last male owner of agricultural land died leaving a widow, who died in 1876, and a mother who died in 1892. The widow, without necessity, had alienated, part of the land and had placed the alienee in possession. The nearest reversioner B, great grandson of K., the great grand father of the last male owner, died in 1903, without challenging the alienation or expressly assenting to it. The descendants of the brother of K. sued in 1909 the heirs of the alienee for possession of the land alienated. The question submitted to the Full Bench was whether plaintiffs' suit was within time.

Held, following the principles underlying 18 P. R. 1895, F. B. and dissenting from 106 P. R. 1906 that the claim was not barred under Article 144 of the Limitation Act, 1908, inasmuch as the plaintiffs' right to sue for possession was not derived from or through B, (vide definition of " plaintiff " in section 2 (8) of the Act), and consequently the defendants' possession, though adverse to B, could not be adverse to the plaintiffs until after his death, when their right to possession accrued.

In a suit against the defendant, a Barrister, to recover from him a sum of money alleged to have been deposited by the plaintiff, his client, under an agreement that the defendant should only retain the money in the event of his winning the plaintiff's case which as plaintiff alleged had not happened, the Lower Court held the suit not to be maintainable against the defendant by reason of his privilege as a Barrister.

Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to a decision on the merits of the case : that the claim was one to recover back from a stakeholder money deposited with him to be paid over on the happening of a contingency which, according to the plaintiff had never occurred and that it was immaterial that in the present case the defendant was the plaintiff's Advocate as well as the stake-holder, as if he had in the latter capacity, without the occurrence of the contingency specified handed over to himself in the capacity of Advocate money which ex hypothesi he should have returned to the plaintiff, he could not set up as a sufficient answer to the plaintiff's claim his character of Advocate and the receipt by him of the money in that capacity. 8. Advocate and client—Suit for recovery of sum of money deposited with Advocate to abide certain event—Stakeholder—Privilege of Barrister.

Plaintiff sued on the allegation that he had engaged the services of the defendant, who was an Advocate of the Chief Court, in a certain criminal case and had deposited a sum of money with the defendant on the condition that, if the accused in the criminal case were released, the defendant should be entitled to retain the deposit, otherwise it should be returned to plaintiff; that the accused had not been released and the defendant had, nevertheless, retained the deposit. The Judge, Small Cause Court, dismissed his claim on the sole ground that " defendant being an Advocate of the Chief Court, the suit would not lie against him "

Held, that no question of the privilege of an Advocate arose in this case, inasmuch as the defendant was sued merely as a stakeholder who was bound to refund the deposit to the depositor if the event upon which alone he was authorized to retain the money had not occurred.

Plaintiff, who was a Barrister-at-Law and enrolled as an Advocate of the Chief Court and practising in the Punjab as such Advocate, sued in respect of fees for services rendered in his capacity as an Advocate and for services ancillary thereto.

Held, by a majority of the Full Bench (Frizelle, Stogdon and Chatterji, JJ.) that the suit was not maintainable, as the plaintiff was incapacitated from making a contract of hiring as an Advocate by the usage and constitution of his Bar.

Held, per Roe and Rivaz, JJ., contra, that the suit was maintainable, as no such incapacity attached to the plaintiff.

In a suit for declaration of title to property, the Court has a discretionary power to award to the successful party by way of counsel's fee a sum not exceeding that provided for by Rule 3 of the Rules regulating counsel's fees in subordinate Courts, and the fact that the suit has eventually been referred to arbitration does not limit the discretion so allowed to the Court. 11. Advocate and client—Advocate's fee—Suit or money deposited with Advocate—Revision—finding of fact by Small Cause Court.

Plaintiff sued on the allegation that he had retained defendant as counsel for defending a certain appeal in the Chief Court on the terms that he was to be paid Rs. 50 as his advance fee and a similar sum as his back-fee on his winning the case; that subsequently he deposited Rs. 200 with defendant, on the understanding that he was to retain Rs. 150 as his back-fee in the event of success, the remainder being the back-fee for another counsel on the same terms; that the said case was lost and that defendant refused to return the Rs. 150. Defendant, in answer to the claim, admitted his liability to refund the Rs. 50, but pleaded that as respects the balance of Rs. 150 there was an arrangement between him and plaintiff by which he was allowed to retain it as his advance-fee for filing an application for review of judgment in the case which had been lost; that he was ready and willing to file the said application, but that plaintiff had engaged some one else to do the work. Defendant, therefore, contended that no suit lay for refund of the Rs. 150, as he was a barrister. The Judge of the Small Cause Court found that defendant had failed to prove the argument set up, and decreed the claim, less a deduction of Rs. 50, which he allowed the defendant on equitable grounds for the trouble which he might have taken in thinking out the grounds of review, though none had been actually drawn up, and no copy of the judgment of the Chief Court applied for or obtained.

Held, that the award of Rs. 50 must be disallowed, and plaintiff's claim decreed without any deduction. KIRPA RAM v. SARDAR KRISHNA SINGH.

Held, that although any action taken as a private individual in the prosecution of a case or the setting up of a defence would not, under ordinary circumstances, justify a Court in taking notice of such action as a breach of professional good conduct merely because the individual concerned happened to be an advocate, yet conduct which is in itself indefensible and amounts to gross misconduct in an advocate is not taken out of the purview of section 41 of the Legal Practitioners Act by a mere colourable pretence that it is as the conduct of a suitor or accused in that capacity. 8. Ala Lambardar—Rule 3, Punjab Government Notification No. 883, 25*th June* 1872.

Upon the death of the chief headman or ala lambardar, the candidates for the office were M. B. (the eldest son of the deceased), H. B., B.; and M.—H. B. polled 645 votes; B polled 562, and M. B. 548. The Deputy Commissioner confirmed the election of H. B., after which B and M gave in their adhesion to M. B.

Held, (reversing the orders of the Deputy Commissioner and Commissioner) that, though the office of chief headman was not hereditary, it was desirable to appoint the son if he were not inferior to the other candidates; and that there was not such a preponderance of votes in favour of H. B. as warranted his being appointed over the head of M. B. MIRAN BAKSH v. HAYAT BAKSH. 5 P R 1873 Rev.

9. Chief Lambardar, office of—Grant at Settlement—Rights in land thus allotted.

Plaintiff, the chief lambardar of the village, sued for the produce of certain land set apart at Settlement for his remuneration. The defendants in the suit were the tenant, who cultivated the land on condition of paying half the produce to plaintiff, and the proprietors of the land, to whom such produce had actually been paid, instead of to plaintiff. One of the pleas urged by the defendants was, that the rights of the proprietors were not affected by the grant made at Settlement, which only extended to the revenue assessed on the land.

Held, that the allotment of a plot of common land to a Chief Lambardar by way of remuneration for his services to the village was usually a matter of arrangement by the Settlement Officer in consultation with the village community and with their consent, and that, while it was usual to make over the land to the Chief Lambardar and to allow him to cultivate it for his own benefit without payment of revenue or malikana, this was not necessarily always the case, and, therefore, the terms upon which any particular grant was made must be gathered from the circumstances of the particular case.

Held, further, that by the terms of the grant in this case, the Chief Lambardar was entitled to realize from the cultivator what the proprietors could have realized: i. e., he was not merely the mafidar of the land, but also entitled to take the rent or the proprietor's share of the produce.

The office of Chief Lambardar, and the correspondence relating thereto, considered. GURBAKSH SINGH v. QUTBUDDIN.

10. Chief Lambardarship—Succession.

The real meaning of Revenue Judgment No. 5 of Punjab Record for 1873 is, that in cases of succession to the Chief lambardarship where both candidates are equally fit and the votes nearly equal, the preference should be given to a son of the deceased Chief Lambardar.

Where the son of the deceased Chief Lambardar secured the most votes, but it appeared that the other candidate was the older Lambardar and otherwise fit, the Financial Commissioner (reversing the order of the Commissioner, and upholding that of the Deputy Commissioner) maintained the appointment of the latter candidate. JOWAHIR SINGH v. GURDIT SINGH. 6 P R 1880 Rev.

11. Chief lambardarship—Procedure where lambardarship and sarpanchship are both vacant—Separate enquiries.

Held, by the Financial Commissioner, that the questions of the succession to the office of lambardar, and to that of sarpanch or chief headman, are two separate matters for which separate procedures are laid down in the rules, and which, therefore, should not be decided simultaneously. All vacant lambardarships should be separately filled up before a sarpanch is appointed, and there should be a separate file for the appointment of the sarpanch. PHALLU v. KALU.
9 P R 1881 Rev.

12. Chief lambardarship—Succession—Questions for consideration when votes are nearly equal.

Held by the Financial Commissioner, that in cases of succession to the chief lambardarship, when the votes are nearly equal, the preference should be given to the son of the deceased chief lambardar, provided he is otherwise fit for the post.

The son of the last chief lambardar appointed, in a case where the difference in the number of votes obtained by the rival candidates was not great; where both the parties appeared equally fit, and where it appeared that the full proprietors of the villages, 10 in number, all supported the claim of the son of the deceased, while the 14 persons who voted for the other claimant were merely proprietors of their own holdings. 13. Chief lambardarship—Mode of weighing value of the voting.

Held, by the Financial Commissioner, that in weighing the votes obtained by rival candidates for a chief lambardarship, regard should always be had to the stake the voters have in the village, and due allowance be made for this. SHER MUHAMMAD v. PIRANDITTA.

8 P R 1885 Rev.

14. Chief lambardarship—Succession—Right of claimant who has obtained substantial majority of votes.

In a case relating to the succession to the office of chief lambardar, it appeared that the Commissioner had reversed the order of the Deputy Commissioner, under which the candidate, who obtained 22 votes, representing Rs. 254 of revenue, was appointed and had appointed the rival candidate who obtained 15 votes, representing Rs. 228 of revenue, holding that the difference was slight, and that as the respondent was the son of the late chief lambardar, he should be appointed.

Held, reversing the order of the Commissioner, that a majority of 7 votes over 15 votes was hardly a slight difference, and the difference of revenue was substantial, and that the appellant, who headed the poll by the above majority of votes, and who was described by the Deputy Commissioner as by far the most capable man in the village, and who was also strongly recommended for the post by the Tahsildar, should be appointed. 15. Chief lambardar—Succession—Preference to be given to son of deceased where votes nearly equal.

In cases of succession to the office of chief lambardar, when the votes are nearly equal, the preference should be given to the son of the deceased chief lambardar, provided he is otherwise fit for the post. Held, that this view was untenable. The considerations to be followed in appointing a chief headman are those stated in Rule 31 subject to this qualification that no special regard should be paid to hereditary claims (Rule 38). LABH SINGH v. JUALA SINGH.

17. Chief lambardar—Minority.

The duties of chief lambardar should be discharged in person and not by deputy, and therefore a minor should not ordinarily be appointed. 1 P. R., 1886, Rev., followed. MEHR v. CHANNU. 7 P R 1891 Rev.

18. Grant of land to office of ala lambardar—Suit for dispossession of such ala lambardar by proprietors—Tenant.

The Lower Courts having granted plaintiff a decree dispossessing defendant from certain land which had at the previous settlement been assigned to him rent-free in virtue of his office of ala lambardar, defendant applied to the Financial Commissioner's Court on the revision side on the ground that his possession of such land not being that of a "tenant" could not be disturbed by the proprietors of the land so long as he remained ala lambardar.

Held, upholding the orders of the Lower Courts, that an arrangement whereby the village proprietors allow an ala lambardar in virtue of his office to cultivate, free of rent, a piece of their common land, is one which the proprietors are at liberty to revoke at any time, should they insist on so doing either by taking back their land or demanding rent for it, and at most, could not be held to be binding on them beyond the term of the settlement current at the time. 1. Custom—Regulation XI of 1825.

Where two adjoining estates are divided by a river, questions as to proprietorship arising from accretion or dereliction by the action of the stream will be decided primarily by the well established usage of those two villages ; but if the usage be doubtful, then according to the rule laid down by Regulation XI of 1825. SHERA v. SAHIBA (53, P. R. 1867) ; CHUNGAR v. BAHADOOR SINGH (47 P. R. 1868) ; HUQ NEWAZ KHAN v. KHANUM (72 P. R. 1869) ; RAMA v. SHERE SINGH (15 P. R. 1872).

2. Identification of land—Regulation XI of 1825.

If there be no custom to the contrary land carried away to the opposite bank of the river may be followed by its owners, provided it be identifiable. RAMA v. SHERE SINGH (15 of 1872), and YOOSUF v. SIRDAR DEWA SINGH (12 of 1870).

The re-forming of land which has been removed by sudden avulsion in a river to which Regulation XI of 1825 applies, does not render the land re-claimable unless its identity is proved ; and it is not to be presumed that land lost to an owner by the erosion of the river bank is recovered when an equal quantity of land is left dry by the river taking another course. Independently of custom, a title to such re-formed land is not necessarily established by mere proof of general inclusive boundaries at a time long preceding the re-forming of the land, but if a custom is proved it is to be followed. HUQ NEWAZ KHAN v. KHANUM (72 of 1869). In CHUNGAR v. BAHADOOR SINGH (47 of 1868), the Chief Court held that land could not be identified by the laying down of survey boundaries ; the mode of identification was indicated in clause 2, section 4 of the Regulation.

3. Plaintiffs, zemindars of Mouza B, on the Sialkote side of the Chenab, sued the defendants (zemindars of Mouza M, on the Gujrat side of the river) for alluvial land situated on the Sialkote side. The parties admitted that the case was governed by section 4, Regulation XI of 1825. The land had been carried across from Mouza M, but not bodily, and its identity was destroyed. The defendants as well as the plaintiffs were entitled to take by accretion, any land which was thrown up between their land and the main stream. Another piece of land besides that in dispute had come bodily across from Mouza M to Mouza B, of which the defendants still kept possession. The land in dispute did not lie between this piece of land and the river.

Held, that plaintiffs were entitled to the land sued for. NOORDEEN v. FUTTEH ALI.

4. Custom—Kishtibunna—Alteration of custom by contract.

The parties to the suit were proprietors respectively of Mouza Soomrao and Mouza Thalee, between which the Beas flowed. From annexation up to the commencement of 1867 claims to alluvial land between villages on opposite banks of the Beas were uniformly decided by the Courts of both districts according to the Kishtibunna or deep stream rule, i. e., the transfer both of proprietary right and of cultivating possession followed the transfer of the land from one bank of the deep stream to the other, and this change of property and cultivation took place even when the land was transferred bodily to the opposite bank by a sudden change in the course of the river which did not carry away the surface of the ground or destroy its identity. On the 5th February 1867, a meeting was convened by the Deputy Commissioner at Noushera Ghat of the zaildars of other villages similarly situated, but none of the lambardars or proprietors of either Soomrao or Thalee were present at this meeting. From the answers of the zaildars thus assembled to questions put in reference to the Kishtibunna rule, it appeared that the rule had existed from time immemorial. The zaildars agreed that the rule was bad and should be abrogated ; and they put their seals and signatures to a document agreeing to lay down boundaries for themselves which they would abide by in future irrespective of changes in the course of the river.

Held, that the custom of Kishtibunna was established, and that it governed this case ; and that the agreement of the 5th February 1867 was not in any away binding upon the parties to the suit.

Held also, that the custom of Kishtibunna could be altered by contract between the parties interested, i. e., proprietors of two coterminous villages on opposite banks. SODHA v. FUTTEH KHAN. 56 P R 1869

5. Plaintiff's village was on the west side of an old bed of the river Indus, and this old bed was made the eastern boundary of the plaintiff's village long after the river had changed its course, in proceedings taken in 1859. Defendant had for many years cultivated the land situated between this old bed and the main stream. Plaintiff in this suit claimed this land on the ground that it had accreted to his village by change of the course of the river.

Held, that under the circumstances the question was not one of alluvion and diluvion, but one of boundaries only. MULLICK SOHARA v. GHOLAM MAHOMED. 23 P R 1869

6. River boundaries between British and Independent Territory.

With regard to river boundaries between British and independent territory, in the case of alluvion, the main stream forms the boundary irrespective of other circumstances ; but in cases of avulsion, the boundary question should in each case be determined on its own merits. YOOSUF v. SIRDAR DEWA SINGH. 12 P R 1870

7. Submersion.

Village Kalu-wal was entirely submerged about nine years before suit, and the river (Sutlej) flowed along the boundary of village Ajayab Singh-wala, cutting away a portion of that village. Three years before suit, land began to re-appear as the river receded from village Ajayab Singh-wala. To this land plaintiff laid claim, alleging that it formed a part of village Kalu-wal. The Lower Courts found that the land was identified as having belonged to village Kalu-wal, and that by custom plaintiff (proprietor of the village) was entitled to it.

The Chief Court (Lindsay and Melvill, JJ.) remanded the case, not being satisfied with the evidence as to the custom, and holding that by law the land belonged to village Ajayab Singh-wala, and that, if it belonged by custom to village Kalu-wal, still village Ajayab Singh-wala was entitled to a portion of the land equivalent to that which it had lost.

Found, after remand (by Boulnois and Lindsay, JJ.), that by custom as well as law plaintiff had no right to the land. SHERE SINGH v. KALU. 7 P R 1873

8. Hereditary cultivator.

Where land which has been submerged re-forms and forms by accretion part of a particular estate, the owner of that estate is entitled to it. This rule refers to accretions to the land cultivated by a tenant with right of occupancy and gives the tenant the right to take possession of and cultivate the land so re-forming. Such tenant has distinct rights of property, qualified though they be, in the land of which he is tenant. The fact that the land remained submerged or unclaimed for several years, held, not to affect the tenant's right ; for, though cultivating rights are lost by abandonment or voluntarily ceasing to occupy, ordinarily the only legal bar is the twelve years' limitation. 9. Hereditary cultivator.

About ten years before suit the land of the plaintiffs (hereditary cultivators) was carried away by the river, with the exception of a small piece of banjar which the plaintiffs gave up. Two years afterwards land appeared in the same place where the plaintiffs' land had been submerged and accreted to the piece of banjar. The defendants took possession of and cultivated the newly formed land, and held possession for eight years, when plaintiffs sued

Held, that plaintiffs were estopped from claiming the land, as having relinquished it. SAHIB RAI v. KHAIR SHAH (No. 19 of 1876, Civil), observed upon. BAKHTAWAR v. SULTAN AHMED. 83 P R 1876

10. Hereditary Tenants—Abandonment—Estoppel.

Where land has been submerged and forms by accretion part of a particular estate, hereditary tenants have the right to take possession of the land. Delay in taking possession or in asserting occupancy rights may operate as an equitable estoppel, and bar the claim, without regard to the law of limitation. RUTTU v. MAL SINGH.

11. Alluvial lands—Abandonment—Estoppel.

The plaintiff, an hereditary tenant, between the years 1863 and 1866, lost part of his land by the action of the river Jhelum. The land was submerged for a considerable period, and the river having receded, re-appeared in situ in 1868 and 1869. When the land re-appeared, the defendants, the proprietors, took possession and made arrangements for its cultivation. The land which was not carried away became banjar of the village, and the revenue on it was paid by plaintiff. The revenue on the land submerged was paid by defendants.

The land in dispute was, at the time of its submersion, not land bounded by a shifting river bank, but land bounded by fixed lines and susceptible of being at any moment ascertained. It was not claimed immediately on its re-appearance because tenants did not know until recently, that they retained any rights in land after it was once submerged; such non-claim was not shown to have induced the proprietor to alter his position for the worse, the fact being that both parties were under a mistaken impression as to their respective rights.

In a suit instituted by the plaintiff, a tenant, to recover the occupancy of his land recovered from the river, held by BOULNOIS, LINDSAY and FITZPATRICK, JJ.), no custom to the contrary being proved, that the tenant did not lose his occupancy rights (by reason of the land being submerged.

Held, further that the tenant had not voluntarily abandoned his land on its re-appearance.

Held, further, that under the above circumstances, the tenant was not estopped from asserting his rights merely by reason of his having stood by and allowed the proprietor to act as if those rights had been abandoned. --SULTAN KHAN v. SYAD MAHOMED SHAH.

12. Occupancy rights in alluvial lands—Jhelum river.

Found that by the custom of Mauza Kachwala, Tahsil and Zillah Shahpur, tenants with right of occupancy lose their rights in lands carried away by the action of the river, and that such rights cannot be claimed on the lands being again thrown up by the action of the river.—MIAN MAHOMED SHARAF v. KHODA BAKSH. 89 P R 1877

13. Lands gained by alluvion—Hereditary cultivators, right of, to share in—Practice—Absence of provision in wajib-ul-arz as to rights in alluvial land.

Plaintiffs, hereditary cultivators, held 16½ ploughs, and defendants, proprietors, 18 ploughs of the village of Jodhwal, the revenue of the village being assessed on ploughs. On several previous occasions plaintiffs obtained a share of the land added to the area of the village by alluvion, the revenue payable by them being proportionately increased, but there was no provision in the wajib-ul-arz or settlement papers as to the distribution of alluvial lands.

The proprietors having now refused to divide the land added by alluvion, according to former practice, plaintiffs sued for a share, alleging that they were entitled to it by the custom of the village and surrounding locality.

Held, that the practice hitherto followed, was insufficient, in the absence of express provision in the wajib-ul-arz, to raise a presumption of right in plaintiffs, hereditary cultivators, to share in the land added by alluvion, and that the proprietors were competent to object to division, discontinuing at the same time the rule to charge plaintiffs with additional revenue.—JHARRA v. KASHI RAM. 52 P R 1879

14. *Sutlej river—Lahore and Ferozepur districts—*Mauzas *Machiwara and Gholam Hoseinwala—*Kishtibunna Custom.

Certain land belonging to Mauza Gholam Hoseinwala, on the Ferozpure side of the Sutlej river, was thrown up in a recognizable form before Mauzah Machiwara on the Lahore side of the deep stream, which the proprietors claimed to retain.

Found that the Kishtibunna custom, or deep stream rule, did not prevail at the part of the Sutlej where the land in dispute was affected by the action of the river and held therefore that the original proprietors of Gholam Hoseinwala were entitled to recover the land. 15. Mafidar, Agreement at Settlement to pay batai to—Submersion of mafi land—Effect of, in respect to right of Mafidar.

Plaintiff claimed from defendants value of half produce of certain lands cultivated by the latter. Plaintiff at Settlement was recorded mafidar of 37 ghumaos 6 kanals 10 marlas of land (of which defendants were recorded proprietors, and which was cultivated in part by tenants with occupancy rights, and in part by tenants-at-will) with the right to take batai, and levied revenue accordingly, until 1869 when the land was submerged.

In 1873 a considerable portion of it re-appeared and was taken possession of by the proprietors, and had since been cultivated in part and in part used by them as grazing lands, the revenue being fixed at Rs. 10-12-0 which the defendants did not dispute their liability to pay in cash.

Held, by PLOWDEN AND SMYTH, JJ. (ELSMIE, J., dissenting) that the mutual rights and obligations of the parties survived in their integrity notwithstanding the occurrences above described, and, therefore, that plaintiff was entitled to recover the value of the half produce as claimed, until the completion of a new settlement. 16. Custom—Mauza Khairpur, Tahsil Khushab, Zillah Shahpur—Rights of hereditary cultivators in submerged lands.

Found that there is no established uniform and general custom in the Shahpur district among the villages affected by river action by which the right of occupancy of a hereditary cultivator in his holding is destroyed upon its submersion.

Where plaintiffs, who were hereditary cultivators of Mauza Khairpur, Tahsil Khushab in the Shahpur district, sued to recover, from the proprietors certain lands which had been submerged by river action and had subsequently re-appeared, held, (reversing the orders of the lower Courts), that notwithstanding an entry in the wajib-ul-arz in favour of the proprietors, no established custom was shown to exist in the village in question by which the plaintiffs had lost their hereditary right of cultivation in the lands in suit, and that, therefore, there was no obstacle to the operation of the general rule laid down by Full Bench judgment in Civil Ruling No. 59, Punjab Record for 1877, and that the plaintiffs were entitled to recover their lands. 17. *Rights of occupancy tenant in submerged land on re-appearance—Custom—*Mauzah, Chak Ramdas, Tahsil Bhera, Zillah Shahpur—Condition in wajib ul-arz.

Plaintiff, a tenant with rights of occupancy, sued to recover certain land situated in Mauza Chak Ramdas, Tahsil Bhera, in the Shahpur district, which had been submerged by river action and had subsequently re-appeared. It was found that no custom prevailed in the village in question which was opposed to plaintiff's claim, but there was a provision in the wajib-ul-arz that in cases of submersion of tenant's holdings the tenant should receive an equivalent out of the banjar hamilat, and should pay revenue to the Maliks according to the Khewat of the submerged holding. Previous to this suit the present plaintiff issued the equivalent of his share in the submerged holding to be made good out of the shamilat land but his suit was dismissed on the ground that there was no banjar shamilat to give him, and that he had not paid the revenue on the submerged holding. Subsequently the present suit was brought to recover the holding itself which had re-appeared in whole or in part from the river.

Held (following the decision in Punjab Record, Civil Ruling No. 59 of 1877), that, there being no custom to the contrary, the plaintiff's title to the right of occupancy claimed was not extinguished, but still attached to the land now that it had re-appeared: that the provision in the Wajib-ut-arz was not inconsistent with the right claimed, though if the defendant had given the plaintiff an equivalent for the land submerged, the plaintiff's right in that land would have been transferred to the defendant; that the non-payment of revenue on the land during the period of its submersion was not fatal, as the plaintiff was not bound to pay that except in case of being supplied with land in its place, and that the plaintiff was therefore entitled to recover the land in suit conditionally upon payment of the revenue paid upon it by the proprietor, the defendant, since the date of its re-appearance. MORID v. MUSSAMMAT RAM DAVI.

18. Malik Kabza—Right to submerged land on re-appearance—Custom—Mauza Shergarh, Shahpur district.

Found, that there is no established custom in Mauza Shergarh, tahsil Khushab, in the Shahpur district, whereby a Malik Kabza loses his right in lands which have been submerged by river action.

Held, therefore, applying the general principles laid down in Sultan Khan v. Syad Mushammad Shah No. 59 of 1877, Civil, that a Malik Kabza whose land has been submerged and has afterwards emerged, is entitled to recover, on its re-appearance, whatever proprietary interest he had in the land before its submersion. 19. Custom—Mauza Sadda Kambo, Shahpur—Occupancy tenant's right to land carried away by diluvion on its re-appearance—General rule—Special custom—Tenant preserving his right by payment of revenue during period of submersion.

The plaintiffs, residents of the village of Sadda Kambo in the Shahpnr tahsil of the Shahpur district, sued to enforce their occupancy rights in certain lands which had been carried away by diluvion, and which, on their re-appearance, had been taken possession of by the defendants, the proprietors. The defendant pleaded that, according to the custom as stated in the Wajib-ul-arz of the village, the tenants lost all their rights on the submersion of lands held by them on a right of occupancy, and the lower Courts finding the custom proved dismissed the plaintiffs' claim.

Held, that the general rule to be applied in dealing with cases of the above description is that, no custom to the contrary being proved, an occupancy tenant does not lose his occupancy rights by reason of the land being submerged; that though there did exist in the plaintiffs' village a custom by which occupancy tenants became liable, under certain circumstances, to lose their rights on the submersion of their lands, still under that custom the tenants could preserve their rights intact, notwithstanding the submersion of their land, by paying the revenue assessed thereon during the period of submersion, though if they failed to do so during such period, their right of occupancy ceased to exist; and that on the facts of the present case the plaintiffs were entitled to succeed. 20. Custom prevailing in villages on the Soan river in the Una tahsil of the Hoshiarpur district—Kishtibanna or deep stream rule.

Plaintiffs, who represented the proprietors of Panjawar, a village on the right bank of the Soan river in the Una tahsil of the Hoshiarpur district, sued to obtain from the proprietors of Bhera, a village on the left bank of the same river, certain land which had been transferred by avulsion from the Bhera to the Panjawar side. Defendants pleaded, inter alia, that, though the rule that the deep stream should be the boundary was prevalent on the Soan, the rule was only applicable as regards land which had been transferred from one bank to another by gradual accretion, and that it was not applicable when the land had been transferred by avulsion.

Held, that the general custom in the tract in question was proved to be in accordance with a strict observance of the deep stream rule, whether or not the land had come over by avulsion and was identifiable. MAHAR SINGH v. ACHRA.

21. Naubaramad (new alluvial) land—Manner in which such land should be recorded in the Patwari's annual papers—Entries in settlement record—Jurisdiction of Revenue Courts to entertain suit for correction of Patwari's papers.

The appellants applied to the Deputy Commissioner for correction of the Patwari's papers in respect of certain new alluvial land alleged to be held by them under an entry in the Settlement record as owners, but which the Patwari had entered as shamilat. The Deputy Commissioner decided that the ownership of the land in question should be recorded as laid down in the Settlement record. The Commissioner, on appeal, reversed the Deputy Commissioner's order, and, in effect, directed that the Patwari's papers should stand as drawn up, even though, in so drawing them up, the Patwari had made entries which could not be reconciled with the Settlement record, and the Commissioner informed the parties who were dissatisfied with the Patwari's entries, that their only remedy was by suit in the Civil Courts.

Held, by the 2nd Financial Commissioner, that the Patwari was bound to draw up his annual papers and all other revenue papers in general conformity with the entries in the Settlement record, and in cases of doubt or error the owners of land were entitled to apply to the Deputy Commissioner for an order directing the Patwari to do so. The Patwari and all Revenue Officers are bound to presume that the entries in the Settlement record are correct, and further, it is rarely right for a Revenue Officer to refer parties to a Civil suit, as, if the subject-matter of the application is not within the jurisdiction of the Revenue authorities, it is sufficient for the Revenue Officer to say so. But the case urged by the appellants was one in respect of which the Revenue authorities only could give them relief. NAURANG v. NABI BAKHSH.

23. Limitation Act, 1877, section 13, and 2*nd Schedule, articles* 142, 144—Alluvion and diluvion—Custom of Beas river—Land taken over by avulsion—Dispossession or discontinuance of possession—Exclusion of time of defendants' absence from British India.

Plaintiffs, the proprietors of a village on the Amritsar side of the Beas, claimed certain land lying between their village and the present deep stream, alleging that the said land originally formed part of their village but was transferred in Sambat 1923 to the Kapurthala side of the river, returning to the Amritsar side in Sambat 1927-28, but remained part of Kapurthala Territory till Sambat 1937 or 1938. The transfer on each occasion was found to be by a sudden change in the course of the river or what is generally called "avulsion," and it was found by the lower Courts (and the finding was accepted as correct by the Chief Court) that by the custom of the Beas, when land is transferred from one side of the river to another by a sudden change, there is no disturbance of proprietary right; but the lower Courts considered that plaintiffs had lost their rights, because they had not been in possession of the land, or any part of it, within twelve years before suit.

On the question of limitation, held, that the case was governed by article 142 of the 2nd Schedule of the Limitation Act, as plaintiffs were certainly dispossessed or discontinued possession in Sambat 1923 when the land went over to Kapurthala.

But held further, that in reckoning limitation plaintiffs were entitled to deduct the period from Sambat 1923 to Sambat 1937-38, during which the land remained part of the Kapurthala territory under section 13 of the Limitation Act, as the defendants were certainly absent from British India during that period and the fact that the subject-matter of the suit was also so absent was rather an additional than a less reason for holding that the section applied. 24. Ala and adna malik—Land submerged—Re-appearence—Right of possession—Wajib-ul-arz.

The parties to the case were ala and adna maliks of mauza Thoa in the Dera Ismail Khan district. As regards the preservation or loss of rights of adna maliks in cases of alluvion and diluvion, the Wajib-ul-arz provided that the land attached to wells will on restoration belong to the former owner (adna malik); that in case of lands not attached to wells, if a portion of a field or plot be carried away and be again thrown up opposite the remaining land, the former adna maliks will take so much of it as is required to make up his old holding; but if the whole field or land be carried away, it will belong on restoration to the ala maliks as shamilat and the ala maliks will have full power to give it to adna maliks or not, and for its cultivation those powers and rules will come into force which are laid down for the shamilat. It also contained the following clause:—Lekin jis malik adna ki zamin amum burd hogi banisbat digar malikan adna uska pahle hak hai ki banjar shamilat se ya zamin baramad shuda se baqadar rakba burd shuda ke usko mile our aisi zamin ke liye malik adna ko jadid jhuri jo ek rupaya fi acre se ziada na howe deni hogi aur khilaf dastur ala malikan ko aisi zamin ke liye jhuri lene se inkar karne ka ikhtiyar na hoga.

Held, that the proper interpretation of this clause was that, if the ala maliks did not require the lands themselves, and it became a question of letting them out, then the first persons entitled to admission were the adna maliks who had lost a good deal of land (amum). Both those who had lost all their land and those who had lost a considerable part (and who might not wish to wait for the chance of a restoration—mahaz) would come under this head, and might claim to be accepted in preference to other adna maliks or outsiders on payment of the fair customary rent which the ala maliks might not refuse to accept on the plea that they could get a higher rent by competition. 25. Alluvion and diluvion—Title to land acquired by accretion—Land subsequently retransferred by avulsion—Identification of site.

Owing to changes in the course of the river Chenab, certain land, which was identified as having originally belonged to plaintiffs, after being submerged, gradually re-appeared on the Muzaffargarh side as the river receded, but was subsequently bodily transferred to the Mooltan side by a sudden change in the course of the river. While the land was on the Muzaffargarh side, the defendants brought a few detached plots under cultivation, and were still cultivating them at the time of suit. The burden of suing for possession of the said land was in consequence upon plaintiffs. The latter instituted a suit and obtained a decree in the first Court, which was, however, reversed on appeal by the Divisional Judge.

Held, in accordance with the principle laid down in Lopez' case (5 B. L. R., 521), that inasmuch as the site of the land in question had been duly identified as plaintiffs', the latter were entitled to succeed, and that the mere facts that they did not follow the land when it went to the Muzaffargarh side, and that the defendants had brought a few scattered plots thereof under cultivation, did not affect plaintiffs' rights as owners of the site. *I. Held, that the re-appearance not being a gradual accession within the meaning of the 1st clause of section 4 of Regulation XI of 1825, and the land being identifiable in situ the plaintiffs who owned it prior to its submersion were entitled to its possession under the 5th clause of that section on the general principles of equity and justice. Lopez v. Madan Mohan Thakoor (*V B. 28. Alluvion and diluvion—Rights of adna maliks *in submerged land—Custom—*Mauza Bullewahan, tahsil Muzaffargarh—Effect of entry in Wajib-ul-arz—Burden of proof.

The plaintiffs, who were adna maliks in mauza Bullewahan, tahsil Mauzaffargarh, sued to recover from the ala maliks certain lands which had been submerged by river action, and on their re-appearance had been taken possession of by the ala maliks. The defendants pleaded that under the provisions of the Wajib-ul-arz of 1879 the plaintiffs' rights had been lost in consequence of the submersion. The first Court finding the custom set up by the defendants not to be ancient, and against justice, equity and good conscience, decreed plaintiffs claim. The Divisional Judge found that the entry in the Wajib-ul-arz being in favor of defendants, held that the onus of burden of contradicting and setting aside its provisions was on the plaintiffs, and finding that they had failed to discharge it, dismissed their claim.

Held, that as the rule, that the owner of land which is under water retains his rights to the site, is a principle not peculiar to any system of Municipal Law, but is one founded on universal law and justice, the burden of proving the custom under which deluviation works forfeiture was on defendants, and that the evidence produced in its support which consisted chiefly of the provision in the Wajib-ul-arz, which was a one-sided entry opposed to all principles of law and justice, was quite insufficient to establish it.

An entry in a Wajib-ul-arz should not be considered as conclusive of a custom, especially where the custom set up is one opposed to the principles founded on universal law and justice. Lopez v. Madan Mohan Thakoor (*V Beng. The plaintiffs who were adna maliks in mauza Muradpur, tahsil Alipur, in the Muzaffargarh district, sued for a declaration of adna malkiyat rights in certain land which had been submerged by river action which, on its re-appearance in accordance with a provision of the Wajib-ul-arz, had been recorded as the sole property of the defendants. The provision of the Wajib-ul-arz was to the effect: " that in this village there are two kinds of property, ala and adna. If the land belonging to any adna malik is washed away, at the time of its being thrown up it becomes the property of ala malik. The adna maliks retain no right in the land. The adna maliks after paying haq juri to the ala maliks will be entitled to get possession. Without paying haq juri they will have no right. If the ala maliks intentionally refuse to take juri, the adna maliks are not entitled to take possession. The arrangement as to juri is to depend upon the value of the land and the status of the adna malik. But it shall not be less than Re. 1 per bigha or more than Rs. 2 per bigha. The adna maliks shall have the same power whether the whole or a portion of any wells are carried off."

Held, that as the payment of haq juri or an institution fee for the recovery of land cannot be considered opposed to the principles founded on universal law and justice, it was for the adna maliks to rebut the presumption in favour of the correctness of the entries after record of custom and to prove that they were not bound to pay it.

Held, on the evidence, that the plaintiffs have failed to rebut the entry in question or to prove that they were entitled to the land without payment of haq juri. Ghulam Mohay-ud-din v. Faiz Bakhsh (97 P. R. 1902) and Mubarik Shah v. Abdulla (125 P. R. 1889), referred to. AHMAD SHAH v. KHUDA BAKHSH. 33 P R 1903

Found, that by custom prevailing in respect of land bordering the Sutlej river between the Jullundur and Ferozepore districts, the proprietors of a village become entitled to any area of land, whether it is the whole or a portion of a village, which, in consequence of a change in the course of that river, is thrown up by gradual accretion.

Held that, as in the river Sutlej between the Jullundur and Ferozepore districts, the changes of deep-stream are more considerable and sudden than in English and Italian rivers, the rules applicable to gradual accretions of the descriptions contemplated by the English and Roman Law should not be followed.

All disputes relating to such accretions should be decided by giving full effect to the provision of the Riwaj-i-am of the villages concerned.

Held, that no appeal lies from an order made under section 206, Civil Procedure Code, 1882, amending a decree not in conformity with the judgment, but that an appeal lies from the amended decree.

Held also, that an objection that the amended decree is not in conformity with the compromise, on which the decree is based, can only be taken in appeal from the decree and not in revision from the order amending the decree.

Held further, that the word "Haqiyat" means rights in immovable property and though used as a rule in connection with landed property there is nothing to prevent its application to house property also. Mailathi Auni v. Subbaraya Mudaliaro (1901) *I. 31 P R 1894.

50. Custom—Alienation—Succession of daughter, effect upon character of property—"Ancestral property"—Brahmans of mauza Thanawal, Gurdaspur District—Riwaj-i-am.

The parties in this case were Brahmans of the Mehta qaum of Gurdaspur District, and plaintiffs, who were the sons of one S., sued, inter alia, for a declaration that an alienation of land by Mussammat I., the widow of S.'s brother D., would not affect their reversionary rights on the death of the said widow. It was admitted that both S. and D. had succeeded to their respective property through their mother Mussammat A., who had inherited it, in default of heirs male, from their grandfather S. C. Defendants pleaded that the property in suit, having been inherited through a female, was not "ancestral," and that the alienation was lawful and for necessity.

Held, by the Full Bench (Roe, S. J., and Rivaz, J.; Chatterji, J., dissenting) that in a village community where a daughter succeeds, either in preference to, or in default of, heirs male, to property which, if the descent had been through a son, would be "ancestral" property, she simply acts as a conduit to pass on the property as ancestral property to her sons and their descendants, and does not alter the character of the property simply because she happens to be a female.

Per Chatterji, J.—The word "ancestral" can only be used in a relative and not in a fixed or absolute sense in Customary Law, and before this character can be predicated of any property in the handsof a male owner, it must be found that it has descended to him from a male ancestor, and, in the case of a claim by collaterals, from a male ancestor

51. Custom—Alienation—Perpetual lease of occupancy rights—"Ancestral property"—Illegitimacy of descendants, effect of upon character of inherited property—"necessity"—Sodhi Khatris of Muktsar tahsil, Ferozepore District—Marriage of Muhammadan woman to Sikh Guru, validity of.

One Guru Fatteh Singh, a childless Sodhi Khatri of the Muktsar tahsil, Forezepore District, shortly before his death executed certain perpetual leases in favour, severally, of the defendant and others in consideration of certain sums paid in cash as fines and certain rents payable by the lessees, who were thereby constituted occupancy tenants, but with plenary and uncontrolled powers of alienation and right of succession lineally as well as collaterally in the male line. Plaintiffs, who were the nephews of the alienor, thereupon sued for a declaration that the leases were alienations of ancestral property by a childless male proprietor or without necessity, were invalid by custom and would not affect their reversionary rights. In the Chief Court it was urged on behalf of the respondent lessee that (i) the lease should be regarded merely as an act of management within the capacity and competency of the late proprietor—the alienor having died after the institution of the suit—and not as an act of alienation; (ii) that the property having descended through illegitimate children was not ancestral; (iii) that by custom the right of Guru Fatteh Singh to alienate in the presence of such agnates as the plaintiffs was not restricted to cases of necessity; and (iv) that, if the leases were held to be acts of alienation, there was necessity.

Held, (i) that no necessity had been proved; (ii) that the intention of the lessor being to prejudice the reversioners when he knew that his life was drawing to a close, and that he himself would not long be able to enjoy full proprietary interest in the land to which he has tenaciously clung until that period, the leases could not be regarded as mere acts of management of the cultivation on the part of the late proprietor, but were acts of alienation; and (iii) that even if it were conceded that the children of the common ancestor through whom the property had descended, were illegitimate and could not have succeeded in the presence of other legitimate sons, there would not necessarily be an insuperable legal objection to plaintiffs proving that they were descendants of the same ancestor, and that the property coming from him was ancestral property

Found, that by custom among Sodhi Khatris of the Muktsar tahsil, Ferozepore District, a childless male proprietor is not competent to alienate ancestral property without necessity in the presence of nephews. SODHI KARTAR SINGH v. SHER SINGH.

52. Custom—Alienation—Gift to sister's son followed by possession and mutation of names—"Ancestral property."

In a case in which the property in dispute had been acquired by one K. jointly with his brothers, but had never been held by their father, held, that the said property was not ancestral property qua K's collaterals.

Held, therefore, that a gift of such property, followed by possession and mutation of names, by K in his lifetime to his sister's son was not invalid by custom.

Mutation of names by itself does not in every case constitute a valid transfer, but it is good evidence of such transfer. JOWAHIR SINGH v. DIAL SINGH. 76 P R 1898

53. Custom—"Ancestral" property—Ancestral and acquired property—Profits of ancestral immovable property and purchases effected with such profits—Unequal distribution of such profits and purchases among sons.

Held, that the profits of ancestral immovable property and purchases effected with such profits are not ancestral property, under Customary Law in such a sense that a descendant of the ancestor from whom such property devolved can interfere with the disposal of such profits or purchases.

Held, therefore, that it was competent for a proprietor from the profits of his ancestral property to effect a mortgage of certain land in the names and for the benefit of three of his four sons. SHER SINGH v. KISHEN SINGH 4 P R 1900

54. Ancestral property—Piragheb, tahsil and district Jhelum.

Held, that when the lands of a village are held by various races and were given simply to any one who would undertake their burdens a portion of such land cannot be considered ancestral, merely because an ancestor may have held it or other land in the village in past time. 61. Ancestral and self-acquired property—Onus of proof.

In a suit to set aside a sale of immovable property effected by the plaintiff's father, who had succeeded to it as the next reversionary heir on the death of the widow of the last male owner, the plaintiff alleged that the land sold was ancestral property, and that the alienation had been made without legal necessity and was therefore void.

The evidence showed that the last male owner had acquired some lands in the district by purchase and others on abandonment by collateral relation, but there was no evidence defining the boundary of these portions respectively, that being merely a matter of conjecture.

Held, that the onus of proving that the property alienated was not self-acquired in the hands of the last male owner, was on the plaintiff, who could not under the circumstances derive any assistance from conjecture, however reasonable, in the place of positive proof. ATAR SINGH, ETC., v. THAKAR SINGH. 42 P R 1910 P C

62. Ancestral property—Land taken in exchange for ancestral land.

2. Punjab Laws Act, 1872, section 12 (b)—Pre-emption—Villages held on ancestral shares—Meaning of the term.

A village held on ancestral shares within the meaning of section 12 (b), Punjab Laws Act, 1872, as amended by Act XII of 1878 (regarding rights to pre-emption in villages) must be a zamindari village. If there has been a territorial division into pattis, the village (by which is meant the whole village) is no longer held on shares but by pattis. The land in the pattis may be still held upon ancestral shares, but this is insufficient to bring the village within the description in clause (b) of the section. JALAL v. MAZHAR ALI. 13 P R 1893

3. Punjab Laws Act, 1872, section 12, clause (b)—"Village held on ancestral shares"—Pre-emption.

Held, by the Full Bench, that a village cannot be said to be "held on ancestral shares" within the meaning of clause (b) of section 12 of the Punjab Laws Act, 1872, unless the dominant feature of the tenure is a primary division of the village upon fractional shares ascertained with reference to ancestral right, such primary division being commonly, but not necessarily, a territorial division and importing, at least, a definite separation of interests in the village, as an entirety, in accordance with the customary rules of inheritance.

In the case of joint immovable property the fact that portions of its area are separately cultivated by the persons recorded as having specified interests therein indicates no more than the fractional share to which such persons or group would become entitled on a partition being made either by a definite separation in interest by agreement among the co-owners or by a division of the area itself. Until the group of co-owners is thus separated, the thing, which is the subject of their co-ownership, is joint undivided immovable property within the meaning of clause (a) of section 12 of the Punjab

Plaintiff's suit was dismissed by the Original Court. He petitioned for review of judgment, whereupon notice was given to the defendant under section 378, Civil Procedure Code. The Court, after hearing the parties, affirmed its judgment. Plaintiff appealed to the Deputy Commissioner, who dismissed the appeal on the ground that "the order rejecting the application for review was final." On special appeal, the Chief Court held, that the appeal to the Deputy Commissioner would lie, and remanded the case to be disposed of by him on its merits. 3. The Tahsildar decreed plaintiff's claim, and defendant applied for review of judgment. Notice was issued to plaintiff, and after hearing the parties, the Tahsildar recorded "decree as before. Application rejected."

Held (MELVILL, J., dissenting), that an appeal lay from the Tahsildar's order on review, as it was a judgment on review affirming his previous judgment, and not a mere order rejecting a petition for review. SOWAYA v. PIR BAKHSH. 31 P R 1875

4. Agreement to liquidate decree by instalments—Validity of contract—Appeal by judgment-debtor subsequent to agreement—Dismissal of appeal.

Plaintiff having obtained an ex-parte decree against defendant, which was appealed unsuccessfully to the Commissioner, proceeded to attach defendant's property in execution, whereupon a written agreement was entered into by the parties by which defendant undertook to liquidate the decree by specified instalments, which agreement was ratified before the execution Court, and proceedings in execution stayed. Two days after such ratification, defendant filed a petition for revision (for which an appeal was afterwards substituted) in the Chief Court, praying for reversal of the Commissioner's judgment.

Held, that the appeal must be dismissed, as the arrangement entered into to liquidate the decree was not a voidable contract, but a reasonable arrangement for a good consideration, and one which should be enforced. SIRDAR AMRIK SINGH v. RAMBHAJ. 161 P R 1879

5. Appeal by one defendant as to the disposal of certain money decreed to be paid by plaintiff—Separate suit.

Where in a suit for specific performance of a contract of sale, the lower Court ordered a sum of money to be paid by plaintiff, which money he thereupon deposited in Court, held, that an appeal by one defendant, lodged against the other defendants and the plaintiffs as respondents, on the ground that the money should be paid to him (the appellant) alone, and not to all the defendants jointly, could not be entertained, there being no dispute between the appellant and the original plaintiff.

Held further, that such a dispute could form the subject of a separate suit. SARUP SINGH v. JOWAHIR SINGH. 37 P R 1881

6. Punjab Courts Act, 1884 (as amended)—Suit for declaration of proprietary title to a share in a well—Land-suit—Provisions of the law for obtaining a final decision as to whether a suit is cognizable by the Civil or Revenue Courts.

S. K., a Nari Rajput, who had four sons and one daughter, married his daughter in the time of the Sikhs to Sale Khan, a Bhati Rajput, who came to reside with him.

N.K., one of S. K.'s sons, died without male issue, but leaving a daughter: the descendants of the other three sons of S. K. were defendants in the present suit.

Three sons were the issue of the marriage between Sale Khan and S. K.'s daughter, of whom only two, Kesar and Sharfu, had male issue.

Kesar married the daughter of N. K., and the issue of this marriage were also defendants in the present suit.

Sharfu had three sons who were the plaintiffs in the suit.

The plaintiff's case was that S. K. gave one-fourth share of a well and the land belonging to it to his son-in-law, Sale Khan, from whom it devolved on his two sons in equal shares; and plaintiffs asked for a declaration, as sons of Sharfu, son of Sale Khan, of their proprietary title to a one-thirteenth share in the well on the ground of gift of a share by S. K. to Sale Khan.

Held, that this was a land and not an unclassed suit No. 62 P. R., 1891, followed.

7. Certificate appeal—Succession—Daughters—Suit by reversioners to contest daughters' succession—Compromise—Subsequent suit by same reversioners to set aside alienation by daughters—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, section 43.

One K. S., a Hindu Jat, died leaving a son Kh., two daughters, the present petitioners and certain immovable property. Kh. married and had a son L., who survived him. After the death of Kh. and the re-marriage of his widow, the daughters of K. S. went to the house left by K. S. to reside with, and take care of, their minor nephew L. On the death of L., the reversionary heir of K. S. sued the said daughters who had taken possession of both the land and houses left by K. S., but in 1860 this suit was compromised, one-third of the land and houses being left with the daughters. On the 28th January 1893, the daughters having sold part of the said house property to B. S. and C. S, the reversioners again sued, praying for a declaration that the sale should not affect their rights after the death of the female vendors, and they pleaded that the sale was not for a necessary purpose and that the consideration was fictitious. The defendants, who were the daughters and the vendees pleaded that the daughters had inherited the property in dispute from K. S.; that they were full owners and had been in possession for the preceding 27 years, and that the sale was for necessity and for full consideration.

The lower Courts found that in the absence of evidence to the contrary, the presumption was that the daughters were not full owners but merely life tenants; that their possession was permissive and not adverse to the plaintiffs; that the sale was not for necessity or for consideration, and that the plaintiffs were not barred, under section 43 of the Civil Procedure Code, from suing by reason of their suit in 1860, and decreed plaintiffs' claim. A certificate to appeal having been refused by the Divisional Judge, the defendant daughters applied to the Chief Court on the Revision side, to admit a further appeal on the following grounds :—

" i That the certificate should have been granted as there is a point of law and custom involved ; (a) does section 43 apply or not ? (b) have, or have not, the daughters by custom more than a life tenancy ?

" ii The daughters have full power to " alienate.

" iii There was necessity."

Held, that the real question was not whether the daughters by custom took more than a life tenancy, but what were their rights under the compromise of 1860, and that there was no ground for admitting an appeal upon that question.

Held, further, that the present suit being upon an entirely new cause of action was not barred under section 43 of the Civil Procedure Code by the omission to claim the house in the former suit. MUSSAMMAT IND KAUR v. SUJAN SINGH. 47 P R 1894

8. *Lower Court refusing to grant probate of will to executor, but granting letters of administration without the will annexed to testator's representative—No appeal by executor—*Locus standi of party interested in will to appeal against grant of letters of administration.

One A. K. propounded a will and applied, as executor, for probate to the District Judge, and the appellant, who was the representative of one of the legatees under the will, the legatee himself being dead, supported the application for probate. The application was opposed by the widow of the testator's deceased son, who also applied for letters of administration without the will annexed. The lower Court disposed of both applications, and, after drawing up issues, inter alia as to the effect of the will if proved, as to how far it was valid, and as to what property it might or might not affect, held the will not proved, and granted administration to the said widow. The deceased legatee's representative appealed to the Chief Court.

Held, that it is competent to a person, who is a party to the proceedings in the lower Court and interested in having a will propounded and maintained as a will, to appeal against the grant of letters of administration without the will annexed, even if the executor does not appeal and abandons his application for probate. 10. Partition—Order declaring the right of parties and the property to be partitioned in a partition suit—Omission to appeal from such order—Effect of as regards appeal from final decree—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, section 396

In a suit for partition of immovable property a Munsif, on the 11th December 1899, passed an order declaring the specific shares of the parties and the property to be partitioned, and on the 10th January 1900, under section 396, Civil Procedure Code, appointed a commission to make the partition in accordance with his order. The partition was effected through arbitrators, and a decree was drawn up on the 31st May 1900 in accordance with the award. On the 30th July 1900 the defendant appealed to the Divisional Judge, and amongst other objections, questioned the correctness of the preliminary order of the Munsif excluding a certain house from partition. The Divisional Judge rejected the appeal as time-barred on the grounds that the order of the 11th December 1899, declaring the rights of the parties and the property to be paritioned was a decree and that the defendant was not at liberty to question the correctness of the said order, not having appealed from that order within the prescribed period.

Held, that the order of the Divisional Judge was erroneous, inasmuch as the preliminary order of the 11th December 1899 could be questioned on appeal from the final decree even if it was itself appealable as a decree.

H. M. became surety under section 336 of the Code of Civil Procedure for a judgment-debtor, and undertook to produce him in Court when called upon, and that he should within one month file an application to be declared an insolvent. The judgment-debtor duly applied to be declared an insolvent, but his application was rejected in default of prosecution after one appearance. The decree-holder thereupon applied for the execution of his decree against the surety, which was refused by the District Judge on the ground that the obligation of the surety was discharged. The decree-holder preferred an appeal to th Chief Court on a two-rupee stamp. The respondent took two preliminary objections : first, that no appeal lay ; second, that in any case an ad valorem Court fee was leviable.

Held, that an order refusing an application under section $\frac{336}{253}$ of the Code of Civil Procedure for recovery of the amount decreed from a surety is not appealable, the decree-holder's remedy being by application for revision, and that such order not being a decree nor an order having the force of a decree, within the meaning of Article II of the Second Schedule to the Court Fees Act, an ad valorem fee was not leviable. 13. Appeal from order refusing to make appointment of receiver—Discretionary power of First Court not lightly interfered with by Appellate Court—Receiver not to be appointed on mere apprehension of waste.

Held, on the authorities cited, that an appeal lies from an order refusing to appoint a receiver under Civil Procedure Code, 1908, order XL, rule 1.

Held also, that the exercise of the jurisdiction to appoint a receiver is not a matter ex debito justitiæ, and it is for the Court, to which the application is made, to decide in its discretion whether or not it will act upon that application and the Appellate Court should not interfere with the opinion of the First Court unless it finds such opinion to be either arbitrary, vague or fanciful.

Held further, that a receiver should not be appointed, when the application is based, not upon any specific allegation of misconduct, but upon a mere apprehension that the defendant, though he has done nothing in the past, will after the institution of the suit forthwith proceed to waste the property, and that this principle is applicable also to the case where one of three Hindu brothers seeks partition of the joint family property. Held, that on the death of one of two representatives of the body of respondents an appeal abates, where no application has been made within six months to have the legal representative of the deceased made a party.

Held also, that the plea of ignorance of the death until after the expiry of limitation does not justify departure from the rule laid down in order XXII, rule 4 (3), Civil Procedure Code, which is imperative. SAYAD MIR NAWAB, &c., v. HARDEO, &c., 60 P R 1911

5. Section 12, Act VII of 1870—Appeal from order rejecting plaint for want of proper stamp.

Plaintiffs sued for a declaratory decree, and wrote their claim on a stamp of ten rupees. The Court of first instance held that the plaint also asked for consequential relief, and required the plaintiffs to value their claim accordingly. The plaintiffs failed to comply with this requisition, and the Court rejected their plaint under section 31, Act VIII of 1859.

Held, that an appeal on the ground that the original Court had wrongly construed the plaint would lie under section 36, Act VIII of 1859, from the order rejecting the plaint, notwithstanding section 12, clause 1 of the Court Fees Act, although the appeal involved the determination of the amount of the stamp fee. An appeal does not lie (LINDSAY, J., dissenting) from an order of the Commissioner refusing his sanction to a sale of immovable property in execution of a decree ; section 11 of Act XXIII of 1861 does not apply to such an order.

Per BOULNOIS, J.—The Chief Court, under section 44 of Act IV of 1866, has superintendence over subordinate Courts ; but its powers are limited to (1) directing the exercise of the power or jurisdiction disclaimed by a subordinate Court, and (2) setting aside an order made without jurisdiction ; the Chief Court cannot interfere on the ground that an order made by a Court having jurisdiction is erroneous. 28. Appeal from decree passed by inadvertence against, or in favour of, a dead party.

Held, that a decree passed by inadvertence against, or in favor of, a dead party, is one from which no appeal lies, because in such case the heir of the deceased party, or the opposite party, has no locus standi, as an appellant, or as a respondent, as the case may be. GOHAR v. MUHAMMAD.

31. Right to use of water—Land-suit—Punjab Courts Act, 1884, section 3—Appeal.

The plaintiff sued to establish his right to the use of water of the Dabgana Canal for irrigating land as defined in section 4 of the Punjab Tenancy Act, 1887 : no claim was made to any share in the land occupied by the canal, or in the canal as a whole.

Held (Roe, J., doubting), that the suit was not a "land-suit" as defined in section 3, Punjab Courts Act, 1884 (as amended). SULTAN ALI SHAH v. KADIR BAKHSH.

In case the Judge and one or both of the assessors agree as to the amount of compensation in a reference made to the Court under the provisions of Part III of the Land Acquisition Act, 1870, their decision thereon shall be final, and no appeal lies, even if they differ upon minor points not falling within the scope of their jurisdiction. 36 P R 1892

33. Appeal by plaintiffs to Chief Court who did not appeal to Divisional Judge—Competency of appeal.

Eighteen persons instituted a suit for an account against seventeen others. The first Court dismissed the suit.

Two of the plaintiffs appealed to the Divisional Court, and, after a remand under secsion 566, Civil Procedure Code, a decree was made in their favour against defendant 1 for Rs. 103-8-0, being the proportion to which they were held entitled out of a total sum of Rs. 1,457-5-0 for which defendant was found to be liable.

Some of the other plaintiffs, who had not appealed to the Divisional Court, then preferred a further appeal to the Chief Court urging that the Divisional Judge should have given them a decree for their proportionate share.

Held, that such further appeal was not competent, the appellants not being parties to the appeal before the Divisional Judge, nor affected in any way by the decree made by him. [Cf. No. 46 P. R. 1892]. MAHBUB SINGH v. KAHNA.

34. Punjab Courts Act, 1884—Pre-emption suit—Value for purposes of appeal—Punjab Laws Act, 1872, section 9—Pre-emption—Sale of immovable property—Exchange.

In a pre-emption suit, of which the value for purposes of jurisdiction was found to be less than Rs. 1,000, the decree of the first Court, affirmed upon appeal, was for possession of the land in suit on payment of the sum of Rs. 2,822, the plaintiff having claimed it on payment of Rs. 2,500, and the deed of sale showing the price to be Rs. 4,500 and one ghumao of land.

II.—APPEAL, COMPETENCY OF —contd.

Held, that the decree involved directly some claim to or question respecting property of the value of Rs. 1,000 or upwards, namely, the price to be paid for the land in suit by the plaintiff in his character of pre-emptor, and that an appeal therefore lay under the second part of clause, (a), section 40, sub-section (1), of the Punjab Courts Act, 1888, without a certificate.

Held, also, that a permanent transfer of land in a village for a sum of money, plus something that is not money, does not, merely because of such addition, of necessity cease to be a sale within the meaning of section 9, Punjab Laws Act.

36. Civil Procedure Code, section 320—327—Intervention of Collector—Sanction of Civil Court—Appeal.

Held, that though it is open to either the decree-holder or the judgment-debtor to appeal to a superior Civil Court from the order of a Civil Court authorising or refusing to authorise the Collector to make an arrangement under section 326 of the Code, no appeal lies to the superior Civil Court from any order made by the Collector when acting under section 326 of the Code. Held, that an order passed by the Court executing a decree under Chapter XIX (i) of the Civil Procedure Code for the imprisonment of the judgment-debtor, though not appealable as an order under section 588 (29), is appealable as a decree inasmuch as the question decided by such order is one relating to the execution of the decree within the meaning of section 244 (c) of the Code. 38. Civil Procedure Code, 1882, section 622—Revision—Appeal dismissed by lower Appellate Court on ground that it was unauthorised by appellant—Appeal filed by advocate—Power of Chief Court to revise order of the lower Appellate Court—"Failure to exercise jurisdiction vested by law"—Appeal also dismissed as contrary to "rule of equity, justice and good conscience"—Material irregularity.

II.—APPEAL, COMPETENCY OF —contd.

Plaintiff's suit for Rs. 825, the price of a horse alleged to have been sold by him to defendant, having been dismissed by the District Judge, an appeal from the decree was filed by a certain advocate in the Court of the Divisional Judge. At the hearing of the suit, an advocate of the Bombay Bar stated that he appeared on behalf of the appellant, but the respondent urged as preliminary objections (1) that the appeal was, as shown by certain letters written by the appellant after the date of the decree of the District Judge unauthorised by the appellant; and (2) that inasmuch as the plaintiff had, after the decision of the first Court, advertised the horse for sale as his own property for a smaller sum than that he claimed from defendant as its price, he had deprived himself of any right of appeal even if the appeal were otherwise duly authorised and valid. The Divisional Judge considered both objections, and, holding that they were well founded, dismissed the appeal with costs against the appellant, who thereupon applied to the Chief Court on the revision side. For the petitioner it was contended that the Divisional Judge, in dismissing the appeal (a) on the ground that it was unauthorised, had "failed to exercise a jurisdiction vested in him by law"; and (b) on the ground that it was contrary to some unspecified "rule of equity, justice and good conscience," had acted with material irregularity. The respondent, while admitting that the order of the Divisional Judge as to costs could not be supported, contended that there had been no failure to exercise jurisdiction or acting with material irregularity in the exercise of jurisdiction on the part of the lower Appellate Court, and that the Chief Court was incompetent to touch the decision on either point on the revision side.

Held, that the Chief Court has full power in an application for revision under section 622, Civil Procedure Code, to go into the merits of the decision of the Court, whose proceedings are being revised on the question of jurisdiction.

Held, further, that the lower Appellate Court, in deciding the first preliminary objection, had adjudicated on a question relating to its jurisdiction over the case, and in dismissing the appeal on the erroneous finding that it was unauthorised had "failed to exercise a jurisdiction vested in it by law."

Held, also, that the lower Appellate Court, in dealing with the second preliminary objection, must be held to have taken cognizance of the appeal and in dismissing the appeal upon the assumption that there was some rule of equity, justice and good conscience, not, however, specified in the judgment, which barred the institution of the appeal, had acted with material irregularity in the exercise of its jurisdiction. 39. Application by guardian for custody of minor—Appeal—Guardian and Wards Act,

II.—APPEAL, COMPETENCY OF —contd.

1890, sections 12, 25, 47, (c)—Revision—Right of guardian to custody of minor.

An application by a duly appointed guardian for custody of the minor was rejected by the Additional District Judge on the ground that the proper course for the guardian would be to bring a civil suit against the respondent if she refused to make over the minor to his custody. The guardian appealed to the Chief Court.

Held, that the order of the lower Court was not appealable.

But held, that the said order was open to revision on the ground that the lower Court should have directed the respondent to produce the minor with a view to his being made over to the petitioner, and that in failing to do so, the lower Court failed to exercise a jurisdiction vested in it by law. Held, by the Full Bench, that the enactment of Act XXV of 1899, which came into force on the 13th October 1899, has not the effect of depriving parties to suits, instituted before that date, of the right or privilege of appeal allowed by section 40 of the Punjab Courts Act, 1884, as it existed prior to its amendment by Act XXV of 1899. Held, that under section 588, Civil Procedure Code, no appeal lies from an order of remand where the party does not seek either to traverse the remand order passed by the Appellate Court, or its finding upon the preliminary point as to which it has differed from the first Court, but seeks to traverse the decision as to a preliminary point in which both the Courts have concurred and in regard to which no reference has been made under section 562. 48. Civil Procedure Code, 1882, section 244—Question in execution of decree—Question arising between the parties or their representatives—Appeal.

The holder of a decree for pre-emption duly deposited the purchase money, amounting to Rs. 1,475, in Court as directed. Subsequently a reversioner of the vendor brought a suit to have it declared that the sale was without necessity and should not be allowed to affect his rights except in respect of Rs. 300 and obtained a decree. The pre-emptors then asked the Munsif for the return of their purchase money, as they no longer wished to go on with the purchase, as their decree of pre-emption had been superseded by the declaratory decree. The Munsif without informing the vendee ordered the refund of the money. The vendee appealed to the Divisional Judge, who declined to interfere, on the ground that the procedure for paying money into Court in pre-emption cases was not a procedure in execution of a decree, and that he had no jurisdiction to hear an appeal from such an order.

Held, that as the effect of the Munsif's order was to deprive the vendee of his money which he was entitled to under a decree of Court, it fell within the scope of clause (c) of section 244, Civil Procedure Code, as a question arising between the parties to the suit or their representatives, and relating to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree, and that an appeal lay as if from a decree. 49. Civil Procedure Code, 1882, sections 372, 588 (21)—Application to be brought on to record in substitution for plaintiff—Dismissal of such application—appeal.

Held, that there is no appeal from an order dismissing an application to be made a party under section 372 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Section 588 (31) only allows an appeal from an order disallowing objections to an application under that section. Indo Mati v. Gaya Prasad (I. L. R., XIX All., 142*), Moti Ram* v. *Kundan Lal (I. 51. Appeal—Application for judicial separation on the grounds of adultery and cruelty—Decree on the ground of cruelty only —Right of petitioner to have the finding as to adultery set aside—Indian Divorce Act, 1869, section 55.

On a petition for judicial separation filed by the wife on the ground of her husband's adultery and cruelty, the District Judge found the first charge unproved but the second charge proved, and granted her a decree on that ground alone. The petitioner preferred an appeal to the Chief Court to set aside the finding of the District Judge as to the first charge.

Held, that inasmuch as the finding against the petitioner on the issue as to adultery could not affect her remedy for subsequent misconduct by her husband, the existence of that finding did not entitle, her to appeal or to have that finding specially embodied in the decree for the purposes of appeal. Koyalash Chunder Koesari v. Ram Lal Nag (I. L. R., VI Calc., 206*)*, Niamat Khan v. *Phadu Buldia (I. L. Held, that, where an auction sale under a decree has been confirmed under section 312, Civil Procedure Code, in the absence of objection under section 311, and an application to set aside the sale has been thereafter put in and dismissed for default, and further application asking (a) that the dismissed application be restored to the file, or (b) that the application be treated as a fresh application, or (c) as a petition for review of the order, dismissing the first application, has been also dismissed, no appeal lies against either of the orders of dismissal, neither of which comes under section 588 (16), Civil Procedure Code, or is an order under section 312. 57. Appeal from order dismissing suit for non-appearance of plaintiff.

Held, by the Full Bench (Reid, C. J., and Chatterji, J., dissenting) that an order dismissing a suit for default of prosecution under section 102 of the Code of Civil Procedure is not a decree as defined in section 2 and is not appealable.

Per Reid, C. J., and Chatterji, J., contra, that an order passed under section 102 is a decree within the meaning of section 2, and as such is appealable. KANHAYA LAL v. THE NATIONAL BANK OF INDIA, LD., DELHI. 121 P R 1907 F B

Where upon an application being made for letters of administration under the Probate and Administration Act (V of 1881), it was objected that the District Judge had no jurisdiction to entertain the application and that officer decided against the objection—

Held, that no appeal lay from the order of the District Judge under section 86 of the Act, inasmuch as the order was not one made by the District Judge by virtue of the powers expressly conferred upon him by the Act.

Held also, that the order being an interlocutory one on point of jurisdiction no revision lay in the Chief Court. SHIB DIT SINGH v. DEVINDAR SINGH.

Held, that under Order XLIII, rule 1, clause (u), Civil Procedure Code, 1908, no appeal lies to the Chief Court from the order of the Divisional Judge, remanding a case under section 562 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882, in a case where an appeal would not lie from the final decree of the Divisional Judge.

Held, also that in the circumstances of the case the Court must decline to interfere with the order of remand under clause (b) of section 70 (1) of the Punjab Courts Act, 1884. ALI BAKHSH v. CHUHAR SINGH.

70. Appeal from order of remand under order XLI, rule 23, Civil Procedure Code, 1908,—section 105 and Order XLIII, rule 1 (u)—Punjab Courts Act, XVIII of 1884, section 40.

There were 3 appeals before the Chief Court against orders of remand by the Divisional Judge under order XLI, rule 23, Civil Procedure Code, 1908, viz.,

(1) in a land suit of jurisdictional value of Rs. 707-2-0;

(2) in a pre-emption case of jurisdictional value (i.e. 30 times jama) of Rs. 406-10-6;

(3) in a small cause suit, value Rs. 1,170.

In all these three cases a further appeal would lie to the Chief Court under section 40 of the Punjab Courts Act, if the Divisional Judge's decree varied or reversed, otherwise than as to costs, the decree of the Court below and not otherwise.

II.—APPEAL, COMPETENCY OF —contd.

Held, that as it was impossible to say whether the decree which might have been passed by the Divisional Judge, had he not remanded the case, would have "varied or reversed otherwise than as to costs," the decree of the Court below and whether a further appeal would lie or not from the Divisional Judge's decree, no appeal lay under order XLIII, rule 1 (u) of the Civil Procedure Code, against the orders of remand in these three cases. III.—COURSE OF APPEAL.

1. Orders under Act XXVII of 1860.

Held, that an appeal from the order of a Deputy Commissioner granting a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860 lies to the Chief Court, and not to the Commissioner. Adjoodia Pershad v. Juggannath (No. 50 of 1868, Civil). But, held, after the passing of the Punjab Appeals Act (VII of 1868) and following Book Circular No. IX of 1869, that such appeal lies to the Commissioner. MOOL CHUND v. LAL CHUND.

2. Act IX of 1861—Custody of children.

The principal Civil Court of original jurisdiction, referred to in section 1 of Act IX of 1861, is the Court of the Deputy Commissioner from whose decision an appeal lies direct to the Chief Court, and not to the Commissioner. FIROZ v. RAMDITTA.

3. Order refusing to grant certificate under Act XXVII of 1860.

Held, that an appal lies to the Chief Court from an order refusing to grant a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860 to any of the contending claimants. MUSSAMMAT GUJRI v. NATHA SINGH.

4. Appellate Court reversing judgment of first Court for want of jurisdiction—Order—Decree—Act X of 1877, sections 2, 588 (6), 589.

Where the Appellate Court (the Judicial Assistant) reversed the order of the first Court on the ground that the value of the property in suit exceeded the value of suits which that Court was competent to try, and further returned the case to plaintiff in order that he might present it to the proper Court, held, that the appeal from the judgment of the Judicial Assistant lay to the Commissioner, and not to the Chief Court, such judgment not being merely an order as described in clause 6, section 588 of the Civil Procedure Code, and therefore appealable to the Chief Court under the last clause of section 589, but a decree disposing of the appeal. GURANDITTA v. JAGGU SHAH.

5. Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877), sections 353, 588 (17), and 589—Order revers- ing on review previous order granting appellant priority in distribution of assets of insolvent—Appealable order.

An order reversing on review of judgment a previous order granting the appellant's priority in the distribution of assets of an Insolvent in proceedings conducted under Chapter XX of the Civil Procedure Code, held, to be an order passed on an application such as is contemplated by the second clause of section 353 of the Code, and therefore to be appealable under section 588 (17), the appeal lying, under section 589, to the Chief Court. ALLIANCE BANK OF SIMLA v. WALSH.

6. Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), sections 586, 588 (27)—Appeal from order refusing to re-admit appeal dismissed for default in suit cognizable by Small Cause Court.

An appeal lies to the Chief Court under clause (27) of section 588 of the Civil Procedure Code from an order of an Appellate Court refusing to re-admit an appeal dismissed for default; and is not affected by the provisions of section 586 of the Code, which exclude a second appeal in suits of the nature cognizable by a Small Cause Court. MUSSAMMAT KAHNO v. SOHEL SINGH.

7. Order in execution by Munsiff in suit other than Small Cause not exceeding Rs. 500 —"Decree"—Act XVIII of 1884, section 39 —Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), sections 2, 540.

Where in execution of a decree for Rs. 1,250, payable by instalments, an Extra Assistant Commissioner having the powers of a Munsiff passed an order which was a "decree" within the definition in section 2 of the Civil Procedure Code, held, that under section 39, Act XVIII of 1884, the appeal from such decree lay to the Divisional Judge, and not to the District Judge, it not being a decree in a suit cognizable by a Court of Small Causes not exceeding Rs. 500 in value. TULSI RAM v. GOBIND.

8. Punjab Courts Act (XVIII of 1884), section 39—Order passed by Munsiff in execution of decree in suit not cognizable by Small Cause Court—"Decree"—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), section 2—Course of appeal.

Held, that the appeal from an order of a Munsiff passed in execution of a decree in a suit other than a small cause, which order falls within the definition of a "decree" in section 2 of the Civil Procedure Code, lies to the Divisional Court, and not to the Court of the District Judge, under Section 39 of the Punjab Courts Act, 1884. MUKAND LAL v. HARBHAJ RAI.

9. Act XL of 1858, section 28—Subject-matter—Course of appeal.

Held, by the Full Bench, that there is only one appeal from orders passed under Act XL of 1858, and that such appeal lies to the Chief Court or to the Divisional Court according as the subject-matter does or does not exceed Rs. 5,000 in value. FIRDAUS KHAN v. BAHRAM KHAN.

32 P R 1887 F B

10. Order passed in execution of decree in small cause—Decree giving effect to compromise dealing with immoveable property —Course of appeal.

On an application for revision of an order passed in execution proceedings it appeared that the original decree in the suit was intended by the Court to give effect to a compromise made between the parties which had been fully recorded under section 375, Civil Procedure Code, and which included a mortgage by way of "lekha mukhi" from defendant to plaintiff of certain lands for the payment of the sum acknowledged to be due, but that the suit in which such decree was made was one of a nature cognizable by a Small Cause Court, and under Rs. 500 in value.

Held, that as any appeal from the decree in the original suit lay to the District Court under clause (1) of section 40 of the Punjab Courts Act, and not to the Divisional Court, the nature and value of the suit rather than of the decree determining the Court of appeal, it followed that the appeal from an appealable order made in execution of the decree lay to the same Court. TOLA RAM v. DEVI DITTA.

11. Act IX of 1887, Schedule II, clause 38—Suit for arrears of maintenance—Punjab Courts Act (XVIII of 1884, and XIII of 1888)—Jurisdiction of District Judge—Unclassed suit.

Under Act XVIII of 1884, a District Judge was not competent to hear an appeal in a suit for arrears of maintenance, such suit not being cognizable by a Small Cause Court (clause 38, Schedule II, Act IX of 1887). Act XIII of 1888 has, however, made a change in the law inasmuch as a suit for maintenance is according to it an unclassed suit, and the appeal will, subject to the other provisions of the Act as to value, lie to the District Judge. DHIRTA v. NIHAL DEVI.

12. Succession Certificate Act, 1889, sections 19, 26—Investiture of inferior Courts with jurisdiction of District Court—Punjab Government Notification No. 570, dated 4th November 1889—Punjab Courts Act, 1884, section 23, proviso (b).

Appeals from all orders under section 7 of the Succession Certificate Act, 1889, whether passed by a District Judge or a Subordinate Judge in the Punjab, lie to the Divisional Court and not to the Chief Court under Government Notifications Nos. 570 and 571 of 4th November 1889. TIKAYA MAL v. LAUNGA MALIK.

13. Share in well for irrigating agricultural land—Land-suit—Course of appeal.

A suit for a share in a well sunk for the purpose of irrigating agricultural land is a "land-suit," and the course of appeal is to the Divisional Court.

The land on which the well is sunk is used "for purposes subservient to agriculture," and the well itself is a "structure on such land," within the definition of "land" in section 4, sub-section (1), Punjab Tenancy Act, 1887. IMAM DIN v. MAHKU.

14. Jurisdiction—Suit for redemption of mortgage—Course of appeal—Punjab Courts Act, section 39.

The plaintiffs instituted a suit for redemption of certain property from mortgage, fixing the mortgage debt at Rs. 43-12-0.

While the suit was pending in the Court of a Munsiff, 2nd class, the plaintiffs amended their plaint to one for redemption on payment of Rs. 43-12-0, or such other sum as the Court might determine.

The defendants pleaded that Rs. 681 was the amount of the mortgage debt.

The Munsiff decreed redemption on payment of Rs. 63-14-0.

Held, that the appeal from the Munsiff's decree lay to the Divisional Court and not to the District Judge.

The jurisdiction is to be determined with reference to the claim made, and not to the decision upon the claim, and when once the appeal had been properly instituted in the Divisional Court, it was immaterial that that Court found less than Rs. 100 to be due, and such finding did not oust its jurisdiction.

The value of the suit was not altered by the plea of the defendants. (No. 169 P. R., 1888). HAZARA SINGH v LAL SINGH.

15. Punjab Courts Act, section 39 (b) and (c), Value of suit—Mesne profits—Course of appeal.

The plaintiffs sued for mesne profits alleged to have been realised by a Receiver. The plaintiffs, for the purposes of section 50, Civil Procedure Code, valued the relief sought approximately, at Rs. 2,000. They were decreed Rs. 3,405-15-6, and they appealed for Rs. 1,946 more. The defendants also appealed against the whole decree.

Held, that the appeal from the District Judge's decree lay to the Divisional Court and not to the Chief Court.

16. Jurisdiction—Suit for redemption of mortgage—course of Appeal—Punjab Courts Act, 1884, section 39.

Plaintiff sued for redemption of an $\frac{11}{30}$th share of a mortgage of certain lands and houses for a total sum of Rs. 10,500, alleging that Rs. 2,000, more or less were due upon the said share, and prayed for a decree for redemption on payment of any sum which might be found to be due thereon after proper adjustment of the accounts. Defendants pleaded that about Rs. 10,000 were due upon the said share and the first Court decreed redemption upon payment of Rs. 7,558. Plaintiff appealed to the Divisional Judge, who entertained the appeal, and, in modification of the decree of the first Court, allowed redemption upon payment of Rs. 3,850. The question referred to the Full Bench was whether the Divisional Judge had jurisdiction to hear the appeal.

Held, by the Full Bench, that the Divisional Judge had jurisdiction to hear the appeal, there being nothing upon the plaint to show that the value of the suit exceeded Rs. 5,000, and the question of jurisdiction having to be determined with reference to the claim made and not to the decision upon the claim. 44 *P. 17. Decree directing registration of mortgage deed—Appeal, Registration Act, 1877, section 77—Further appeal—"Land-suit."

Plaintiff sued under section 77 of the Registration Act, 1877, for a decree directing registration of a deed whereby certain land was mortgaged for Rs. 199. The suit was decreed in the first Court and the deed was duly registered, but subsequently the Divisional Judge, on appeal dismissed the suit. Plaintiff, thereupon preferred a further appeal to the Chief Court, and it was contended, on his behalf, that no appeal lay from the decree of the first Court, and that, even if an appeal did lie, it must be infructuous, as the document had been already registered and there was no provision of law for the cancellation of registration once effected. For the defendant it was objected that a suit under section 77 of the Registration Act was not a "land-suit" within the terms of section 3 (2) of the Punjab Courts Act, 1884, and that, therefore, no further appeal lay from the decree of the Divisional Court.

Held, that an appeal lay to the Divisional Court from the decree of the first Court, and that the fact that registration had already been effected under that decree was no bar to such appeal being heard.

Held, further, that inasmuch as the mortgage operated to create an interest in land, a suit under section 77 of the Registration Act to secure legal efficacy for the mortgage transaction, was a suit "relating to a right of interest in land," and that, therefore, a further appeal lay to the Chief Court. DEVI DITTA v. AHMAD KHAN.

18. Civil Procedure Code, 1882, section 622—Punjab Courts Act, 1884, sections 40,70—"Rules and Orders of the Chief Court," No. LV, Rule IV—Unclassed suit of less than Rs. 100 in value—Appeal.

Section 70 of the Punjab Courts Act, 1884, must be read specially in connection with proviso (ii) to sub-section (i) of section 40 of that Act, and generally with the whole of the latter section. Its object is to provide that no application for revision under section 622, Civil Procedure Code, should be entertained until the procedure laid down in clause (d) of sub-section (i) had been complied with, and a certificate refused by the Divisional Judge. Until this is done, it is not to be held that no appeal lies.

The use of section 70 is now limited to cases in which an application for revision from the order refusing a certificate is not made within the time prescribed by sub-section (ii) of section 40 of the Punjab Courts Act, 1884.

In an unclassed suit of less than Rs. 100 in value an appeal lies to the District Judge, and the Divisional Judge, though the superior Court, is not competent to entertain an appeal direct from the first Court in such a suit. SALIG RAM v. MUNICIPAL COMMITTEE, SONEPAT

19. Appeal, course of—Provincial Small Cause Courts Act (IX of 1887), Schedule II, Article 4.

A suit for possession of immovable property being excepted under Article (4) of the Second Schedule of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act from the jurisdiction of a Court of Small Causes, a suit to recover Rs. 200, the price of materials of a house, and also to obtain possession of a small plot of building, is not a "small cause suit" within the meaning of section 3 of the Punjab Courts Act, and not being a "land-suit" must be an unclassed suit, and under section 39 of the Punjab Courts Act, the appeal from the decree of a Munsif lies to the Divisional Court and not to the Court of the District Judge. 20. Application for recovery of mesne profits which accrued between the date of decree and of delivery of possession—Jurisdiction—Value of suit—Course of appeal—Punjab Courts Act, 1884, section 39.

Held, that when an appeal from the decree in the original suit lay to the Divisional Court, the appeal from an order in execution of that decree lay to the same Court, and the fact that the decree-holder wrongfully claimed in execution proceedings mesne profits in excess of the appellate jurisdiction of that Court does not oust that Court's jurisdiction. Tola Ram v. Deviditta (55 *P. 21. Appeal—Appeal from order granting a review of judgment—Small Cause Court suit valued at less than Rs. 500—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, section 629.

Held, that under section 629 of the Civil Procedure Code, an appeal from the District Judge's order granting a review of judgment in a small cause, valued at less than Rs. 500, lies to the Chief Court, though an appeal from the final decree would be barred. Gayanand Asram v. Bepin Mohan Sen (*I. 22. Appeal—Course of, in a suit for mesne profits where the value of the subject matter in dispute is less than Rs. 500—Provincial Small Cause Court Act, 1877, Schedule II, Article 31.

Held, by the Full Bench, that a suit for damages sustained by plaintiff on account of his having been kept out of possession of two-thirds of a house purchased by him at an auction sale by the defendant (who was owner of the remaining third) and prevented by her from access to it for twenty-five months, did not fall within the purview of clause 31, Schedule II of the Small Cause Court Act, 1887, and was of a nature cognizable by Courts of Small Causes, and that therefore the appeal lay to the District and not to the Divisional Judge. Kunjo Behari Singh v. Madhab Chandra Ghose (*I. 23. Civil Procedure Code, 1882, sections 562, 588 (28)—Appeal from order of remand—Completion of proceedings under remand order.

Held, that under section 588 (28), Civil Procedure Code, an appeal lies from an order of remand under section 562, and the mere fact that such order has been carried out by the Lower Court does not bar the jurisdiction of Chief Court to entertain the appeal. JAG LAL v. SHIB LAL.

24. Value of suit—Suit for dissolution of partnership and rendition of accounts—Suits Valuation Act, 1887, sections 8, 11—Course of appeal—Punjab Courts Act, 1884, section 39.

The plaintiffs sued for dissolution and winding up of a partnership, rendition of accounts by the defendants and a decree for such sums as the plaintiff may be found entitled to against the parties. They valued the claim approximately at Rs. 2,000, but were decreed Rs. 6,410 by the District Judge.

III.—COURSE OF APPEAL—contd.

The defendants appealed to the Divisional Judge, who modified the decree on certain points. On further appeal to the Chief Court it was objected that the Divisional Judge had no jurisdiction to hear the appeal, which lay to the Chief Court.

Held, that as the value of a suit means the value of the subject-matter of such suit, which in the present case exceeded Rs. 5,000, the appeal lay to the Chief Court, and that therefore the decree of the Divisional Judge was without jurisdiction. Ibrahimji Issaji v. Bijanji Jamsedji (*I. Held, that a suit to establish title with reference to a mortgage-deed of land, and to declare it not to be subject to attachment is a land suit, and the course of appeal is to the Divisional Court. Devi Ditta v. Ahmad Khan (43 *P. 26. Punjab Courts Act, 1884, section 40 —Land suit—Value of suit—Appeal—Suits Valuation Act, 1887, section 4.

In two suits by pre-emptors the market value of the properties sought to be pre-empted were found in each case by the Courts to be more than Rs. 250, and in a suit by a mortgagee the decree in his favour fixed a sum more than a thousand rupees (Rs. 1,000) as the amount to be paid by the mortgagor on redemption. In all three cases the value of the suits as laid by the plaintiffs was by the rules in force under the Suits Valuation Act for amounts less than those required by clauses (a) (1) or (b) (1) of section 40 of the Punjab Courts Act, to entitle the parties to an appeal to the Chief Court.

Held, that as all the decrees involved directly claims to, or respecting properties in, the pre-emption cases of the values of Rs. 250 and upwards and in the redemption case of more than Rs. 1,000, an appeal lay in each case to the Chief Court under clauses (a) (1) and (b) (1) of section 40 of the Punjab Courts Act. Bhag Mal v. Mohra (169 *P. 3. Plaintiff sued defendant upon an account stated, and the matter was referred under the Procedure Code to arbitration. The arbitrators made an award in favor of plaintiff which was followed by a decree in the original Court. The Lower Appellate Court set aside the award and dismissed the suit as being barred by limitation.

Held, that the parties having referred the whole matter with the question of limitation to arbitration, and no objection on the ground of limitation being apparent on the face of the award the decree following the award was final. SHAMA v. AZIM. 2 P R 1875

4. Arbitration—Appeal from order setting aside an award.

An appeal lies from an order of a Court setting aside an award for misconduct or corruption ; that is, when a party appeals on the merits, he is entitled also to urge that the lower Court should not have set aside the award, and the Appellate Court can determine the question and uphold the award if it considers it was set aside for insufficient cause. Mussammat BHOI v. SHER BAZ KHAN.

5. Act VIII of 1859, section 327.

An appeal lies from an order under section 327, Civil Procedure Code (relating to filing in Court an award when the matter was referred to arbitration without the intervention of the Court), if there has been no reference to arbitration of the matter determined or if the award does not follow the reference unless the parties have ratified the award as made. Query—whether an appeal lies when there has been a reference and an award on such reference.

The exercise of the powers conferred by section 327, Civil Procedure Code, is a matter in the discretion of the Court, and a Court should refuse to exercise the powers and refer the applicant to a regular suit, when there is a serious dispute as to the fact of a submission having been made or an award delivered. IV.—APPEAL IN ARBITRATION CASES—contd.

Plaintiff and defendants executed a written agreement to refer their disputes to three arbitrators without making any provision that the award of the majority should be binding. Plaintiff applied to file the agreement under section 326, Act VIII of 1859, and an order of reference was made and award filed by two out of three arbitrators on 30th August 1877. On 11th October 1877, the date fixed for the next hearing of the case, defendants filed a petition, dated 1st idem, objecting to the award, and praying that it might be remitted, on the ground that the award of two out of three of the arbitrators was not binding. The Court ordered the petition to be filed, and gave judgment the same day in terms of the award, taking no notice of the objection beyond saying that it did not allege corruption. The defendants appealed to the Commissioner, who rejected the appeal as barred by section 522, Act X of 1877.

Held, by the Chief Court, that a judgment in terms of an award has not the attribute of finality unless the proceedings immediately preceding the decree have been strictly regular and all the conditions required by law satisfied; and that the decree having been passed without the Court considering the question raised by defendants, whether there was cause for remitting the award, the appeal was not barred under section 325, Act VIII of 1859, or section 522, Act X of 1877.

Held, further, that the legal effect of an agreement, where there is no provision that the award of the majority, shall be binding is that only a unanimous award is binding. HARDHYAN v. MEHR CHAND. 57 P R 1879

7. Arbitration—Act X of 1877, section 522—Judgment in accordance with award—Appeal on ground that defendants did not consent to arbitration.

IV.—APPEAL IN ARBITRATION CASES—contd.

Held, that where in a case which has been referred to arbitration, the Court has set aside the award on the ground of the misconduct of the arbitrators, and disposed of the case on the merits, an appeal will lie on the whole case, and the Appellate Court can, under section 591 of the Code of Civil Procedure consider whether the award was set aside on insufficient grounds, and if it come to the conclusion that the award was so set aside, can restore the award and pass judgment in accordance with it MUSSAMMAT BHOI v. SHER BAZ KHAN (No. 59 of 1875, Civil) approved. Held, by the Full Bench, that as by the provisions of section 506 of the Code of Civil Procedure the consent of all parties to a suit is a condition precedent to the jurisdiction of a Court to make an order of reference under section 508, therefore if only some of the parties consent, an award made upon such an order is not an award that renders a judgment or decree passed in accordance with it final as regards appeal under section 522, and it is open in such a case to any of the parties who consented to the reference to appeal from the decree on the ground that the award was passed upon an order of reference made without jurisdiction, because consent of some of the parties cannot give the Court a jurisdiction not given to it by law.

But held further, by the Division Bench (Plowden and Brandreth, JJ), that where some only of the parties to a suit submit to arbitration (the submission not being conditional upon the consent of the other parties), and an award follows on such submission, the proceedings are not void nor the award a nullity, but the award is good as evidence on behalf of the party in whose favour it is made, and such party is entitled to have a decree which has followed on such award upheld unless the opposite party can satisfy the Court that the award is invalid, that is to say, one to which as it stands the Court cannot or ought not to give effect. IV.—APPEAL IN ARBITRATION CASES—contd.

The decrees from which no appeal will lie, unless on the grounds specified in section 522 of the Civil Procedure Code, are only the decrees passed upon judgments in accordance with an award given under the provisions of that section.

Where therefore judgment was given in accordance with an award before the ten days allowed for an application to set aside the award had expired.

Held, that such judgment could not be regarded as one under section 522, and was therefore appealable. HURDEO v. THANA. 48 P R 1882

12. Objection to award on ground of misconduct of arbitrators—Omission by Court to investigate such objection—Finality of judgment in accordance with award—Act X of 1877, section 522.

The parties to a suit having referred the matter in dispute to arbitration, and an award having been filed, one of the defendants, within the period prescribed by law, filed an objection to the award on the ground of the arbitrators' misconduct, but the Court without investigating such objection passed judgment in accordance with the award. An appeal to the Deputy Commissioner was dismissed on the ground that as no evidence was offered in support of the allegations of misconduct contained in the petition, the application to set aside the award had been rightly refused. It appeared, however, that the defendant was not examined to ascertain whether she could give any evidence in support of her allegations of misconduct, nor apart from the judgment according to the award was there any order on the record refusing the application.

Held, that the Court could not properly have refused the application without enquiry into the allegations made and either ascertaining that the petitioner had no evidence to offer, or hearing her evidence and determining whether any misconduct was established on account of which the award should be set aside, and until it had refused the application, it could not give judgment upon the award under section 522 of the Code.

The Chief Court therefore remanded the case to the Court of first instance that the defendant's application might be disposed of and a fresh judgment passed, if the award was not set aside, according to the award, and if the award was set aside, upon such evidence as might be obtainable. the merits on the ground that he was not satisfied that the arbitrators had acted honestly in making their award, and he was therefore not prepared to accept it, held, that as, under the last clause of section 522 of the Civil Procedure Code, no appeal lies from a decree passed in accordance with an award except so far as it is in excess of, or not in accordance with, the award, and no objection of this nature was taken to the decree in the appeal to the lower Appellate Court, the judgment of that Court was therefore passed without jurisdiction and could give no jurisdiction to the Court of first instance to re-open the case. 14. Arbitration—Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877*), section* 522*—Award too indefinite to be capable of execution —Decree not in accordance with award.*

In a suit for ⅛th share in certain property left by the widow of one M. S., in which the defendants pleaded inter alia that the houses included in the suit were their own property, the parties agreed to refer the matter in dispute to the decision of four arbitrators, who eventually awarded the plaintiff a ⅓th share in all the houses left by the deceased. The arbitrators on being examined by the Court stated that out of 12 houses in the village, which the defendants claimed as their own, eight belonged to M. S., and the remaining four descended to the defendants from their father : whereupon the Court passed a decree to the effect that plaintiff was entitled to a ⅓th share of the houses left by M. S.

Held, that the case did not come before the Court as one governed by section 522 of the Code, in which no appeal lay, as there was no award in the sense in which that term is used in the Code, of a complete adjudication of the points referred to the arbitrators for decision and one capable of execution, and that therefore an appeal lay both on that ground and also on the further ground that the decree strictly speaking was not in accordance with the award as pronounced. 15. Arbitration—Reference by one out of three plaintiffs and the defendants—Finality of award—Act X of 1877, section 522*—Ratification by parties who did not join in reference—Estoppel.*

A suit by three plaintiffs, a father and his two sons, having been dismissed by the Court of first instance, all three plaintiffs appealed, and subsequently one of the appellants and the respondents joined in a reference to arbitration, on which an award in the respondents' favour eventually followed, in accordance with which a decree was passed. On second appeal, the two plaintiff-appellants, who did not join in the reference to arbitration, urged that the award did not bind them.

Held, that as the reference did not purport to have been made by all the appellants, the award was not final against any of them, though it was admissible in evidence against the plaintiff who was a party to the reference. Cheto Mull v. Mahoo Mull (No. 4 of 1882 Civil, F. B.) cited.

Held further, that to bind the appealing plaintiffs it was necessary to show that they ratified their co-plaintiff's act in referring the appeal to arbitration, or by their conduct induced the defendants to believe that they were consenting parties to the arbitration, though they had not formally joined in the reference, and were therefore estopped from contending that they were not parties to the arbitration : otherwise the reference to arbitration must be set aside as regards them. Mir Aman-ullah v. Chota Mirza (No. 67 of 1879, Civil), and Nek Mohamed v. Ahmad Ali (No. 53 of 1880, Civil) referred to. 16. Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877), sections 506, 508, 522*—Reference to arbitration in absence of one of the defendants—Finality of award following such reference—Appeal by plaintiff as to one portion of subject-matter of award—Validity of award as between parties who joined in the reference —Award separable into parts.*

A reference to arbitration was made in a suit in the absence of B. D., one of the defendants, the plaintiff and the other defendants joining in the reference. The Court of first instance passed a decree in accordance with the award, which dealt with the rights of the parties in three houses, two in Gujrat and one in Lahore. An appeal by the plaintiff to the Additional Commissioner with reference to one of the Gujrat houses, which was held not to be ancestral and to have become the property of B. D. and others by a gift from the late owners, having been dismissed, the plaintiff filed a second appeal in the Chief Court with regard to the same house in which he contended (among other pleas) that the award was not binding, as all the necessary parties did not join in the reference. At the hearing of this appeal it was admitted that B. D. had also appealed to the Additional Commissioner with reference to the house in Lahore, and that the Additional Commissioner had held that he was not bound by the award, and had accepted the appeal and remanded the case with reference to that house, and that against that order there had been no appeal.

Held, that the decree based on the award was not final under Chapter XXXVII of the Civil Procedure Code, as the reference did not comply with the provisions of that chapter, but the parties to the reference were competent to refer the matter in dispute, as between themselves, to arbitration, and having agreed to do so, were bound by the result of the arbitration unless they could show that the award was open to just exceptions. Cheto Mull v. Mahoo Mull (No. 4 of 1882 F. B.) referred to.

With regard to the objection that there was an understanding that all parties should join, and that the plaintiff should not be bound by an award by which B. D. was not bound, held, that as the plaintiff must have been aware that B. D. had not signed the application for a reference to arbitration, and it was for him to object, if he did not wish the arbitration to proceed until this defect in the reference had been remedied, and as the award was separable into parts which were independent of each other, this objection could not be allowed to prevail ; though if the award in respect to each house had not been separable from the remainder of the award, as would have been the case if the arbitrators had given the plaintiff his share in the whole property out of one or more of the houses instead of dividing each separately, is would have been a valid ground of objection that B. D. had been allowed to re-open the award as to one portion of the property. HAKAM RAI v. JHANDA MAL. 130 P R 1883

A decree having been passed in accordance with the award of the majority of arbitrators appointed in the case, some of the defendants appealed, urging inter alia that they did not join in the application for reference to arbitration, not having been present when the application was presented, and that their names were entered without their sanction.

Held, that, if the above allegation was correct, there was no reference to arbitration such as is contemplated in Chapter XXXVII of the Code, and an appeal would therefore not be barred. Cheto Mull v. Mahoo Mull (No. 4 of 1882, Civil, F. 21. Arbitration—Award—Decree of Appeal late Court in accordance with award—Finality of decree—Further appeal—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, sections 521, 522, 582.

Held, that when a Court of first instance wrongly sets aside an arbitration award and passes a decree against the terms thereof, and a Court of appeal dealing with the merits of the case comes to the conclusion that the award was not open to any such objections as are contemplated by section 521 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and upon that finding passes a decree strictly in accordance with the terms of the award, such appellate decree is entitled to the same finality as a decree of the first Court would have had under the last paragraph of section 522, and cannot be made the subject of a further appeal.

Held, that an appeal under section 588 (26) of the Code of Civil Procedure is limited solely to the question of the correctness of the order passed under section 518, and that it is not open to the Court hearing such appeal to enter into the question of corruption or misconduct of an arbitrator except as concerns his having acted ultra vires. A petition filed by the appellant for dissolution of marriage having been dismissed by a Single Bench of the Chief Court in the exercise of its original jurisdiction, on the 12th May 1902; an appeal without either a copy of the judgment or decree was filed on the 7th June 1902. The correspondent objected that the appeal was barred by limitation; 1st on account of the appeal having been filed beyond the time allowed by law; and 2nd on account of the want of either a copy of the decree or judgment having been filed with the grounds of appeal as required by section 541 of the Civil Procedure Code. The appellant's counsel urged that, as neither he nor his client were aware of the date on which the judgment was to be delivered or were aware of it until just before the appeal was filed, asked the Court to excuse the delay in filing of the appeal under the provisions of sections 5 and 5 (a) of the Limitation Act, and that he might also be allowed to file a copy of the decree and judgment.

Held, (i) that as under section 16 of the Punjab Courts Act it was unnecessary for a Judge of the Chief Court to pronounce his judgment in open Court or on a date appointed and announced to the parties, the appellant was not entitled to claim consideration on that account as a matter of right and that as the appeal was filed after the period allowed by article 151 of the Limitation Act, it was barred by time;

(ii) that as an Appellate Court could not dispense with the presentation of a copy of the decree appealed against the appeal filed by the appellant was not a good appeal in law;

(iii) that when an appeal is filed after it is time-barred and the appellant desires to take the benefit of the provisions of section 5 or 5 (a) of the Limitation Act, the cause of the delay should be stated at the time the appeal is filed. C. v. C. AND B.

8. Appeal—Presentation of appeal beyond time—Sufficient cause for admitting appeals after time—Limitation Act, 1877, section 5.

Plaintiffs, the daughters of defendant No. 2, instituted a suit for a declaration that defendant No. 1 was not and could not be validly adopted by defendant No. 2, and that certain alienations made by the latter in favour of the former would not affect their reversionary rights. The appellant being a minor was represented by his adoptive mother (defendant No. 2) as his guardian, but at the request of a relation of the minor the Nazir of the Court was subsequently appointed guardian, who at the first hearing stated his inability to produce any evidence owing to the illness of the minor, and again on the adjourned hearing on the ground that the minor who possessed the necessary information had not been to see him. On 30th November 1900 the District Judge gave judgment for the plaintiff. On the 2nd January following the Nazir made an application under section 108, Civil Procedure Code, to have this decree set aside, giving as his reason for failure to produce evidence that the minor had been ill and unable to instruct him. After notice to the plaintiffs on 20th March 1901 this application was rejected on the ground that the decree not being an ex-parte one the petitioner's remedy was either to apply for review of the judgment or appeal to the superior Court. The minor on the 17th June 1901 filed an appeal against the original decree to the Chief Court, and in explanation of the limitation having been allowed to expire contended that the period taken up in conducting the proceeding to set aside the ex-parte decree should be deducted under section 5 of the Limitation Act. It was also submitted that he being a ward of the Court was engaged from 1st April to 17th May 1901 in getting an order from the District Judge declaring the termination of his adoptive mother's guardianship and that the was also imprisoned by a Criminal Court at the instance of his adoptive mother's agent and was only released on the 13th June, and that, therefore, he was also entitled to a deduction of the time that had intervened between the date he applied to the District Judge for getting himself declared of age to enable him to act for himself and the date of his release from the prison.

Held, that the appellant had shown sufficient cause within the meaning of section 5 and was fully entitled to claim the benefit to that section, and that the appeal though filed after the prescribed period should be admitted to a hearing under the peculiar circumstances of the case. The time occupied in attempting to get the ex-parte decree set aside and in conducting proceedings before the District Judge for getting himself declared of age and also the period during which he was imprisoned ought to be deducted in computing the time that had occurred between the date of the judgment and the date on which the appeal was filed.

An application for leave to appeal in forma pauperis was presented by the appellant within the prescribed period of limitation. After inquiry as to the alleged pauperism the Judge rejected the petition, but granted him two months' time to pay the Court-fees. The Court-fees was duly paid within the period allowed by the Judge and the appeal was Held, that the appeal was not barred by limitation. The prosecution of an application for leave to appeal as a pauper was sufficient cause within the meaning of section 5 of the Limitation Act for not presenting the appeal in time.

Held that an appeal against an order made in the matter of the winding up of a Company under the Indian Companies Act, 1882, ought to be filed with such promptitude as to render service of notice upon the respondent possible within the three weeks allowed by section 169 of the Act, and the Appellate Court will not extend the time for appealing unless the delay is caused either by the conduct of the respondent or by mistakes of the officials of the Appellate Court.

A person appealing under this section should not be allowed to avail himself of an extension by reason of his ignorance of the practice or the comparative novelty of the special procedure prescribed by it.

The provisions of sections 5 and 12 of the Limitation Act, are not applicable to the computation of the period of limitation prescribed by section 169. DAULAT RAM v. THE WOOLLEN MILLS COY., LD., DELHI.

2. Effect of withdrawal of one of two plaintiffs on appeal.

H. S. had two wives; by the first, he had two sons, A. S. and P. S., and by the second also, two sons, J. S. and G. S. In 1856 A. S. and P. S. separated from J. S. and G. S. In 1858, P. S. died leaving a widow, who took a life interest in her husband's property; A. S. also died leaving two sons, Achra Singh and Sampuran Singh. P. S.'s widow, alienated a portion of the property of her deceased husband. J. S. and Sampuran Singh sued for a declaratory decree protecting their rights as reversioners, and pronouncing the sale invalid as against them. The Lower Appellate Court decided in favour of the claim. On defendants' appeal to the Chief Court, Sampuran Singh withdrew from the suit.

Held, by Boulnois and Campbell, JJ., that as Sampuran Singh had joined in the suit, the sale must be declared void, whether or not J. S. had any locus standi as a reversioner and that Sampuran Singh's withdrawal from the case at the last stage could not affect the decree of the Lower Court.

Held, by Lindsay, J., that J. S. was not entitled to sue, inasmuch as a disassociated half-brother had no right during the life of the members of an associated family to question the alienation by the widow of a deceased member of that family, unless the living members sanctioned his action and relinquished their own right. jected the application, recording that, "the fact that the appellant's son was ill did not excuse the pleader for not attending. On special appeal the Chief Could held, that it was sufficient for the appellant to explain his own default; he was not bound to account for the non-attendance of his pleader. Where a Court was bound, under section 346, Act VIII of 1859, to dismiss an appeal for default of appellant's appearance and instead of so doing, went into the merits and dismissed the appeal held, that in hearing the appeal, the Court had exercised a jurisdiction not vested in it by law, and that, either under section 35 of Act XXIII of 1861, or section 44 of Act IV of 1866, the Chief Court could set aside the order dismissing the appeal on the merits. 5. Dismissal for default at Preliminary hearing—Act VIII of 1859, section 346—Act IX of 1873, section 7.

On 23rd May 1877, appellant filed an appeal in the Judicial Assistant's Court at Umballa, which was ordered to be registered and brought up with the file of the case on 13th June. On that date appellant being absent, the appeal was dismissed for default under section 346, Act VIII of 1859, though no notice had issued to respondents, and the date was only fixed under section 7, Act IX of 1873, for hearing appellant or his pleader in support of his petition of appeal. Held, that the order of dismissal was illegal.

An Appellate Court is only competent to dismiss an appeal for default under Section 346, Act VIII of 1859, when a date has been fixed under Sections 344 and 345 for hearing the appeal.

There is nothing in section 7, Act IX of 1873, which renders it obligatory upon an appellant whose appeal has been registered to appear in support of his petition, or which authorizes the Appellate Court to dismiss the appeal for default. KIRPA RAM v. JAMNA DASS.

7. Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877), section 544—Appeal presented by one of several appellants without a power-of-attorney from others.

M. S., one of several defendants, presented an appeal on 31st October 1877 against an order, dated 30th August 1877, to the Commissioner's Court, which was returned by the Clerk of the Court on the ground that M. S. held no mukhtarnama from the other appellants. The appeal was again presented on 21st November 1877, by G. S. another defendant, who held a mukhtarnama from all the defendants, and was rejected by the Commissioner on 22nd November 1877, as being out of time.

Held, that the appeal of M. S. ought to have been received and laid before the Commissioner for orders, and that as the decree of the first Court was against the defendants upon a common ground, it was competent to the Commissioner, under section 544, Act X of 1877 to hear and determine the appeal on its merits on the petition of M. S. alone, and to make an order which should ensue to the benefit of his co-defendants. GANDA SINGH v. KISHEN SINGH 6 P R 1879

8. Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877), section 551—Dismissal of appeal without notice to respondent Court bound to record reasons—Practice—Remand.

Held, that a Court confirming a decision appealed against under section 551, Act X of 1877, without sending notice to the respondent, is bound to record a statement of the grounds of its order, as well as the order itself.

Where an Appellate Court has omitted to record its reasons for dismissal, the proper course to be pursued is, when it is practicable to do so, to return the case to the Judge who disposed of it for a statement of the reasons of his order, the appeal meanwhile being retained in the Court ordering the remand.

Where the Judge has been removed to another district, the proper order is to reverse the order of dismissal, and direct the appeal to be re-heard, and fresh orders to be passed with reasons for such order by the Judge for the time being of the Court to which the appeal was presented. 10. Dismissal of appeal on preliminary ground—Cross objection—Act X of 1877, section 561.

Where the defendant's appeal was dismissed as barred by limitation, sufficient cause not being shown for its not being filed within the 90 days prescribed by law, held, that a cross objection filed by the plaintiff (a portion of whose claim only had been decreed by the Lower Court) could not be entertained, as her preliminary objection to the hearing of the appeal having prevailed, the appeal had not been "heard" within the meaning of section 561 of Act X of 1877. 11. Objection first taken in appeal to admissibility in evidence of documents not filed with plaint.

Held, that an objection to the admissibility of the documents sued upon by the plaintiff on the ground that they were not filed with the plaints, the said documents having been admitted by the Court without objection, and the objection not having been taken in the grounds of appeal to the lower Appellate Court, though it was urged in the argument, is not one which can be taken on second appeal. Where in an appeal from an order passed under section 312 of the Civil Procedure Code, rejecting an application to set aside an execution sale, it appeared that the judgment-debtor, the appellant, had not made the auction-purchaser a party to the proceedings, held, that the appeal must be dismissed, as the said auction-purchaser was a necessary party in order to enable the Court to effectually adjudicate upon all the questions involved in the application, and as the appellant by his own laches had omitted to serve him with notice under the appeal and as the period for appeal had long since expired, there was no valid reason as against the auction-purchaser for extending the prescribed period, and permitting an amendment of the appeal. 14. Appeal filed against decree inadvertently passed against deceased defendant—Effect of decree passed against non-existing person—Proper order to pass in appeal filed by person calling himself the legal representative of the deceased defendant.

Plaintiff having obtained a decree in the first Court, the defendant appealed to the Commissioner who eventually accepted the appeal and dismissed the plaintiff's suit. From this decree one N., alleging himself to be the legal representative of the original plaintiff, whose death he set out in his petition of appeal as having occurred four days before the date of the Commissioner's decree, preferred an appeal in the Chief Court, and was met with the preliminary objection on behalf of the defendant-respondent that he had no locus standi with reference to his own allegations in the petition of appeal. It was admitted that no step was taken in the Commissioner's Court by either party to bring the name of any representative of the deceased plaintiff on the record, and further it appeared that the appeal filed from the Commissioner's decree was upon the merits, and not for the purpose of setting aside the decree as passed against a non-existing person.

Held, that no effect could be given to a decree passed by a Court against a non-existing person, such a decree being one passed in excess of the Court's jurisdiction, although passed inadvertently without notice of the death of the respondent; that the proper course for the person calling himself the legal representative of the deceased was not to appeal on the merits to the superior Court, and that the objection taken must be allowed and the appeal rejected. 15. Appeal from order of remand under section 562, Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882)—Appeal filed after completion of proceedings under remand order—Refusal to hear appeal.

Plaintiff's claim having been dismissed by the District Judge, he appealed to the Divisional Court who remanded the case under section 562 of the Civil Procedure Code to the District Court for re-decision. Both parties having appeared before the District Judge and asked to be heard, the case was argued and again decided against the plaintiff. Plantiff then preferred an appeal to the Chief Court against the order of the Divisional Bench remanding the case, on the ground that the order under section 562 was not justified inasmuch as the case had not been decided on a preliminary point by the first Court.

Held, that the circumstances of the case were such as to justify the Chief Court in refusing to hear the appeal at the present juncture, and that the appeal should be

Where on an appeal in a Small Cause not exceeding Rs. 500 in value, a District Judge remands the case under section 562 of the Civil Procedure Code, the decision given by the District Judge upon the merits of the preliminary question is not open to be attacked upon an appeal against the order under section 562, and the only question open in such appeal is whether the right procedure has been followed in remanding under section 562, Civil Procedure Code. 17. Changing nature of claim in appeal—Refusal to allow.

The suit as laid in the plaint being one for entry on immovable property upon establishment of proprietary title, the appellant in the Chief Court set it up as one for recovery of possession in right of lien for unpaid dower. 18. Decree for pre-emption—Civil Procedure Code, sections 214 and 244.

A successful plaintiff in a pre-emption suit paid part of the purchase money in foreign circle currency notes. The Court in the first instance accepted the notes in payment without any objection, and afterwards allowed the plaintiff two more days to supply currency notes of the Lahore Circle, or other legal tender, which order was complied with.

Held, that the order of the lower Court was correct. Currency notes are money in the ordinary acceptation of the term, although they may be notes of a different Circle from that in which they are tendered. The words "purchase money" are not defined, and there is nothing either in section 17, Punjab Laws Act, or in section 214, Civil Procedure Code, 1882, to put a restricted or technical meaning upon them. Punjab Record, No. 70 of 1890, distinguished.

Held, that when an application for revision has been admitted by a Judge in Chambers as a further appeal on the ground that there was a question of law involved, under section 40, sub-section (2) of the Punjab Courts Act, 1884, the respondents are not bound by such ex-parte order, but are entitled to call it in question and show it was erroneous, and that a further appeal did not lie, and was admitted through mistake or misconception.

The Divisional Bench, finding that there was no question of law involved, dismissed the appeal on that ground. FATTEH SINGH v. HARNAM SINGH. 80 P R 1894

20. Civil Procedure Code, 1882, sections 36, 541—Presentation of memo. of appeal by pleader's clerk—Legal Practitioners' Act, 1879, section 10—"Recognized agent."

The Code of Civil Procedure does not provide for the delegation by a duly appointed pleader of any portion of his duties to others and, therefore, the presentation of a memorandum of appeal by the clerk of such pleader is not permissible.

Where, however, the appellant personally accompanied the clerk and authorized him to present the memorandum of appeal, held, that the presentation was valid, inasmuch as in the Punjab, a person specially authorized by a party to appear and act on his behalf in any particular suit is a recognised agent within the meaning of section 36 of the Code, and it is not necessary that the authorization should be in writing. MULA MAL v. ATMA RAM. 6 P R 1896

21. Plaint, signing and verification of—Plaint signed and verified by some only of the plaintiffs—Objection to such plaint taken on appeal—Procedure—Civil Procedure Code 1882, sections 51, 578—"Co-Plaintiffs."

Where, in a suit instituted by four plaintiffs the plaint was signed and verified by two only, but was further verified as being true to his client's knowledge by the pleader for the other two plaintiffs, whose names were added after the verification, it was objected on behalf of one S. S. (who had been impleaded as a co-defendant in accordance with the order of the Appellate Court remanding the case for that purpose) that the plaint had not been signed or verified by all of the plaintiffs and the suit could not be considered to have been instituted on behalf of them. The lower Court, thereupon, fixed an issue regarding the question and finally decided that the plaint had been duly signed and verified, and dismissed the suit as against S. S., but gave a decree against the other defendant, D. S., who appealed therefrom to the District Judge and urged, inter alia, that the plaint had not been duly signed or verified. The District Judge held that the plaint had not been duly signed; that the verification by the pleader was probably sufficient; that the plaint could not be returned for amendment, and that the suit must be dismissed in toto, on the ground that as only two of the plaintiffs had signed the plaint, the suit must be considered as having been instituted on behalf of the four whose names appeared in the plaint, and that when a person sues on behalf of another, and the objection has been taken in the Court of first instance, the suit must be dismissed altogether on appeal. Plaintiffs applied to the Chief Court on the revision side, and it was Held, that there being no rule that a person named as a co-plaintiff is not to be treated as a plaintiff unless he signs and verifies the plaint, the two plaintiffs who did not sign the plaint were co-plaintiffs from the very first and that, therefore, the two other plaintiffs did not sue on their behalf.

Held, therefore, that the District Judge had erred in dismissing the suit on the ground stated.

Held, further, that although the plaint should have been signed by all the plaintiffs as required by section 51, Civil Procedure Code, and the first Court should, of its own motion, have returned it for amendment, the verification which was made by two of the plaintiffs who were acquainted with the facts of the case, was probably sufficient for the purposes of the said section.

It is the duty of a Court on receiving a plaint to satisfy itself that it has been properly signed and verified, but when once a plaint has been admitted, issues drawn, and one or two judgments passed without any objection having been raised to the informal character of the signing and verification of the plaint, such objections when raised at the eleventh hour should not be attended to if they are of a purely formal character not going to the root of the suit. *I. Plaintiff in execution of a decree against one D. having attached certain land belonging to the latter, the defendant in the present suit became surety for D. for the payment of Rs. 50 a year. The Tahsildar in forwarding the security to the execution Court recommended that should there be any default by the surety in paying the annual sum, the decree-holder should obtain possession of the land. The execution Court, apparently considering the security sufficient, filed the proceedings and made no orders on the Tahsildar's recommendation. The surety made default in paying the Rs. 50 due for Sambat 1952, and plaintiff sued him in respect thereof. The first Court held that D. should have been made a co-defendant and that plaintiff should also have sued for the possession of the land attached by him as aforesaid. It, therefore, returned the plaint for amendment. Plaintiff appealed to the District Judge, who remanded the case under section 562 for decision on the merits.

Held, that as no decree had been passed by the first Court and the appeal to the District Judge was under section 588 (6) of the Civil Procedure Code, the District Judge erred in quoting section 562 of the Code in his order, which should simply have set aside that of the first Court and directed it to decide the case on the plaint as it stood.

But held, that the order of the first Court in returning the plaint being wrong, the error in the order of the District Judge was immaterial. JAHAN KHAN v. CHANDA SINGH. 59 P R 1896

23. Jurisdiction—Value of suit—Course of appeal.

Plantiff sued for return of an ornament, worth Rs. 726, but pawned for Rs. 400, and offered to pay Rs. 502, the amount to which the debt had run up, and in the alternative asked for a decree for Rs. 224, being the difference between the value of the ornament and the amount of his debt. The suit was tried by a Munsiff of the 2nd class, who gave plaintiff a decree for Rs. 211. Defendants appealed to the District Judge, who held the value of the suit to be above Rs. 500 (the limit of the Munsiff's powers), quashed the proceedings and sent the case for trial to a Munsiff of the 1st class. The latter having dismissed the suit, plaintiff appealed to the Divisional Judge, who refused to hear it on the ground that the appeal lay to the District Judge, the suit being under Rs. 500, in value.

Held, that the order of the Divisional Judge was right, and that the orders of the District Judge refusing to entertain the appeal and of the Munsiff of the 1st class dismissing the suit must be set aside. NIHAL SINGH v. UDHO. 62 P R 1896

24. Dissolution of partnership—Jurisdiction of Court—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, section 17 (3) (ii)—Misjoinder of causes of action—No appeal from preliminary decree within fixed period, effect of, as regards appeal from final decree—Representative of deceased partner, liabitity of—Presumption against wrong-doer—Comparison of handwriting by experts.

Plantiffs instituted a suit in the District Court of Ludhiana for dissolution of partnership, a settlement of accounts and a decree for whatever might be found due to them from defendants, which they stated to be in all probability a sum of Rs. 11,500. They joined as defendants both the remaining partners, and also the representatives of a deceased partner. Defendants pleaded, inter alia, that as the parties were all residents of Jullundur District, the Court had no jurisdiction to entertain the suit, and that there was a misjoinder of causes of action. The suit having been decreed by the District Court, defendants appealed to the Chief Court.

A preliminary objection by plaintiffs to the effect that inasmuch as defendants had not appealed from the preliminary decree of the lower Court within the prescribed period, the appeal from the final decree was barred, having been overruled.

Held, that as the contract of partnership was entered into by the parties at Ludhiana, where balance sheets of accounts were prepared between the parties, and plaintiffs had a share in a shop there which carried on the same business as the firm of the parties the District Court of Ludhiana had jurisdiction in the suit under section 17 (3) (ii) of the Civil Procedure Code.

Held further, that the defendants, whether they were partners or representatives of partners, were necessary parties to the suit as framed, and that, therefore, there was no misjoinder of causes of action.

A representative of a deceased partner is liable to the extent of the deceased's assets in his hands, and this is ordinarily a matter for inquiry in execution of decree, but there is no absolute impropriety in its being decided prior to decree.

The Chief Court finding that the deceased partner had previously to his death removed an unknown quantity of partnership property from the shop at Ludhíana, and that he had died a few days therafter, concluded that his representatives had come into possession of the whole of the property so removed, and further finding that the shop books had come into the hands of the said representatives and were being wilfully withheld by them, held that, in the absence of trustworthy evidence as to the amount of assets in their hands, the defendants were liable to the full extent of the plantiffs' claim.

25. Appeal and cross-objections—Power of appellant to defeat cross-objections by withdrawing from appeal—Case remanded to lower Appealate Court under section 562, Civil Procedure Code—Default of appellant —Proper order for lower Appellate Court to pass.

The first Court having decreed plaintiff's suit for pre-emption at Rs. 492, plaintiff appealed to the Divisional Court as to the price, and defendant cross-objected that plaintiff's suit had not been filed by a duly qualified agent. The Divisional Court dismissed the suit on the latter ground, whereupon plaintiffs appealed to the Chief Court, which remanded the case to the lower Appellate Court under section 562 of the Civil Procedure Code, for decision as to whether plaintiff's alleged agent had been duly authorised to institute the suit, and for disposal of the appeal if the suit were found to be within limitation. At the date fixed for hearing on the remand, plaintiff failled to appear, whereupon the lower Appellate Court passed an order to the effect that the appeal must be dismissed for plaintiff's default, and that, therefore, defendant's cross-objection failed and could not be entertained.

Held, that inasmuch as the case had been remanded by the Chief Court merely in order to give plaintiff an opportunity of proving that his alleged agent was duly authorized to institute the suit, the lower Appellate Court should have held, on plaintiff's default that the previous order of the Divisional Court stood.

Held further, that when once an appeal has come to a hearing, the Court is seized of the appeal, and an appellant cannot in such case defeat a cross-objection by withdrawing from the appeal. MUHAMMAD HUSSAIN v. ABDUL RAHMAN. 86 P R 1898

26. Civil Procedure Code, 1882, sections 562 and 588 (28)—Appeal from order of an Appellate Court—Preliminary point—Court not bound by findings of fact of Court below.

Plaintiff sued for possession of certain land mortgaged to him by defendant No. 1, and joined defendants Nos. 2 and 3 as subsequent mortgagees in possession. Defendant No. 1 pleaded relinquishment by plaintiff and produced a receipt; defendants Nos. 2 and 3 pleaded ignorance of plaintiff's mortgage. The first Court without entering into the pleas of defendants Nos. 2 and 3 dismissed the suit on the ground that the plaintiff had relinquished the land in suit. The Divisional Judge reversed his decree as he considered that the receipt produced by defendant No. 1 ought to have been registered, and remanded the case under section 562, Civil Procedure Code.

Held, that as the suit had been disposed of upon a preliminary point, the remand under section 562 was right.

Held also, following the Full Bench ruling in Bhai Wazira v. Chuhar Mal, that the Chief Court when hearing an appeal under section 588 (28), Civil Procedure Code, is not bound to accept the finding of the lower Appellate Court.

27. Appeal from order of returning plaint for amendment under section 588*—Dismissal of such appeal—Right of party aggrieved to attack the order agin when appealing from the final decree.*

Held, that every order passed in an appeal under the provisions of section 588 being final, a party who avails himself of the right of appeal provided by that section cannot raise the same question again in an appeal from the final decree.

Section 591 only provides for appeals from decrees attacking the correctness of orders which are not appealable under section 588, or which have not been appealed under that section. Venkatapathi Naidu v. Tirumalai

Where in a suit for pre-emption of a shop the vendee's main defence was that by custom prevailing in the locality where the property in dispute was situate, an owner of the premises at the back of the property sold had no right and the case was fought out from beginning to end on that line of defence and ultimately decreed against him, held, that he should not be allowed to change his case entirely and to come in and set up a new and inconsistent plea in appeal on the ground that no custom for pre-emption in respect of sale of shops existed in such locality. In a suit for possession of immovable property under a deed of conditional sale said to have been foreclosed under Regulation XVII of 1806 the defendants practically admitted the validity of the notice issued under the Regulation, their main contention being that no demand previous to the issue of the notice had been made. The Court having found this point against the defence decreed the claim. On appeal the mortgagors challenged the validity of the notice on the grounds, amongst others, that neither khasra and khewat numbers nor the principal and interest were specified in it, and that it did not bear the proper official signature of the Judge inasmuch as his official designation was in print instead of being in the Judge's own hand.

Held, per Johnstone, J. (Rattigan, J., doubting as to this) that in the above circumstances an appellant should not be permitted to plead the aforesaid defects in the notice for the first time in appeal. BHAGIRATH v. NATH MAL.

Mutation proceedings have no judicial character. The process is a mere declaration of fact. It is the entry in a register of the name of the proprietor of the land, and the object of the proceeding is to keep the revenue registers up to date in order that the Collector may know whom to look to as responsible for the payment of revenue. VIII.—APPEAL—SECOND.

1. Second regular appeal.

A second regular appeal will lie in cases of the nature cognizable by Courts of Small Causes. DEVI DITTA MULL v. GOLAB SINGH. 48 P R 1869

2. To bar a second regular appeal, the concurrence of two Courts must be absolute in regard to all substantial rights dependent on fact, and a concurrence of the Courts of 1st and 2nd instance as to a portion of a plaintiff's claim does not deprive him of a second regular appeal in regard to the whole claim. Plaintiff sued for possession of 224 kanals of land in the Court of the Tahsildar, who decreed 10 kanals to plaintiff and dismissed his suit as to the residue. Plaintiff appealed to the Deputy Commissioner in respect of the 214 kanals disallowed by the Tahsildar, and the defendant also appealed from the order decreeing to plaintiff 10 kanals. Plaintiff's appeal was dismissed, and defendant's accepted. The suit being dismissed, plaintiff then appealed from the whole of the Deputy Commissioner's decision to the Commissioner, who held that two orders having been passed by the lower Appellate Court, one appeal would not lie from both, and that, so far as the 214 kanals were concerned, a second regular appeal would not lie, in consequence of the concurrence of the two lower Courts, but that plaintiff was at liberty to appeal in respect of the 10 kanals as to which the lower Courts had differed. Plaintiff accordingly appealed to the Commissioner as to the 10 kanals only, and preferred a separate appeal to the Chief Court with regard to the 214 kanals.—

Held, that this concurrence by two Courts as to a portion of plaintiff's claim did not bar a regular appeal in regard to the whole claim. NIGHAHYA v. JULLA. 76 P R 1869

3. Receiving a second appeal—What amounts to.

An appeal was presented to the Clerk of the Commissioner's Court, registered, and sent on to the Commissioner, who rejected the appeal without hearing the appellant.

Held that the Commissioner was bound, under section 7 of Act VII of 1868, to fix a date for hearing the appellant as under the circumstances the appeal had been "received" within the meaning of section 5 of the Act. BULUB DASS v. SOOLTAN MOHAMMED. 3 P R 1871

4. Plaintiff sued for the release of certain property attached in execution as the property of his brother. The Tahsildar, holding the property to be joint, and on that ground not liable to attachment, decreed plaintiff's claim. The Deputy Commissioner on appeal also found the property to be joint, but holding that the share of plaintiff's brother was liable to attachment, dismissed the suit, held that the plaintiff was entitled to a second regular appeal to the Commissioner to whom it would be competent to question the fact upon which the two Lower Courts had concurred, viz., of the property being joint. DEVI DITTA v. JHUNDU. 29 P R 1873

5. "Merits of the case"—section 5, Act IX of 1873.

Plaintiff sued for possession of certain land and the defendant pleaded—first that the land was his as the adopted son of plaintiff's deceased husband; and, secondly, that the land had been devised to him by the deceased. The first Court found both points in favour of the defendant; the lower Appellate Court found the adoption not proved, but concurred with the original Court as to the will; both Courts thus dismissing plaintiff's suit. Held, that a second regular appeal would not lie to the Chief Court. (BOULNOIS, J., dissenting). MUSSAMMAT RUKAN DEVI v. JASWANT RAI. 88 P R 1875

6. Point material to the merits.

The Original Court found that plaintiff was entitled to rights of occupancy under section 5, clause 3, Tenancy Act; the Deputy Commissioner on defendant's appeal held that the plaintiff came under section 8 of the Act. The additional Commissioner rejected the appeal of defendant on the ground that the Deputy Commissioner had not modified the original decision on a point material to the merits of the case. Held, by the Chief Court that the Additional Commissioner was wrong, and that he must hear and determine the appeal of defendant SANDHI v. GANGA RAM. 11 P R 1876

7. Concurrence of two Courts—Section 353, Civil Procedure Code.

Plaintiff sued as mortgagee for the mortgaged property on the ground that defendant had failed to repay the principal and to pay rent by way of interest as agreed upon. The defendant pleaded that he had redeemed the property by payment of the debt, and that if he had not, plaintiff's claim was barred by limitation, as defendant had not paid any rent for upwards of twelve years and had held adversely. The original Court decided the first issue only, and finding defendant had not redeemed the mortgage, decreed for plaintiff. On defendant's appeal, the Lower Appellate Court concurred with the original Court that the redemption of the mortgage was not proved, and found, as to the second issue, that there had been payments of rent within twelve years, and no adverse possession on the part of defendants, and accordingly dismissed the appeal. Defendant further appealed to the Chief Court.

Per Campbell, J. As two Courts had not concurred as to the facts relating to the second issue (only one Court having gone into and determined that issue), the Chief Court should accept the defendant's appeal, in order that the Lower Appellate Court might remand the case to the original Court for a finding on the point left undetermined by the latter Court. An Appellate Court cannot find as to a fact which the Court below has not touched, but should refer an issue to the Lower Court, and on a return of the finding should either concur in or dissent from that finding; in the latter case, a second regular appeal would lie, in the former, the finding as to the fact would be conclusive.

Per Boulnois and Lindsay, JJ. The procedure of the lower Appellate Court could not be interfered with; it was competent to that Court, under Section 353, Civil Procedure Code, to come to a finding upon a fact left untouched by the original Court, if there was sufficient evidence on the record; and Act IX of 1873 (Punjab Appeals' Act) did not alter the procedure. Defendant's appeal dismissed. GANDA SINGH v. HARSA SINGH. 79 P R 1876

8. Regular Appeal—Modification of decision of first Court.

Plaintiff sued to cancel a deed of sale executed by a Hindu widow. The first Court held that the sale was invalid, for the reasons that the property was joint and the widow was not entitled to a life tenure, and that there was no legal necessity; the lower Appellate Court held the sale to be void, as there was no legal necessity for it. The defendant (the purchaser) appealed to the Chief Court, and the plaintiffs (the relations of the widow) preferred a cross objection under Section 348, Civil Procedure Code, alleging that the property was joint as found by the first Court. Held, that plaintiffs were entitled to a regular appeal on the question of the jointness of the property, and could take the cross-objection. NATHU MULL v. GANDA SINGH. 104 P R 1876

9. Modification of decision of first Court by Appellate Court.

Plaintiff, alleging herself to be the lawful widow of Hyder Ali, deceased, sued for her share in his property. In a former suit her son, Azim Ali, was declared the legitimate son by acknowledgment of Hyder Ali, deceased. The Court of first instance held that the acknowledgment by Hyder Ali of Azim Ali, as his son raised a legal presumption of the plaintiff having been married to Hyder Ali rebuttable only on the ground of legal impossibility which impossibility was not shown to exist. It accordingly held plaintiff to have been the lawful wife of Hyder Ali and gave plaintiff a decree.

The Additional Commissioner, on appeal, disagreed with the first Court, holding the presumption to be only one of fact, and not of law, and went into independent evidence on the point as to whether plaintiff was or was not acknowledged as wife by Hyder Ali. Finding plaintiff had been so acknowledged, the Additional Commissioner maintained the first Court's decree. Thereupon the defendants filed a second regular appeal in the Chief Court.

Held, that the defendants were not entitled to a second regular appeal. A party is only entitled to a second regular appeal under section 5, Act IX of 1873, when he is aggrieved by and seeks to impugn the portion of the decision of the first Appellate Court which modifies the decision of the Court of first instance. MUSSAMMAT JANI BEGAM v. MUSSAMMAT MUNNI. 71 P R 1877

10. Act IX of 1873, section 5—Modification on point material to merits of case.

Plaintiff in the first Court obtained a decree for possession of land on payment of compensation to defendants for a building thereon, the materials of which however defendants were allowed the option of removing in lieu of compensation. The plaintiffs appealed to the Judicial Assistant who modified the order of the first Court by setting aside that part of it awarding compensation, reserving liberty to the defendants to remove the materials of the building. At the same time the Judicial Assistant dismissed a cross-appeal brought by defendants.

Held, that the Judicial Assistant's decision on plaintiff's appeal modified the decision of the first Court on a point material to the merits of the case, and therefore, under section 5, Act IX of 1873, a second regular appeal on the whole case lay to the Commissioner. ILAHI v. SADHARA. 57 P R 1878

11. Act XVII of 1877, section 38—Modification of decree.

J. F. claimed a right of pre-emption in respect of certain land sold by S. K. to P. The first Court decreed the claim on payment of Rs. 215. S. K. and P. appealed to the Deputy Commissioner, who modified the decree of the first Court so far as to decree pre-emption on payment of Rs 260. Thereupon S. K. and P. filed a special appeal in the Chief Court.

Held, that as the Deputy Commissioner's decision modified the decree of the first Court on a material point, a second regular appeal lay to the Commissioner. SANDHI KHAN v. JALAL-UD-DIN KHAN. 23 P R 1879

12. The first Court (Munsiff) decreed Rs. 139. The Judicial Assistant on appeal, while dismissing defendant's appeal to his Court, modified the first Court's decree to the extent of Rs. 5-14-0.

Held, that under section 38, Act XVII of 1877, a second regular appeal lay to the Commissioner the decree of the first Court having been modified by the Judicial Assistant on appeal. BUTA v. MUSSAMMAT KHEMO. 63 P R 1879

13. Act XVII of 1877, section 38—Modification of order of first Court.

Where the first Court gave a decree against 26 defendants and the Judicial Assistant Commissioner on the appeal of all the defendants reversed the decree so far as it affected 5 of the defendants.

Held, that a second regular appeal on the part of the remaining 21 defendants would lie to the Commissioner, as there had been a modification of the decree of the Court of original jurisdiction, within the meaning of section 38, Act XVII of 1877. KANHA v. DIAL SINGH. 12 P R 1880

14. Dismissal for default—Second appeal—Act X of 1877, sections 551, 587—Application for re-admission—Limitation Act (XV of 1877), Schedule II, article 168.

Held, by the Full Bench, that a second appeal set down for hearing under sections 551, 587 of the Civil Procedure Code, cannot be dismissed for default on the day fixed for hearing as the provisions of sections 556 and 558 apply to the hearing of appeals in which a date has been fixed under section 552, and notice has been issued to the respondent: nor is the limitation of 30 days prescribed by article 168 of Schedule II of the Limitation Act, which is applicable to appeals dismissed under section 556, applicable to a petition by an appellant whose appeal has been dismissed in consequence of his absence on the date fixed for hearing him under section 551. Kirpa Ram v. Jumna Das (48 of 1878, Civil) cited. BUTA v. RATTAN SINGH. 76 P R 1882

15. Further appeal from order passed on appeal from order admitting review—Act X of 1877, section 629—Act XVII of 1877, section 38.

Held, that as section 629 of the Civil Procedure Code allows an appeal from an order admitting a review, the order passed on such an appeal and reversing that of the Court of original jurisdiction becomes itself appealable under section 38 of the Punjab Courts Act, as such an order is not declared by any other law in force to be final. MANGAT RAI v. KHAN CHAND. 133 P R 1882

16. Order dismissing appeal as barred by limitation—"Decree"—Act X of 1877, section 2—Adjudication on defence set up in appeal.

Held, that an order passed by a lower Appellate Court dismissing an appeal as barred by limitation is one from which upon proper grounds a second appeal will lie to the Chief Court, as the objection taken in the lower Court to the appeal that it is barred by limitation is a defence set up in the Appellate Court, and the order allowing the objection an adjudication upon the question, within the definition of the term "decree" in section 2 of the Code of Civil Procedure. BAHADUR SINGH v. BASAWA SINGH. 158 P R 1882

17. Punjab Courts Act (XVIII of 1884), section 40—Small Cause under Rs. 500 in value—Claim involving property exceeding Rs. 500 in value—Further appeal.

Held, that the effect of proviso 2 to section 40 of the Punjab Courts Act is to lay down as an absolute rule that no further appeal lies in small causes not exceeding Rs. 500 in value, even though the decree may involve directly a claim to property exceeding Rs. 500 in value. MAHANT ABNASHI RAM v. MAHANT LAKHMI DAS. 95 P R 1887

18. Punjab Courts Act, 1884, section 40 (i) (d) and (ii)—Further appeal—Application for revision treated as an appeal.

A further appeal lies to the Chief Court under section 40 of the Punjab Courts Act, 1884, only from an appellate decree, as distinguished from an order of the Divisional Court. Where a Divisional Judge in a case in which he had passed an order not open to appeal refused to certify the case as fit for appeal, held, that an application for revision of this order could not be dealt with as a further appeal under clause (2) of the above section. GOSAON v. NANAK. 79 P R 1890

19. Pre-emption—Value of suit—Punjab Courts Act, 1884, section 40 (1) (a).

A sued for pre-emption of certain property on payment of Rs. 400, the price stated in the deed of sale. The real value of the property sold was upwards of Rs. 2,000. The Courts below concurred in decreeing the claim. The defendant appealed, and a preliminary objection was taken to the hearing of the appeal on the ground that the value of the suit was below Rs. 1,000 and therefore no further appeal lay to the Chief Court.

Held, that the appeal lay under section 40 (1) (a) of the Punjab Courts Act, 1884, as the decree involved directly a claim to property of the value of over Rs. 1,000. LACHMAN DAS v. HAKIM SINGH. 94 P R 1890

20. Jurisdiction—Further appeal—Land suit—Claim for share in an orchard, i.e., of the fruit trees.

A suit for possession of a half share in an orchard, that is, in the fruit trees, is not a "land-suit" within the definition of that term contained in section 3, Punjab Courts Act, 1884.

119 P. R., 1890, referred to.

DHANI DAS v. AYA RAM. 15 P. R 1892 F B

21. "Land suit"—Village graveyard—Further appeal.

The plaintiffs sued, alleging that 56 kanals 3 marlas of land had been reserved as the village graveyard from the foundation of the village, and that the defendants had brought 6 kanals of it under cultivation two years previously, and made thorn enclosures and taken possession of certain portions.

Held, that the suit was not a land-suit, and that the suit being valued at Rs. 150, a further appeal to the Chief Court was not competent without a certificate from the Divisional Judge under section 40, sub-section 1 (d), Punjab Courts Act. ILAHI BAKHSH v. FATTA. 20 P R 1892

22. Suits Valuation Act, 1887, Rules under—Suit to declare an alienation of land to be not binding after grantor's death—Further appeal—Value of suit Rs. 1,000, or upwards—Punjab Courts Act, 1884, section 40.

The plaintiffs sued for a declaratory decree that an alienation by a childless proprietor would not affect their reversionary interests in the land, the subject of the alienation: the grantor was alive, and no consequential relief was prayed for.

The alienation challenged by the plaintiffs purported to be for Rs. 1,300: the value of the land calcuated at 30 times the revenue was Rs. 770.

Held, that no further appeal to the Chief Court was competent in the absence of an application to the Divisional Judge for a certificate under section 40, sub-section (1) (d), Punjab Courts Act, 1884, the value of the suit for purposes of jurisdiction being less than Rs. 1,000 and both Courts having concurred in decreeing the claim.

The suit as brought, though it fell within the description of claim mentioned in No. II of the Rules issued under Part II of the Suits Valuation Act, was subject to the proviso to that rule, and as the subject of the alienation impugned was land as specified in section 3 of the Act, and was valued for purposes of jurisdiction at 30 times the revenue, or Rs. 770, according to the rules made under that section, it followed from section 4 of the same Act that the value of the present claim could not be held to be in excess of that sum.

VIII.—APPEAL, SECOND—concld.

Held also, that the lower Appellate Court's decree could not be said to involve directly some claim to, or question respecting property of Rs. 1,000 or upwards in value within the meaning of section 40, sub-section (1) (a) of the Courts Act. BAKHU v. JHANDA. 145 P R 1892

23. Punjab Courts Act, 1884, section 40 (i) (a)—Pre-emption suit—Further appeal.

Plaintiff sued for pre-emption of certain land, the value of which, calculated at thirty times the revenue, was considerably below Rs. 1,000, upon payment of Rs. 700, and defendants pleaded (inter alia) that Rs. 1,000, the price entered in the sale-deed, was fixed in good faith, and was not in excess of the true market value. The suit having been dismissed by both lower Courts and a certificate refused by the Divisional Court on the 12th March 1894, plaintiff on the 21st April 1894 filed a further appeal in the Chief Court.

Held that under section 40 (i) (a) of the Punjab Courts Act, 1884, no further appeal lay as of right to the Chief Court, the true value of the suit being less than Rs. 1,000, and the decree, which merely dismissed the suit, not involving directly any question concerning the price to be paid by the pre-emptor.

Held also, that the decree did not involve directly a question concerning land of Rs. 1,000 in value, merely because the true market value of such land might be of that amount. 132 P. R., 1893, followed. NANHA v. KURA. 3 P R 1896

Plaintiff sued for declaration of right in a tank, valued at Rs. 900 which was used for watering cattle and excavating earth to make bricks.

Held, that as these were not agricultural purposes or purposes subservient to agriculture the tank was not "land" as defined in the Punjab Tenancy Act, and that, therefore, no further appeal lay. TEJ RAM v. TULSI. 48 P R 1898

5. Tenancy Act, sections 37, 40—Compensation to tenant for improvements—Claim first raised in special appeal.

The terms of section 37, Act XXVIII of 1868, make it incumbent upon a plaintiff suing to eject a tenant to declare either that proper compensation for improvements has been paid to the defendant, or that no compensation is payable, or that there is a difference between the parties as to the amount or value of the compensation to be made.

Therefore where the plaintiff omitted to place these matters before the first Court and that Court did not deal with them on its own motion, held, that the defendant had a right to have the omissions rectified in special appeal. NATHAL v. SULTAN. 149 P R 1879

On an application for leave to appeal to the Privy Council where upon question of fact the decision of the Chief Court was concurrent with that of the Court of first instance, and upon the facts as found no substantial question of law was involved, held, that under the last clause of section 596, Civil Procedure Code, the plaintiff was not entitled to appeal, and therefore leave to appeal should not be given.

3. Appeal to Privy Council—Concurrent findings on facts—Substantial question of law—Procedure—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, section 596.

When upon questions of fact the decision of the Chief Court is concurrent with that of the Court of original jurisdiction, and the question of law only arises if the concurrent findings are reversed, held, that such a question is not a "substantial question of law" involved in the appeal within the requirements of section 596 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

4. Appeal to Privy Council—Value of the subject-matter of the suit—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, section 596—Suits Valuation Act, 1887.

Held, that in section 596, Civil Procedure Code, "the value of the matter in dispute" for the purpose of appealing to the Privy Council means the real or market value of the property in dispute, and not a nominal value such as is assessed under the provisions of the Suits Valuation Act, VII of 1887

3. Valuation of suit for redemption of mortgage—Plaintiff suing to redeem for Rs. 2,300—Defendant pleading that the mortgage-money was over Rs. 3,500—Valuation of suit—Course of appeal.

Plaintiff claimed redemption of a mortgage offering to pay Rs. 2,300, the sum for which the land was originally mortgaged. Defendant pleaded that Rs. 5,850 was due on the mortgage, and the land could not be redeemed until that amount was paid. Plaintiff did not offer to pay more than Rs. 2,300; but the first Court held that Rs. 5,240 was due on the mortgage, and decreed that plaintiff might redeem on paying that amount. Plaintiff appealed against this order to the Divisional Judge, urging that he was entitled to redeem for Rs. 2,300 and the Divisional Judge held that the value of the suit exceeded Rs. 5,000, and that the appeal lay to the Chief Court.

Held, that for the purposes of jurisdiction the valuation of the suit by plaintiff must govern the case. It could not be said that he had valued the suit at any sum over Rs. 2,300, and the fact that defendant alleged that a sum of over Rs. 5,000 was due to him and that the Court had found this in defendant's favour made no difference. RANJE KHAN v. BIRBAL. 91 P R 1889

4. Suit for account—Value of relief sought—Jurisdiction—Course of appeal—Authority of Appellate Court disclaiming jurisdiction to order payment of additional Court-fee.

The plaintiff sued the defendant for an account valuing the relief sought at Rs. 100, and expressing his willingness to pay the Court-fee due upon any sum decreed in excess of this amount, in accordance with the provisions of section 11, Court-Fees Act, 1870.

After the defendant had produced the books containing the parties' accounts and a commission had examined the same, the plaintiff filed a petition stating that he appeared to be prima facie entitled to recover a sum over Rs. 12,000, and praying that the matter might be fully investigated. No. amendment of the plaint was, however, either asked for or ordered, and the suit eventually resulted in a decree in the plaintiff's favour for Rs. 2,343.

The plaintiff then appealed for a further sum of Rs. 1,716 and the defendant, against the decree in the plaintiff's favour for Rs. 2,343.

Both parties presented their appeals to the Divisional Judge, who held that the appeals lay to the Chief Court.

Held, that the appeals lay to the Divisional Judge : under section 7, clause (iv) of the Court Fees Act, the valuation of the original suit for purposes of Court-fee is fixed at the amount at which the relief sought is valued in the plaint. This, in the present case, was Rs. 100, and the amount was never altered by any amendment of the plaint ; and under section 8, Suits Valuation Act, 1887, the value of a suit for an account as determinable for the computation of Court-fees and the value for purposes of jurisdiction, shall be the same. The value of the suit for purposes of jurisdiction was Rs. 100 and the appeal lay to the Divisional Court under section 39, Punjab Courts Act (as amended).

Semble. If an Appellate Court has no jurisdiction to hear an appeal, it is not competent to it to pass orders for the payment of any additional Court-fee which it considers should have been levied in the first Court.

5. Suit for removal of Mahant ; for declaration of right to appoint a successor, and to enforce the provisions of a will—Value of relief sought—Jurisdiction—Course of appeal—Court-Fees Act, section 7, paragraphs iv (c), v, vi, ix and x (d)—Suits Valuation Act, 1887, section 8—Punjab Courts Act, section 39.

The plaintiffs in their plaint valued the relief sought as follows :—

	Rs.
(1) Removal of defendant from the office of Mahant	... 1,000
(2) Declaration of plaintiff's right to appoint a successor	... 500
(3) Enforcement of the provisions of a will	... 1,000

or Rs. 2,500 in all.

The District Judge having found on a preliminary objection raised by the defendant, that the value of the property attached to the institution in question was Rs. 253,037-13-11, directed the plaintiffs to file additional Court-fees and upon their refusal to comply with such order rejected the plaint under section 54, Civil Procedure Code.

The plaintiffs thereupon appealed to the Divisonal Judge, who returned the memorandum of appeal for presentation to the Chief Court, holding that, though he would have had jurisdiction looking only at the claim as valued in the plaint, his jurisdiction had been taken away by the District Judge's decision that the true valuation was Rs. 2,53,038.

Held, that this view of the law was untenable, and that the appeal should be returned for presentation to the Divisional Judge. The suit being other than any of those referred to in section 7, paragraphs v, vi and ix, and paragraph x. clause (d) of the Court-Fees Act, and the value for the computation of Court-Fees and for purposes of jurisdiction being the same by virtue of section 8 of the Suits Valuation Act, 1887; and such value being determinable according to the amount (in this case Rs. 2,500) at which the relief sought was valued in the plaint or memorandum of appeal, the Divisional Judge had jurisdiction to entertain the plaintiffs' appeal, notwithstanding that the District Judge had decided that the true value of the relief sought was in excess of Rs. 5,000. 6. Punjab Courts Act, 1888, section 40, clause (a)—Suits Valuation Act, 1887, section 4—Valuation of subject-matter of suit in the Appellate Court.

In a suit for the possession of land, the value of which under the Rules framed under section 4 of the Suits Valuation Act was less than Rs. 500, both the lower Courts concurred in decreeing the claim. The defendants thereupon, without obtaining a certificate for appeal, appealed to the Chief Court, alleging that the market value of the land was over Rs. 1,000, and that an appeal lay under the second branch of clause (a) of section 40 of the Punjab Courts Act.

Held, that the decree of the Divisional Judge confirming the decree of the first Court, which decreed the plaintiffs' claim to proprietary possession of land, which claim, valued according to the Rules framed under section 4 of the Suits Valuation Act, 1887, did not amount to Rs. 1,000 in value, was a decree which did not fall under the second branch of clause (a) of section 40 of the Punjab Courts Act, 1888, being a decree in which the claim to, or question respecting land was identical with the subject-matter of the suit, which was excluded from appeal under the first branch of that clause, because the value of the suit did not amount to Rs. 1,000. 7. Suit for removal of mahant for declaration of right to appoint a successor and to enforce the provisions of a will—Value of relief sought—Valuation by plaintiff, power of Court to revise—Appeal—Court Fees Act, 1870, section 7, (iv) (c) and 12 (1).

Plaintiffs sued on the allegations that they were the gurbhais of the defendant, who was the present mahant of a certain akhara, in succession to one B. B., who died in 1885, leaving a will, appointing defendant as his successor, but authorising plaintiffs to control his management of the institution and to have him ejected from the mahantship if he failed to carry out the essential provisions of the said will; that defendant had by his misconduct and disregard of the testator's wishes forfeited all right to continue in the mahantship: and that they, therefore, prayed as follows:—

(i) that defendant may be declared unfit to continue the mahant of the institution and may be removed;
(ii) that plaintiffs be declared entitled to nominate his successor as provided in the will;
(iii) that, if the above relief cannot be granted, defendant may be compelled to comply with the provisions of the will; or
(iv) that plaintiffs be granted such other relief as the will contemplates and the circumstances of the case permit.

Plaintiffs valued the relief sought in clause (i) of the plaint at Rs. 1,000; that mentioned in clause (ii) at Rs. 500, and the alternative relief asked for in clause (iii) at Rs. 1,000; and filed Court-fees upon Rs. 2,500.

The District Judge, on an objection by defendant, held that the claim was undervalued, and ordered plaintiffs to make up the deficiency in the Court-fees upon the total value of the property attached to the institution and on their failure to do so, rejected the plaint. Plaintiffs appealed to the Divisional Judge, but their appeal was dismissed, on the ground that the suit was in reality one for possession of the property belonging to the institution and the plaint should have been stamped accordingly. Plaintiffs thereupon lodged a further appeal in the Chief Court, and it was contended, inter alia, on behalf of defendant that no appeal lay from the first Court's decision as to the valuation in view of the provision in section 12 (1) of the Court Fees Act, 1870.

Held, that section 12 (1) should be construed as enacting finality only in the matter of the actual assessment of the valuation of the property, and as allowing an appeal to proceed upon all questions of the construction of the Act, whether the contention is as to the section or clause applicable, or as to the meaning of any particular clause or section.

Held, further, that in cases where the plaintiff seeks the removal of a trustee or manager of an institution, but does not seek possession of the property for himself as trustee or manager, it is not necessary to file full stamp on the value of the property of the trust or institution; that in such a case the valuation of the relief sought in the plaint rests with the plaintiff; and that when the plaintiff has valued his relief at a sum which is primâ facie not unreasonable, it is not open to the Court to challenge or revise such valuation.

XI.—APPEAL, VALUATION OF—contd.

The Court held that the valuation stated in the present plaint was reasonable and should be accepted. BAWA MANGAL DAS v. MAHANT NARINJAN DAS.

Plaintiff, who was already in possession as mortgagee, sued a third party who was in actual possession but, whilst admitting that he was only a tenant, refused to recognize plaintiff's title.

Held, by the Full Bench, that the suit must be regarded as one for possession of immovable property by a person out of possession against a person in actual possession whom the plaintiff sought to eject, and that the value of the suit for the purposes of jurisdiction was the value of the immovable property itself. 9. Suit, valuation of, for purposes of Court-fee and of jurisdiction—Suits Valuation Act, 1887, section 8, Court-Fees Act, 1870, section 7 (iv) (e)—Further appeal.

A suit in which the Court-fee payable was ad valorem under section 7 (iv) (d) (e) of the Court-Fees Act, was valued by the plaintiff, for purposes of jurisdiction at Rs. 1,500 and for purposes of Court-fee at Rs. 130. The suit having been dismissed by the Additional District Judge and the Divisional Judge on appeal, plaintiff filed a further appeal in the Chief Court.

Held, that under section 8 of the Suits Valuation Act, 1887, the value of a suit of this nature as determinable for the computation of Court-fees and the value for purposes of jurisdiction was the same, and that under section 7 (iv) (d) (e) of the Court-Fees Act the amount of the Court-fees payable was to be computed according to the amount at which the relief sought was valued in the plaint.

Held, therefore, that the value of the suit being Rs. 130, no further appeal lay to the Chief Court.

Held, following Aukhil Chunder Sen Roy v. Mohiny Mohan Das (1879), *I. L. 23. Limitation is a matter of jurisdiction and the defence that the remedy is barred by lapse of time may be taken at any stage. But to establish this bar defendant cannot ordinarily bring forward in appeal new facts which are not already disclosed on the record. Accordingly, if the defendant, instead of proving that the period of limitation has been exceeded, submits the case to arbitration, he must be held to have voluntarily prevented the question of limitation from being raised when the fact does not appear on the record, and it cannot be raised by the suggestion of facts not already disclosed. GOPAL DASS v. RUTHEE RAM (92 of 1867, Civil). See also MYA SINGH v. GUNESH DAS (32 of 1872, Civil). But held, per SMYTH, J., in MEHTAB RAI v. MANAK CHAND (59 of 1878, Civil), that the plea of limitation is not a question of jurisdiction within the meaning of section 622, Act X of 1877.

24. Jurisdiction—Appeal admitted from order of lower Court—Review by lower Court of order appealed from—An appeal from a certain order treated as an appeal from another.

By order dated the 22nd March, the Commissioner dismissed plaintiff's suit on appeal. On the 29th May, plaintiff applied for a review of the order. On the 9th June, the case came on before another Commissioner, who first made an order to the effect that he was incompetent to review his predecessor's judgment, but on the same date he suspended action on that order and referred the question for the opinion of the Chief Court. On the 22nd June, plaintiff filed an appeal in the Chief Court from the order of March 22nd, and the appeal was admitted on the 25th June. On July 6th, the Commissioner, having received the Chief Court's order, calling for the files, rejected plaintiff's application for review. On July 11th, on receipt of the Chief Court's reply to his reference, stating that he was competent to review his predecessor's judgment, he directed the case on review to proceed, and on the 6th August reversed the order of March 22nd. Plaintiff took out execution of the order of August 6th. Leave was granted to him by the Chief Court to allow his appeal, admitted June 25th, to be amended and to stand, not as an appeal from the order of March 22nd, but as a special appeal from the order of August 6th. The defendant appealed from the order of August 6th on the ground that it was made without jurisdiction, an appeal having been admitted by the Chief Court before the Commissioner granted the review.

Held, upon defendant's appeal, that the action of the Commissioner on June 9th was to continue the application for review pending; that his order of July 6th concluded the proceedings on review; and that his order of August 6th, which must have been based upon fresh proceedings commenced after the plaintiff's appeal was admitted by the Chief Court (June 25th), was without jurisdiction, and must be set aside.

Held, afterwards, but on the same day, on plaintiff's appeal—that the Commissioner's order of August 6th having been reversed by the Chief Court, the plaintiff might revert to his original application and treat his appeal as from the decision of March 22nd, and this notwithstanding that he had taken out execution of the order of August 6th.

Query: Whether the Chief Court will necessarily set aside a judgment defective under section 359, Civil Procedure Code; but the Court will do so where it is not satisfied that the Commissioner considered the case with sufficient care. JEY GOBIND v. RAM PERSHAD. 6 P R 1870

25. Joinder of fresh parties.

26. Want of jurisdiction in hearing the appeal—Act XXIII of 1861, section 35.
Where the Court of first instance has no jurisdiction, and the Appellate Court, instead of reversing the first Court's judgment for want of jurisdiction, affirms it on the merits.
Held, by Boulnois and Lindsay, JJ. (Campbell, J., dissenting), that the Chief Court can, under section 35 of Act XXIII of 1861, revise the proceedings of the Courts below, on the ground that the lower Appellate Court in hearing the appeal exercised a jurisdiction not vested in it by law. of the decision of the Court of first instance: and that consequently it may reverse such decision, although there is no glaring mistake of the effect of the evidence in the Court below.

28. Power of Appellate Court to refer to arbitration.

The parties referred the matter in dispute to arbitration in the Court of first instance, with power to the arbitrators to appoint an umpire. An umpire was appointed, but through illness was unable to act, and the Court directed the appointment of another umpire. The arbitrators failed to comply with this direction, and the Court itself proceeded with the case, and passed a decree for the plaintiff. No objection was taken to this procedure, but the defendant appealed on the merits of the case. At the hearing of the appeal, it was objected for the defendant that the original Court had no jurisdiction to withdraw the case from arbitration, and the Lower Appellate Court, allowing the objection, served the arbitrators with notice to appoint an umpire. The arbitrators were unable to agree as to the appointment: and, at the request of the parties, the Appellate Court appointed an umpire, who made an award in defendant's favour. Plaintiff then appealed to the Additional Commissioner, who held that the original Court had proceeded according to law, and that the first Appellate Court had no power to again refer the dispute to arbitration. From this decision, defendant appealed to the Chief Court.

Held, per Lindsay and Melvill, JJ., that the Court of first instance acted legally in itself proceeding with the case to final judgment, but that it was competent for the Appellate Court, under section 37, Act XXIII of 1861, to refer the matter to arbitration, and incumbent upon that Court so to proceed when requested to do so by the parties. 33. The objection that the Court of first instance had exercised a wrong discretion in permitting plaintiff to sue for a declaratory decree having been taken for the first time on second appeal, the Chief Court refused to interfere in the matter.

Held, further, that a plea to the jurisdiction may be taken at any stage of the suit if the facts on which the plea rests are patent on the face of the record; but a party is not entitled, on a second appeal, to have evidence taken to support a plea as to the want of jurisdiction of the first Court to entertain the suit. In a suit brought by plaintiff to recover the value of his share of the produce from defendant for kharif, Sambat 1932, the Court of first instance admitted the deeds in evidence and decreed the claim, but this decree was reversed by the Judicial Assistant on appeal, on the ground that the deeds were inadmissible in evidence for want of registration.

Held, further, that the consent of the parties to waive the condition required by the Act, that the application shall be in writing, can give no jurisdiction to the Court to delegate its own functions to arbitrators, and found a decree upon their award, and it is only upon a consent recorded in writing that the Court can make an order of reference so as to render the award ensuing thereupon capable of being turned into a final decree. The Additional Commissioner waited three days for appellant, and on 18th February 1878, appellant being still absent the appeal was dismissed for default. Plaintiff applied for re-admission of his appeal, but the application was rejected. Thereupon, plaintiff appealed to the Chief Court.

The 1st Appellate Court (the Deputy Commissioner) decreed half the land in suit to each party, recording that most of the defendants agreed to this decision. The dissentient defendant appealed to the Commissioner, who reversed this order, and dismissed plaintiffs' claim as unproved. On special appeal to the Chief Court the plaintiffs urged that the Commissioner should have accepted the dissentient defendant's appeal as regards his special share, and not as to the whole land.

Held, that the order of the Commissioner was correct, as under section 544 of the Code of Civil Procedure, he could reverse the whole decree on the appeal of one of the defendants, and it was optional with him to take action under section 559 of the same Code. BHUPA v CHETU. 26 P R 1881

Appellate Court to give reasons for its finding.

Where the lower Appellate Court, after disposing of the plea of want of jurisdiction on the part of the first Court, raised in the first ground of appeal to his Court, merely remarked " that it appeared from the judgment of the lower Court that plaintiffs had a superior right to the defendants to succeed to the land in dispute, and that the lower Court having recorded judgment after conducting enquiry, he saw no reason to interfere with the order of that Court," and it appeared from the appeal filed in the lower Appellate Court that the appellant attacked the judgment of the first Court as not having disposed of certain points which were urged by him in his original plea and which raised questions of fact upon the determination of which the rights of the parties depended, which points were passed over by the lower Appellate Court without the slightest discussion in his judgment, held, that the said judgment did not fulfil the requirements of section 574 of the Civil Procedure Code.

It is incumbent upon a first appeal for the presiding Judge to give his own reasons for arriving at the conclusion he does, and it is not sufficient to record what the first Court has found and to add in a general way that the Court sees no reason to differ from that finding. Held, that the effect of the objection being, not to support the decree of the lower Appellate Court but to nullify the pro-

48. Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877), section 544—Reversal of whole decree on appeal of one defendant.

A suit based on three hundis which were drawn at Multan by one B. M. on himself, and his father, the appealing defendant, both of whom resided at Amritsar, and which were payable at Amritsar, was instituted in the Multan District, where it was heard and decided in the plaintiff's favour. It was contended by one of the defendants, who was the sole appellant both in the lower Appellate Court and in the Chief Court, that the Multan Court had no jurisdiction to hear the suit, and this objection though disallowed in the lower Courts was finally allowed on the appeal to the Chief Court.

As regards the question of the proper order to be passed on the appeal to the Chief Court, held, that as under section 544 of the Civil Procedure Code, one of several defendants might obtain a reversal of the whole decree appealed against, if it proceeded on any ground common to all the defendants, and the decree appealed against was one dismissing the present appellant's appeal, one of whose grounds of appeal wa that the Court of first instance had no jurisdiction to try the suit, which was a ground common to both defendants, it might be said that in dismissing the appeal the decree of the lower Appellate Court proceeded on a ground common to both defendants, the effect of that decree being to uphold the decision of the first Court which decided that the cause of action arose within the jurisdiction of the Multan Court, and therefore section 544 applied.

The Court therefore ordered the plaint to be returned to the plaintiff for presentation to the proper Court. BANKA MAL v. CHUAH MALIK. 71 P R 1883

Plaintiff sued the defendant upon an agreement admitting the latter as a partner in a contract, for which plaintiff had already tendered, to supply wheat to the Commissariat Department, for his share of the losses incurred in such contract and for damages. It was admitted that plaintiff was aware that defendant was at the time in the employment of the Commissariat Department, and that in tendering for the contract he had to state that no one connected with the department was at the time of the tender, nor should afterwards be admitted as a partner with him. The lower Appellate Court dismissed the suit on the ground that the agreement sued upon was void.

Held, that the lower Appellate Court could of its own motion take the objection that the said agreement was void, though this was not pleaded by the defendant, and dismiss the suit upon that ground; as if it becomes apparent on the face of the proceedings that an agreement is not enforceable by law, the Court cannot be asked to enforce it, whether the plea is put forward or not. Dasondhi v. Sirdar Khan (114 of 1879,) Civil, cited. 50. Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), section 562—Remand—Limits of Appellate Court's power of remand.

To justify a remand by an Appellate Court under section 562 of the Civil Procedure Code, it is necessary that the lower Court should have decided the case on a preliminary point, and not on the merits, and the exclusion of evidence of fact would not be enough of itself to justify a remand under this section unless the point decided was preliminary to a trial of the case on the merits. 51. Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), sections 108, 560 and 582—Ex-parte decree—Power of Appellate Court to order security to be given for satisfaction of decree before rehearing an appeal which has been decided ex-parte.

A decree was passed ex-parte by the lower Appellate Court against the defendant-appellant. On his applying to have the appeal reheard, he was directed to furnish security for satisfying the decree passed against him before his application could be considered, and being unable to furnish the required security his application was rejected. On appeal to the Chief Court it was urged that the lower Appellate Court could only require security for the costs of the suit.

Held, that as under section 560 of the Code of Civil Procedure an Appellate Court may rehear an appeal which has been decided ex-parte "on such terms as to costs or otherwise as the Court thinks fit to impose," the words "or otherwise" would authorize the Court to impose terms other than those relating to costs, and would cover an order as to furnishing security for the due performance of the decree.

Held further, that as a Court of original jurisdiction could, under section 108 of the Civil Procedure Code, direct the payment of the decree into Court prior to admitting an application to have an ex-parte decree set aside an Appellate Court would, by virtue of section 582, have the same power as a Court of original jurisdiction in this respect. the decision given by first Court—Omission to notice all the arguments raised in appeal.

In second appeal to the Chief Court, it was contended (inter alia) that the judgment of the lower Appellate Court was insufficient to dispose of the appeal before it, the objections urged being that arguments were laid before the Court which were not noticed in its judgment, and that instead of giving independent reasons for its finding, the Court merely adopted the reasons given by the first Court.

Held, that the judgment of the lower Appellate Court could not be considered not to comply with the requirements of section 574, Civil Procedure Code, on the above grounds: that the said Court, if it found that the same points were disposed of by the lower Court below, and after hearing arguments, was satisfied that the reasons given by that Court supported the decision and were unshaken, was at liberty to adopt those reasons as its own by reference to the judgment under appeal without stating them at length, and that it was not bound to set out in its judgment every argument urged before the Court, and its reasons for overruling it. Man Singh v. Bhup Singh (91 of 1882, Civil) referred to. A Munsiff having returned a plaint for persentation in the Small Cause Court, the District Judge on appeal reversed the Munsiff's order and directed him to receive the plaint and try the suit. Thereupon the Munsiff, holding that if the case was not a small cause the District Judge had no jurisdiction to hear the appeal, and ignoring the order of the District Judge that he should receive the plaint and try the suit, again returned the plaint to the plaintiff.

Held, that the last order of the Munsiff being open to appeal was not open to revision by the Chief Court, and though an erroneous order was nevertheless binding until set aside in due course of procedure by the District Judge.

APPELLATE COURT—POWERS AND DUTIES OF—contd.

But held further, that the said order was clearly an erroneous order, for as soon as the Munsiff had decided that the plaint presented was a plaint in a suit of a nature cognizable by a Small Cause Court, that decision determined the course of appeal in the suit for the purpose of contesting the Munsiff's order, and the District Judge undoubtedly had jurisdiction to hear the appeal, such jurisdiction not depending upon the decision he might afterwards arrive at as to the nature of the case. 55. Appellate Court—Appeal of one defendant—Decree in favour of plaintiff-respondent who has not appealed against another respondent—Civil Procedure Code, sections 544 and 561.

There is no rule of procedure which would justify an Appellate Court, on the appeal of one defendant, in decreeing in favour of a plaintiff-respondent against another respondent who was also a defendant in the first Court, in the absence of any appeal or cross-objection by the plaintiff filed in the Appellate Court.

The general rule is that an Appellate Court can only modify a judgment or decree so far as it affects the appellant, without interfering as to parties who do not appeal: the Code of Civil Procedure provides at least two exceptions to this rule, which are contained in sections 544 and 561 of the Code. the District Judge against so much of the decree as awarded compensation for improvements. The District Judge held that he had jurisdiction and that the Court-fee must be made up to the value of improvements.

Held, by the Full Bench, that the value of the suit for purposes of appeal under the Punjab Courts Act, 1884, was the market value of the house as ascertained by the First Court and that the District Judge had not jurisdiction to entertain and hear the appeal. ABDUR RAHMAN v. CHARAGH DIN.

APPROPRIATION OF PAYMENTS.

See Contract Act, 1872.

1. Held (before the passing of Act IX of 1872), that a creditor was entitled to appropriate payments made by a debtor to any account which he may have against him, unless the debtor at the time of payment stipulated that the payment should be credited to a particular account, in which case the creditor would not be entitled to disregard the request. 38. Revoking or superseding submission or reference.
The parties to a suit applied for a reference to arbitration, and provided that in the event of a difference of opinion between the arbitrators, an umpire should be appointed, either by the arbitrators themselves, or by the Court; or that the Court itself might decide the case. The arbitrators not agreeing, the Court adopted the last alternative.
Held, that under the circumstances, the decision was not final under section 316, Act VIII of 1859. The result of the proceedings was that the arbitration was inoperative, and the decision passed by the Court was open to appeal. KAHN SINGH v. RUTTUN SINGH.

39. Remitting award—Refusal to amend—Misconduct.
In a suit for balance of account, the arbitrators allowed as a set-off an item founded on a budnee or wagering transaction. The Court, disallowing this item as illegal, decreed the rest in terms of the arbitrators' award. Held, that the budnee set-off had been rightly disallowed for illegality, but that the proper procedure was to remit the award for the reconsideration of the arbitrators on account of the illegal matter apparent on the face of it. If they refused to amend their award accordingly, it would have been misconduct in terms of section 324, Civil Procedure Code. RAM KURN v. ZAHIRA. 101 P R 1868

40. Implied agreement to abide by award of umpire or of the majority.
The appointment of an umpire, coupled with the provisions of Chapter VI of Act VIII of 1859, implies that the parties agree to be bound by the award of the umpire or of the majority of the arbitrators. BUSSAWA SINGH v. BOODHOO. 9 P R 1869

41. Right to object to validity of submission in Chief Court when no such objection was taken in lower Appellate Court.
Where a mukhtar, not specially empowered to refer the case to arbitration, signed the submission or ikrarnamah, it was held, that under section 313 of Act VIII of 1859, the award did not bind his principals. In the lower Appellate Court, the principals relied upon the merits of the case, and took no objection to the validity of the arbitration; held, that not having adhered to the award they were not barred from taking such objection in the Chief Court. WAZEERA v. MOOKUM. 11 P R 1869

42. Misconduct of arbitrators.
Where an application to set aside an award discloses no legal ground for the order applied for, an order ignoring the petition (e.g., shamil misl rahe) is correct. If a specific allegation of misconduct or corruption is made by the applicant, the Court should, before passing a decree, record whether or not the allegation is supported. Open disregard by arbitrators of proved law or custom does not amount to misconduct under section 324 of Act VIII of 1859; semble, it might be ground for remitting the award under section 323. The Court accepting the award is the proper judge of the propriety of remitting it. SECUNDUR BEG v. MUSSAMMAT RAJEE. 12 P R 1869

43. Small Cause Court—Appointment of arbitrators before new trial granted—Act IV of 1866, section 16.

Plaintiff's suit was dismissed by the Court of Small Causes; and upon his application, before a new trial was granted, the Court appointed arbitrators. Held, that such appointment was beyond the jurisdiction of the Court. KHEEMA v. KUNHYA. 19 P R 1869

The Court may recommend, but cannot order, submission. KAZEE KASIMOODEEN v. HAJOODEEN. 52 P R 1869

A regular submission to arbitration cannot be revoked by one of the parties. PARS RAM v. ASA RAM. 9 P R 1870

46. Reference to arbitration—Remitting award.

The Court accepting the award is the proper judge of the propriety of remitting it. Persons admitted to act under notification 1225 of 26th September 1866, are recognized agents, and have power to bind their principals by submission to arbitration; a special authority in writing is not necessary. CHOOHUR SINGH v. JEET SINGH. 64 P R 1870

47. Revoking or superseding submission or reference.

Where a suit is referred, and one of the arbitrators becomes unable to act, the Court can supersede the reference, and decide the case itself. BISHEN v. BHAG. 66 P R 1870

48. Where parties have agreed to refer their differences to arbitration, the Court is bound on application of one of the parties to file the agreement and proceed under section 326, Civil Procedure Code, unless sufficient cause be shewn against the agreement by the other party; and the fact that such party has altered his mind arbitrarily, and without good reason, is not a sufficient cause within the section.

Per Lindsay, J.—A suit for damages for such arbitrary breach of agreement will lie. PEER BUKHSH v. JUMAL. 80 P R 1870

49. Remitting award.

In a suit for breach of betrothal against two defendants, the plaintiff and one of the defendants consented to arbitration. The arbitrators awarded damages against both defendants. The Court trying the suit passed judgment upon the award, striking out the name of the non-consenting defendant.

Held, that the procedure of the Lower Court was erroneous; that the proper course was to remit the award under section 323, Civil Procedure Code, for illegality on the face of it. NARAIN v. KANHA. 3 P R 1872

50 Reference to arbitration—verbal.

51. Decree not according to award.

The matter in dispute was referred to arbitration, and the award directed that plaintiff should recover a certain amount to be realized from certain property mortgaged to the defendant. The Court passed a decree for the amount against defendant personally. Held, that the Court had no jurisdiction to pass a decree that was not according to the award. GIRDHARI LALL v. IMRAT MUL. 39 P R 1873

52. Revoking or superseding submission or reference.

The parties referred the matter in dispute to arbitration, and the umpire was called in. Defendant petitioned the Court to supersede the reference, on the ground that plaintiff's side had been tampering with the umpire, and it was likely that the latter would not act impartially. The Court superseded the reference and itself disposed of the case. Held, that the supersedure was not authorised by Chapter VI, Civil Procedure Code, and the case must be sent back to be disposed of according to the reference. KASHMIRI DAS v. MUSSAMMAT PARAS. 28 P R 1874

53. Where it is apparent that the reference will be fruitless, the Court may itself proceed with the case to final judgment. MEHTAB v. MUSSAMMAT MADAN. 24 P R 1875

Plaintiff sued in the Small Cause Court for Rs. 421, money received by defendant for plaintiff's use. Before suit was brought, the parties had agreed in writing to refer the matter of disputed accounts between them to arbitration: the agreement was filed under section 326, Civil Procedure Code, in the District Court, and an order of reference was made. The arbitrators filed no award, and about two months after the order of reference was made, the Court superseded the reference recording—"Adjournments have already been granted more than once, and the case seems about as far removed from decision as at the outset. Section 318, Civil Procedure Code, seems to imply that the Court has power to issue an order superseding the arbitration and recalling the suit. I do that now directing parties to bear their own costs." Nothing further was done in the District Court, but afterwards the plaintiff sued in the Small Cause Court. Held, that the agreement to refer did not bar the plaintiff's suit under section 28 of the Indian Contract Act; and that the order of the District Court must be taken as equivalent to a rejection of the petition to file the agreement; and that plaintiff's suit in the Small Cause Court would, therefore, lie. 57. Revoking or superseding submission or reference.

Plaintiff sued in the Court of the Assistant Commissioner in June 1874, and before issues were framed the parties executed a submission to private arbitration. After this, in July 1874, the suit was transferred to the Deputy Commisstoner with an amended plaint, the value of the claim being beyond the jurisdiction of the Assistant Commissioner. The suit was for immovable property; and in the original plaint, plaintiff claimed possession; in the amended plaint, he claimed proprietary right. In August 1874, plaintiff applied to the Court to file the agreement under section 326, Civil Procedure Code, or to refer the case under section 312; this was objected to by the defendants, and the Court proceeded with the case, dismissing the suit on the merits. From this plaintiff appealed to the Commissioner on the merits, making no allusion to the submission to arbitration. The appeal was dismissed, and then plaintiff appealed to the Chief Court, insisting that the case should have been referred to the arbitrators. Held, that there was no ground of special appeal, and that the Chief Court could not revise the orders of the Courts below. 58. Setting aside award.

The parties referred the matter in dispute to arbitration in the original Court, and the award was in plaintiff's favor. This award the Court set aside on defendant's objections that evidence had been excluded and the arbitrators had not acted together; and after a full investigation dismissed plaintiff's suit. The plaintiff objected to the award being set aside, but afterwards adduced evidence and offered no further objection. The lower Appellate Court considered the award final, and gave plaintiff a decree in terms of the award. Defendant appealed to the Chief Court. Held, that plaintiff's acquiescence in the proceedings after the award was set aside debarred him from insisting upon the award. Semble, that the award was properly set aside on defendant's objections to it being made out. MOTI v. UTMA. 117 P R 1876

59. Act VIII of 1859, section 327.

The plaintiff filed an application under section 327, Act VIII of 1859, to enforce an award. The award was really a petition from the arbitrators, stating that the parties had by their advice settled the dispute amicably between them, and executed a document embodying the terms of the settlement, which the arbitrators presented with their petition to the Commissioner.

Held, that the petition filed by the arbitrators was not an award. ABDUL REHMAN KHAN v. GHULAM KADIR KHAN. 79 P R 1877

Plaintiff and defendants executed a written agreement to refer their disputes to three arbitrators without making any provision that the award of the majority should be binding. Plaintiff applied to file the agreement under section 326, Act VIII of 1859, and an order of reference was made and award filed by two out of three arbitrators on 30th August 1877. On 11th October 1877, the date fixed for the next hearing of the case, defendants filed a petition, dated 1st idem, objecting to the award, and praying that it might be remitted, on the ground that the award of two out of three of the arbitrators was not binding. The Court ordered the petition to be filed, and gave judgment the same day in terms of the award, taking no notice of the objection beyond saying that it did not allege corruption. The defendants appealed to the Commissioner who rejected the appeal as barred by section 522, Act X of 1877.

Held, by the Chief Court, that a judgment in terms of an award has not the attribute of finality unless the proceedings immediately preceding the decree have been strictly regular and all the conditions required by law satisfied ; and that, the decree having been passed without the Court considering the question raised by defendants, whether there was cause for remitting the award, the appeal was not barred under section 325, Act VIII of 1859, or section 522, Act X of 1877.

Held, further, that the legal effect of an agreement, where there is no provision that the award of the majority shall be binding, is that only a unanimous award is binding. HARDHYAN v. MEHR CHAND. 57 P R 1879

61. Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877), section 506—Application in writing, Want of Jurisdiction.

Held that under section 506, Act X of 1877, an application in writing by the parties is essential before a case can be referred to arbitrators, and that, where this is wanting, the reference by the Court and proceedings of the arbitrators are without jurisdiction and a decree based on the award not final.

Held, further, that the consent of the parties to waive the condition required by the Act, that the application shall be in writing, can give no jurisdiction to the Court to delegate its own functions to arbitrators, and found a decree upon their award, and it is only upon a consent recorded in writing that the Court can make an order of reference so as to render the award ensuing thereupon capable of being turned into a final decree. An appointment of arbitrators to effect a partition of certain property was made out of Court, and on an award being given, two of the parties to the arbitration, A. P. and J. P., applied under section 525, Act X of 1877 to have the award filed in Court. The Court merely passed an order " that the award be filed, " and a decree to this effect was drawn up. On application by a A. P. and J. P. for execution of this decree, by attachment and sale of property, the Lower Court ordered the attachment to take place.

Held, that the Lower Court acted without jurisdiction in causing the attachment of the property ; that it was clearly the duty of the Court in which the award was filed, after the time for presenting an application to set it aside had expired, to give judgment according to the award, upon which a decree should have followed : that this not having been done, the so-called decree was no decree within the meaning of section 522, Act X of 1877, and was therefore incapable of execution. Held, that the agreement, could not be enforced under section 523 of the Code, as the persons who made the application and the persons against whom it was sought to enforce the agreement could not be held to have " agreed in writing " within the meaning of the above section. 68. Court passing judgment in terms of award in absence of parties—Irregularity—Objection taken in second appeal—Court returning first award as incomplete—Arbitrators filing second and different award—Legality of such award.

Held, that the objection that an award was confirmed and judgment passed thereon in the appellant's absence, is not one that can be allowed to prevail in second appeal, when not taken in the appeal to the lower Appellate Court. It is at most an irregularity in the procedure and not a fatal error.

Where the Court refused to accept an award of arbitrators because it was incomplete, being made without investigation, and the arbitrators were ordered to file an award after investigation on the spot, whereupon they filed a second award, which, after a

A private award following upon a submission to arbitration made by the parties without the intervention of the Court, held, to be too indefinite to be converted into a decree in a summary proceeding under section 525 of the Civil Procedure Code, DHARAM DAS v. AJUDHIA PERSHAD. 77 P R 1882

72. Agreement to refer made out of Court during pendency of suit—Act X of 1877, sections 375, 523—Dismissal of suit as barred by such agreement—Act I of 1877, section 21—Adjustment of suit—Nature of the adjustment contemplated by the Civil Procedure Code—Equitable bar—Agreement to forego further legal proceedings.

During the pendency of the present suit, the parties referred the subject matter of the claim to the decision of two arbitrators by an agreement which they executed out of Court. No application was made to make this reference a rule of Court, nor was any proceeding taken by either party to cause the agreement to be filed under section 523 of the Civil Procedure Code, but the defendant at the next hearing of the suit pleaded the agreement as a bar to its further maintenance. The plaintiff denied the agreement, urging that he had signed it under a misconception of its purport, but the Courts, finding that both parties had deliberately entered into the reference, dismissed the suit, leaving either party to take such action as he might be advised under section 523 of the Code.

Held, that the grounds upon which the Courts below seemed to have proceeded were not sustainable; that every Civil Court must be taken to have power to proceed to a final adjudication of a suit of a Civil nature which had once been properly instituted before it, unless there was something in the Code of Civil Procedure or in some other Act to oust the jurisdiction of the Court; and that the only bar which a reference to arbitration which has not been made a rule of Court, can be said to create is that provided for in the last clause of section 21 of the Specific Relief Act, which was inapplicable to the present case, as the reference in question was made during the pendency and not before the institution of the suit.

Held, further, that a mere reference to arbitration in which there was no distinct agreement that the pending suit should be abandoned, could not be regarded as an adjustment within the meaning of section 375 of the Code, more especially when the very reference itself was denied by one of the parties to it. The adjustment contemplated in that section is one that would enable the Court then and there to dispose of the suit finally, which course would be obviously impracticable where there was a mere reference to arbitration, which left the dispute in practically the same unsettled position as before; nor does the same section contemplate that the Court should be called upon to make an inquiry into whether the plaintiff's claim had or had not been adjusted.

Held further, that the defendant could not successfully plead in the present case that there was an equitable bar to the continuance of the suit on the ground that the parties had agreed to forego further legal proceedings, there being no express agreement to that effect and no such agreement being necessarily implied from the mere appointment of arbitrators, as it would be quite consistent with such an appointment that the parties should still mean the suit to remain on the pending file, with the view of the result of the arbitration being finally embodied in the decree. 73. Act X of 1877, sections 509, 523—Application to file agreement to refer—Absence of provision for difference of opinion—Court appointing umpire on difference of opinion taking place—Fruitless reference.

An application was made to file, under section 523 of the Civil Procedure Code, an agreement to refer a dispute to arbitration, which contained no provision for a difference of opinion between the two arbitrators therein appointed. It appeared that some days after the order of reference had been made, the Court, owing to an expected difference of opinion between the arbitrators, without the agreement of the parties either in person or by their pleaders specially authorised in writing in this behalf, decided that an umpire should be appointed, in accordance with whose award the Court disposed of the case.

Held, reversing the orders of the lower Courts that the reference had become fruitless in consequence of the disagreement between the arbitrators originally appointed, and that the plaintiff's application under section 523 of the Civil Procedure Code must be dismissed. MUSSAMMAT BEGAM BIBI v. GHULAM GHAUS. 191 P R 1882

74. Civil Procedure Code, (Act X of 1877) sections 508, 510—Arbitrators not confining themselves to issues referred—Defective order of reference—proper order where defects in award arise from Court not drawing up proper order of reference.

After issues had been fixed, but before any evidence had been adduced on either side, the parties agreed to refer the whole case to the decision of certain arbitrators and an umpire, and stipulated in the written agreement filed in Court that the decision of the majority should bind the parties. The Court thereupon, by an order of reference, made over the issues which had been previously drawn, but which did not cover the whole matter in dispute, to the arbitrators named in the agreement of reference. The majority of the arbitrators finally gave in an award, which the first Court set aside and proceeded to try the case on the merits, but the lower Appellate Court, on appeal, holding that the first Court was not justified in rejecting the award, passed judgment in accordance therewith. It appeared from the award that the arbitrators had not confined themselves to the issues actually referred, as they were not empowered by the order of reference to decide what particular relief the plaintiff was entitled to.

Held, that the judgment of the lower Appellate Court passed in accordance with the award could not be upheld; that arbitrators who have been appointed in the course of a suit under a submission which has been made a rule of Court, can exercise no greater power than is vested in them by the referring order, as their powers are circumscribed within the four corners of that instrument, and can neither be enlarged nor narrowed by the view the arbitrators may themselves take of their duties.

But held further, that as it appeared that the defects which vitiated the award arose in consequence of the referring order not being drawn up in accordance with the agreement of the parties, the proper course to pursue was to set aside all the proceedings subsequent to the filing of the agreement to refer the case to arbitrators, and as the umpire had since died, to remand the case for the Court to proceed under section 510 of the Civil Procedure Code, with the view of either appointing a new umpire or of superseding the reference, and in the event of a new umpire being appointed, with directions to the Court to draw up a proper order of reference under section 508, including an issue as to the relief, if any, to which the plaintiff was entitled, and thereafter to proceed according to law, or, if no suitable umpire could be appointed, for the Court to proceed with the suit. 75. Act X of 1877, sections 523, 524—Agreement to refer which includes matters beyond the jurisdiction of the Civil Court—Power to file such agreement.

Held, that the agreement to refer to arbitration mentioned in section 523 of the Civil Procedure Code, must refer to matters in regard to which a Civil Court has jurisdiction to pass a final decree, and if it deals with other matters beyond the jurisdiction of a Civil Court, it is not one that can properly be ordered to be filed under the provisions of the section: the agreement must either be one capable of being filed as a whole or it must be rejected as a whole, there being no provision in sections 523 or 524 which would enable a Court to strike out that portion of the agreement which was in excess of the Court's jurisdiction in order to give itself jurisdiction, unless the parties agreed to do so with the view of proceeding with the reference. PARTAB SINGH v. DEVI SINGH. 5 P R 1883

76. Arbitrators giving in award too indefinite to be capable of execution—Appeal—Act X of 1877, sections 510, 522—Remission of award to arbitrators.

In a suit for ⅛th share in certain property left by the widow of one M. S., in which the defendants pleaded inter alia that the houses included in the suit were their own property, the parties agreed to refer the matters in dispute to the decision of four arbitrators, who eventually awarded the plaintiff a ⅛th share in all the houses left by the deceased. The arbitrators on being examined by the Court stated that, out of twelve houses in the village which the defendants claimed as their own, eight belonged to M. S., and the remaining four descended to the defendants from their father; whereupon the Court passed a decree to the effect that plaintiff was entitled to a ⅛th share of the houses left by M. S.

Held, that the decree and the award were both open to the objection of not being capable of execution, as the award did not specify which of the eight houses out of the twelve in defendants' possession, in which the plaintiff was entitled to an ⅛th share, were held to have belonged to M. S., while the decree merely gave plaintiff an ⅛th share in all the houses left by M. S. which was open to the further objection that it was not in accordance with the award, inasmuch as the award as interpreted by the arbitrators in Court, restricted the number of houses in which the plaintiff was entitled to a share to eight, which was not specified in the decree.

Held further, that the case did not come before the Court as one governed by section 522 of the Code, in which no appeal lay, as there was no award in the sense in which that term is used in the Code, of a complete adjudication of the points referred to the arbitrators for decision and one capable of execution, and that therefore an appeal lay both on that ground and also on the further ground above mentioned, that the decree strictly speaking was not in accordance with the award as pronounced.

Held also, that the proper order to pass was one remanding the case to the Court of first instance for remission to the arbitrators, if they were still alive, with the view of rendering their award capable of execution: with a direction that if the arbitrators or any of them had died meanwhile, the Court must then pass an order in the terms of section 510 of the Code, and proceed in accordance therewith. 77. Civil Procedure Code, (Act XIV of 1882), sections 508, 509, 512—Order of reference—Omission to pass such order—Fatal defect.

Held, that the omission of a Court which refers a case to arbitration to pass an order of reference such as is contemplated by sections 508, 509 of the Civil Procedure Code, is fatal to the subsequent proceedings, and in the absence of any such order there can be no legal award. Ram Ditta v. Mussammat Bhagan (No. 3 of 1883, Civil) cited. In a suit described as brought by all the members of a family jointly, the elder brother, acting as next friend on behalf of his minor brothers, agreed to refer the matter to arbitration. The application for reference was signed by the elder brother alone, the other brothers being present throughout the proceedings. The award was given against the plaintiffs, and their accusation of misconduct against the arbitrators having been found false by both the lower Courts, the objection was taken for the first time in second appeal to the Chief Court that B. one of the brothers described as a minor, was not a minor, and that the reference to arbitration was void as against him.

Held, that even if B. were in fact not a minor, he was estopped by his own conduct from putting forward this plea at the late stage he did.

Held further, that there is no provison of the Code of Civil Procedure which prevents a next friend, suing under section 440 of the Code, from referring the minor's interests to arbitration. Choohur Singh v. Jeet Singh (No. 64 of 1870, Civil F. In a suit by plaintiff to recover certain property as the adopted son of the late owner, it was pleaded that the suit would not lie, as, after the death of the late proprietor, arbitrators were appointed by the parties to settle the dispute regarding the succession to the estate, and gave their award. It appeared that the award in dealing with the division of the estate provided for the distribution of the lambardari and sarpanchi dues receivable by the defendant as lambardar.

Held, following Partab Singh v. Devi Singh (No. 5 of 1883, Civil), that the award was no bar to the suit, being one which could not be legally enforced, inasmuch as it dealt with matters beyond the jurisdiction of the Civil Court, and being incapable of enforcement, and therefore null and void as regards a part, was inoperative as a whole, as the illegal portion could not be separated from the rest. Plaintiff's application that an agreement to refer a dispute between the parties to arbitration should be filed in Court under section 523, Civil Procedure Code, having been granted, the Court directed the arbitrators to decide the matter in dispute, without recording any order of reference as required by that section, and on their filing awards disagreeing with each other, caused an umpire to be appointed under the terms of the agreement, and accepted a separate award from him, in accordance with which judgment was passed. On appeal, the lower Appellate Court, finding that there was no award which was capable of enforcement, there being no award of the majority as required by the agreement to refer, set aside the decree and dismissed the plaintiff's application, though the appeal took no objection to the order directing the agreement to be filed.

Held, that the proper course was to pass an order remanding the case to the first Court, in order that after making an order of reference (see sections 523 and 508 of the Code) it might proceed with the case under the provisions of section 524. Mussammat Begam Bibi v. Ghulam Ghaus (No. 191 of 1882, Civil) distinguished. Where, after the parties to a suit had appointed arbitrators, the Court in its order of reference to the said arbitrators included a direction that the parties should pay into Court a certain sum on account of the arbitrators' expenses, and held back the actual issue of the order pending such payment, and finally, the money not having been paid in, dismissed the plaintiff's suit, quoting as authority section 158 of the Civil Procedure Code, held, by the 2nd Financial Commissioner (cancelling the above order of dismissal), that the Court had acted with material irregularity in the case, as it had no authority, under section 508 of the Code, to hold back a reference to arbitration, or to attach thereto a condition that certain costs should be paid, the power to deal with costs being limited to an order, after the award had been filed, under section 519 of the Code. Fateh Singh v. Karm Chand (No. 56 *P. Held, that it is not a correct interpretation of section 523 of the Civil Procedure Code, that that section is intended to apply only to those cases where the agreement to refer to arbitration is admitted, and that where there is a substantial dispute between the parties as to the factum of the agreement, the Court is not competent to go further and deal with the objection finally. It is not only within the competency of the Court before which the application is pending to determine the factum of the agreement to refer or the submission to arbitration, but it is bound to do so.

Held further, that though a decree based on an "award" is declared to be final by the legislature under the terms of section 522, Civil Procedure Code, the provisions of that section pre-suppose the existence of a valid or legal award upon which a decree has been given, and where it can be shown that there is no legal award, that is to say, no award regularly and properly arrived at by arbitrators duly appointed, that finality prescribed by section 522 does not apply, and the decree is appealable like any other ordinary decree. Hurdeo v. Thana (No. 48 P. R. 1880), cited.

Held also, semble, that though the order directing an award to be filed is not appealable, still when a decree has been passed on the award, an appeal will lie on the ground that there was no legal award because there was no real agreement to refer the dispute to arbitrators, and on such appeal the correctness of the finding of the original Court as embodied in the interlocutory order may be challenged as an error affecting the decision of the case, within the meaning of the last part of section 591, Civil Procedure Code. 86. Agreement to refer containing provision for appointment of umpire—Difference of opinion—Opinion of majority—Umpire's decision valid as a binding award.

In a suit in which the parties agreed to arbitrate, it appeared that the agreement to refer contained a provision that if the arbitrators (two in number) differed, an umpire would be appointed. An award having been filed in which the umpire coincided with the defendant's arbitrator, it was objected (inter alia) by the defendant, and the objection was allowed by the lower Court, that as no provision was made in the application for arbitrators that the decision of the majority should prevail the award was not a valid one.

Held that (subject to proof of misconduct) the award was a valid one and binding on the parties, not because the umpire happened to agree with one arbitrator, and thus formed a majority, but because the arbitrators having differed, the opinion of the umpire was entitled to prevail. 87. Finality of judgment in accordance with award—Arbitrators stating special case—Court refusing to accept award in such form and remitting it for further consideration—Subsequent award following opinion of Court on special case—Validity of such award—Misconduct—Reference of whole matter in difference in case—Validity of such reference—Award by two out of three arbitrators who have not consulted with the third—Such award not a nullity—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882, sections 506, 508, 517, 520, 522).

After a case had been referred to two arbitrators, the said arbitrators submitted an award in the form of a special case (section 517, Civil Procedure Code), saying that they wished to know upon which side the burden of proving a certain point would fall, as that side would fail, which had to establish the point. The Court told them that the burden lay upon the plaintiff, and remitted the award for further consideration. Finally, a difference of opinion having arisen, an umpire was appointed by the Court, and one arbitrator and the umpire gave an award in favour of the defendant. Plaintiff filed several objections, which were overruled after taking evidence, and a decree made in accordance with the award.

Held per Curiam, that no appeal lay merely because the Court had given its opinion on the question put in the special case, which the Court refused to receive; and that if it was misconduct in the arbitrators to seek an opinion from the Court (which was not affirmed) an objection should have been taken in the lower Court on this ground, which was not done.

Held further, per PLOWDEN, J., that a reference of the whole matter in difference in a particular case may be a reference of a particular matter within the meaning of sections 506, 508 of the Civil Procedure Code.

Held also per PLOWDEN, J., that an award of two out of three persons is not a nullity merely because the two have not consulted with the third before making it. Their conduct is probably misconduct, but it ought to be alleged accordingly, and if found to be misconduct, it is a ground for avoiding the award. KHILU RAM v. JIWAN SINGH. 55 P R 1889

88. Arbitration—Arbitrators omitting to examine all the defendants' witnesses—Misconduct—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), sections 521, 622—Lower Court overruling plea of misconduct and giving judg- ment in terms of award—Ground for revision—Material irregularity—Court giving wrong decision upon legal question.

In a suit in which arbitrators were appointed and delivered an award in favour of plaintiff it was objected by the defendant that the arbitrators had only examined two out of five of his witnesses, though they were present, and defendant desired to have them examined. The lower Court found that the witnesses were present as alleged, but held that the arbitrators were not bound to take all the evidence produced, but only so much as they considered necessary for the purpose of justice (which they had done), and finding no misconduct proved, made a decree in terms of the award.

Held that the decision of the lower Court was clearly wrong, as it is the duty of an arbitrator to take the evidence of witnesses produced before him by a party, and the refusal to do so is misconduct on the part of the arbitrator within the meaning of section 521 of the Civil Procedure Code.

But held further, that the error of the lower Court was not open to, or which could be remedied in revision, as that Court considered the objection of the defendant, and adjudicated upon it, and the mere circumstance that his adjudication was erroneous, was no ground for revision under section 622 of the Civil Procedure Code. 89. Civil Procedure Code, sections 25, 508, 522—Withdrawal—Trial—Arbitration—Order of reference—Validity of award—Absence of reasons for award—Finality of decree based on award.

The suit out of which this appeal arose was instituted in the Court of Mr. C., District Judge. After the issues had been settled, Mr. C., on the representation of both parties, consented to act as an arbitrator. Application was then made to the Divisional Judge to withdraw the case from the District Court and to refer the same to Mr. C. for decision. The Divisional Judge referred "all matters in difference between the parties, irrespective of the issues drawn in the case," and Mr. C., after inquiry, delivered the following award: "That the plaintiff's suit be dismissed, and that the parties bear their own costs." Plaintiff then filed objections to the award, which were overruled, and judgment passed in accordance with the award. Plaintiff appealed to the Chief Court. It was contended on his behalf, (I) that withdrawals under section 25, Civil Procedure Code, can only legally take place where the withdrawing Court intends to try the suit itself and not where the avowed object is to make over the case to an arbitrator for decision; (II) that the order of reference was materially defective as it did not specify the particular matter referred to the arbitrator; (III) that the award was bad inasmuch as it assigned no reasons for, and gave no details of, the decision, and (IV) that the objections on the ground of legal misconduct urged against the award in the original Court were valid.

Held (1) that a Court which withdraws a case for trial before itself under section 25 of the Civil Procedure Code, may, after such withdrawal, proceed according to any of the recognized methods of procedure laid down in the Civil Procedure Code.

(2) That the reference to arbitration in the present case did not contravene the provisions of section 508, Civil Procedure Code, as a reference of the whole matter in dispute between the parties in a particular case may be a reference of a particular matter within the meaning of the above section.

(3) That the award was not bad in law because the arbitrator had not given his reasons for his decision or entered into details.

(4) That allegations of misconduct which have been duly heard and decided by a Court which has thereafter passed judgment in accordance with an award, cannot be re-opened on appeal to a higher Court, the decree which follows the judgment being final under section 522, Civil Procedure Code. In a suit by two sons of a deceased Muhammadan to recover their shares in their father's estate from their brother, the defendant pleaded that he was entitled to the said estate under an award in his favour made on a submission to which the plaintiffs were parties; but it appeared that the Civil Court had refused an application under section 525, Civil Procedure Code, to file the same.

Held, that this order was not a decision as to the validity of the award within the meaning of section 13.

Where a dispute relating to land and the right of succession thereto was referred by the members of a Muhammadan family to a private arbitrator, selected by reason of his knowledge of the circumstances of the family, without any stipulation that he was to be controlled in his decision by any custom or Muhammadan Law, and the arbitrator decided on the broad view of giving effect to what he conceived to be the intention of the deceased father of the parties;

Held, that this could not be relied on as misconduct, and that such decision was within the right of the arbitrator. MUHAMMAD NAWAZ KHAN v. ALAM KHAN. 70 P R 1891

95. Arbitration—Consent of all the parties to the suit—section 506, Civil Procedure Code—Appellate Court remanding an appeal under section 562 as regards one defendant and dismissing the appeal as regards the other defendants—More than one decree in same suit.

J. sued D. B., the mother of the girl, and the girl's three uncles, for Rs. 1,000 damages for an alleged breach of a betrothal contract. After settlement of issues, the plaintiff and the three male defendants agreed to refer the matters in dispute to arbitration under the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code. D. B., the mother, did not sign the agreement, but K. M., one of the uncles, stated that he was representing her and that he joined her in the reference to arbitration with her full knowledge and consent.

An award was given in favour of the plaintiff, upon which judgment and decree followed against all four defendants.

Upon appeal by the defendants, the Divisional Judge held that the award was inoperative as regards D. B., unless it could be shown that she had ratified the submission to arbitration, but that the award was good as regards the parties who had consented to the reference. The Divisional Judge accordingly remanded the case under section 562, Civil Procedure Code, for decision as regards D. B. and dismissed the appeal as regards the three male defendants.

Held, on further appeal, that the decree of the Divisional Judge was bad in law. He could not legally dispose of the appeal finally as regards the three male defendants and re-open the case by a remand as regards the fourth,—the almost inevitable result of such procedure being that eventually there would be more than one, and possibly conflicting, decrees in the one suit.

96. Suit for property claimed under private reference to arbitration—Validity of award—Award though bad in part when good for the rest.

The two sons and the widow of R. referred the question of the partition of R.'s property to two arbitrators. The arbitrators duly made an award dividing the property, which was partly situate in the Punjab and partly at Baroda (Bombay Presidency).

The eldest son instituted a suit to recover possession of certain of the property situate at Amritsar which fell to his share under the award.

The defendants contended, inter alia, that the award was incomplete and invalid in that it failed to make a complete partition of the Baroda property.

Held, that the objection was not sustainable. This was not a proceeding to enforce an award under the Civil Procedure Code, in which case it would be necessary either to affirm the award in its entirety or wholly reject it. It was open to the Court in the present proceeding to consider whether the rest of the award might not be good, even though one portion of it was bad.

Where arbitrators act in excess of their authority and this portion of their award can be struck out, and the remainder of the award still contains a final determination of all material questions submitted, the valid portion of the award may be maintained and the void portion rejected.

The principle, that though the award be deficient as to a matter within the submission if it be separable, the rest of the award may often be supported, adopted and applied. MIRAN BAKHSH v. RAHIM BAKHSH.

The petitioner made an application under section 523, Civil Procedure Code, 1882, that an agreement between him and the defendant to refer a dispute to the arbitration of two persons named in the agreement be filed in Court.

The defendant pleaded that his consent to the agreement had been obtained by fraud and misrepresentation.

The lower Court held that it was not open to it to go into these questions in the proceeding before it and refused the application.

Held, that the Court could not say whether or not sufficient cause for not ordering the agreement to be filed had been shown, within the true meaning of section 523 of the Code, unless and until it has investigated and adjudicated upon the defendant's objections.

The mere allegation by the defendant that he did not freely and with full knowledge of all material facts consent to the agreement, cannot be deemed to be sufficient cause for not filing the agreement, until the Court is in a position to affirm that the allegations have been established.

Held, by the Full Bench that there is no appeal, under section 522 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1882, from a decree following a judgment given according to an award of arbitrators which has not been modified or corrected under section 518 except upon one or other of the two grounds expressly mentioned in the concluding paragraph of the former section.

Although under section 325 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1859, it was competent to a party to object by way of appeal that what purported to be an award was no award or had no legal existence as an award ab initio, or that the decree was bad because of an irregular procedure in the Court either before the award de facto was delivered or afterwards, the sole test, under the present Code of Civil Procedure is whether the appellant alleges that the decree is not in accordance with the award or is in excess of it. If he does, he can appeal to that extent. In all cases which do not satisfy this test, whatever remedy a party dissatisfied with the award and the decree may have, it can no longer be by way of appeal.

Plaintiff sued for a declaration that one Mussammat N. B. was his lawful wife, and the question was referred, with the consent of the parties, to arbitration. The arbitrators decided that the marriage which had taken place between plaintiff and Mussammat N. B. was illegal; that the girl had been previously betrothed to one K. R. (another defendant), but that plaintiff's marriage should be held good as plaintiff had given his own sister in exchange for Mussammat N. B., but that it should be a condition that R. C. (one of the defendants), who had effected plaintiff's marriage, should get K. R. betrothed to a girl under eight years of age within two years, and, if he failed to do so, should pay K. R. Rs. 500 damages. The lower Court, thereupon, passed a decree simply to the effect that Mussammat N. B. was the legal wife of plaintiff.

Held, that the decree of the lower Court, although it professed to follow the award, was not "in accordance" therewith, and was appealable.

Held further, that inasmuch as the Court, in order to pass a decree embodying all the provisions of the award, would have had to determine matters not referred to arbitration and would have been giving a decree against R. C., one defendant, in favour of K. R., another defendant, who never asked for such a decree, the lower Court should, according to section 520 of the Code, have remitted the award to the arbitrators for reconsideration. The District Judge having passed an order requiring the petitioner to produce in Court an award which he, acting as arbitrator for certain parties, had drawn up and signed but had not yet delivered to them, the petitioner applied to the Chief Court for revision of the said order, and alleged that one of the said parties had applied to the lower Court to file the award under section 525, Civil Procedure Code; that in taking up the arbitration he did not intend to act gratuitously; that he had not yet received his fee, which the referring parties refused to pay; that he had a lien on the award for such fee; and that if he produced the award in Court he would be left without a remedy for its recovery. The petitioner took these objections in the lower Court, which however, overruled them, and gave him ten days' time to get an order from the Chief Court in his favour. For respondents it was contended that the application did not lie; that the Chief Court should not interfere as the applicant had other and more suitable remedies, and that the petitioner had no lien on the award.

Held, that the petitioner was competent to make, and the Chief Court had jurisdiction to entertain, the application in question.

Held further, that in the absence of any express promise by the parties to a reference to remunerate an arbitrator, the latter has no right of action in respect of such remuneration, his sole remedy being to refuse to deliver his award until his charges are paid.

Held also, that on general principles and in the absence of any direct provision to the contrary, an arbitrator has a lien on his award for the payment of his reasonable charges.

The sections of the Indian Contract Act relating to liens are not exhaustive and do not negative the existence of liens not therein specified.

107. Arbitration, reference of case to—Award of arbitrators—Acceptance of award on date of delivery by both parties—Subsequent objections to award by both parties —Court setting aside award and adjudicating on case—Estoppel.

To a suit by plaintiffs, who were the collaterals of one R. K., deceased, for possession of four houses and one shop belonging to the latter, the defendant pleaded that he was the adopted son of R. K., and as such excluded the plaintiffs. On the day fixed for hearing evidence both parties agreed to refer the case to the decision of arbitrators who were present in Court, and preferred a request that the arbitrators might be asked to file their award that day. A referring order was accordingly drawn up to this effect, it being further recited that the arbitrators had already made inquiries. The arbitrators filed their award the same day, finding all issues in favour of defendant, but nevertheless giving one of the houses and Rs. 175 to plaintiffs. The parties were examined by the Court, and expressed their acceptance of the award, but the Court, instead of passing a decree in terms of the award, adjourned the hearing for objections to be filed. On the 2nd June the defendant objected to the effect that, as all the issues had been found in his favour, the award of the house and cash to plaintiffs was proof of the arbitrators' partiality towards plaintiffs. He therefore prayed that the award might be set aside or amended. On the 4th June plaintiffs also filed objections to the award, and charged the arbitrators with misconduct in that they had decided the case without inquiry. On the 10th June both parties were examined and stated that they wished the award to be set aside, whereupon the Court, after questioning the arbitrators, set aside the award on the ground, inter alia, that both parties were agreed that the arbitrators had decided the case without inquiry and wished the award to be cancelled. The Court then proceeded to inquire into the case, and on the merits held that plaintiffs' claim should be decreed as defendant's adoption had not been proved. On appeal the Divisional Judge agreed with the first Court on the facts, and held further that defendant was not competent, after his objections to the award and in the face of his prayer to have it set aside, to ask the Court of appeal to pass a decree in terms of the award. Defendant appealed to the Chief Court, and contended, inter alia, (1) that when on the date of award both parties accepted it, the case should not have been adjourned in order to enable objections to be filed, but a decree should forthwith have been passed in accordance with it, and (2) that the Court erred in setting aside the award on the ground of the arbitrators' misconduct in deciding it without inquiry, the parties having expressly asked for the award to be filed the same day.

Held, that the Court had committed an irregularity in adjourning the case for objections when both parties expressed their acceptance of the award.

Held further, on the facts of the case, that the arbitrators had not been guilty of the misconduct attributed to them.

But held, that the Court, both in adjourning the case and in finding misconduct on the part of the arbitrators, had acted within its jurisdiction, though erroneously, and that the error which it had committed amounted merely to an irregularity of procedure from which no substantial injustice on the merits had been proved to result.

Held also, that though the proceedings had been irregular, the defendant was estopped by his conduct from taking exception to them after their conclusion merely on the ground of an irregularity which had been committed at his instance. SHEO NARAIN v. SHEO RAM. 15 P R 1899

109. Reference and award—Construction—Validity of award—Abstract filed with award—Setting aside award.

One B., a contractor, sued the Municipal Committee of Lahore for Rs. 43,201 for work done by him on a certain public building, and in his plaint admitted that he had been paid a sum of Rs. 56,810.

The matters in dispute had previously been referred to private arbitration, the parties agreeing that "arbitration be resorted to for a "settlement of the dispute so far as it relates "to measurements of work done and to the "rates to be paid for the same, where such "rates have not been agreed upon between "the Committee and the contractor." The two arbitrators appointed subsequently delivered their award, which was to the effect that "after having duly weighed and "considered, &c. &c., they award and adjudge "that the Municipal Committee do pay to B., "the contractor, the sum of Rs. 58,876 as the "total value of the work done" With this award the arbitrators gave in a statement, headed "Abstract of Cost" of the building in question. This abstract appeared to be the foundation of the award, and represented the results of the arbitrators' inquiries.

The District Judge held that the said award was invalid because (a) it directed a specified sum to be paid by defendant to plaintiff, and (b) the arbitrators had omitted to allow for certain portions of the work.

The District Judge thereupon proceeded himself to adjudicate in the matter, and gave plaintiff a decree for Rs. 13,779 with costs in proportion and interest on the amount decreed. Both parties appealed to the Chief Court, and on behalf of plaintiff it was contended that the award was also invalid because his arbitrator had absented himself from the proceedings and made the work over to his son. It was further urged that if the award was to be maintained it must be interpreted strictly, and that under its literal terms plaintiff was entitled to receive the full sum therein awarded to him, viz., Rs. 58,876.

Held, (i) that according to the terms of the agreement to refer, the scope of the arbitration was limited to an inquiry as to (a) the quantities of the work done by the plaintiff, and (b) the rates where none were provided for by the original contract; and that though in certain particulars the arbitrators had exceeded their authority, it was possible to separate from their finding and award that which was in excess of their authority;

(ii) that it had not been proved that plaintiff's arbitrator had absented himself from the proceedings or that his son had acted in the matter otherwise than in a purely ministerial capacity;

(iii) that the abstract given with the award was the basis of the award, and must be read with it;

(iv) that the mistake made by the arbitrators in awarding a specified sum to be paid by the defendant did not vitiate the award;

(v) that the meaning of the award was clearly that after due inquiry the arbitrators were of opinion that the sum of Rs. 58,876 represented the total value of the work done by the plaintiff for defendant and that the meaning of the award being clear, the literal wording thereof was not to be interpreted with too great strictness;

(vi) that in order to make the award invalid on account of the alleged omissions to make allowance for certain work done by the plaintiff it would be necessary to find that the arbitrators had wilfully or negligently omitted to make the requisite measurements, &c., and include them in their award, and that there was no evidence of any such wilful or negligent omission.

Where the parties to a dispute have deliberately referred it to arbitration and bound themselves to abide by the decision of the arbitrators the award of the arbitrators should not be set aside lightly or for a merely formal defect. MUNICIPAL COMMITTEE, LAHORE v. BUTA. 65 P R 1899

Held, by the Full Bench.

(i) that a Court is competent upon an application under section 525, Civil Procedure Code, to file an award to enquire into and decide objections other than those specified in sections 520 and 521 of the Code;

(ii) that section 526 does not limit the enquiry allowed under section 523, and that a Court is competent upon an application under that section to file the reference to arbitration in spite of defendant's denial of the agreement to refer;

(iii) that an appeal lies from an acceptance or rejection of an application under section 525, Civil Procedure Code, when the award is illegal ab initio; and

114. Arbitration—Powers and duties of arbitrators—Delegation of authority to perform certain ministerial acts—Excess in award—Award not bad for excess of authority where the good part of the award was separable from that portion which exceeded the authority.

The plaintiff obtained a contract from the defendants for building a Town Hall which was completed in 1890. When the final accounts came to be settled, disputes arose between the parties, and were referred to arbitration by an agreement, dated the 18th February 1891. The arbitrators being uncertain as to the meaning of a particular clause of the agreement of reference, upon which depended the scope of the reference, wrote to the defendant asking for an opinion, which was obtained from the counsel who had prepared the agreement. This was not communicated to the plaintiff until after the award was made.

The plaintiff, being dissatisfied with the award filed a suit for adjustment of accounts and recovery of the money that might be found due to him for work done and material supplied under the contract for additional work done outside the contract and also for damages. The defendants relied on the award as a bar to the suit, and disputed the claim for damages. The plaintiff challenged the award on the grounds that the arbitrators were guilty of misconduct and had exceeded their jurisdiction. One of the acts of misconduct charged against them was that they, being in doubt as to the subject matter submitted to them for determination, referred to and obtained the interpretation thereof from the defendants alone without communicating with him on the subject, the second ground being that one of the arbitrators had delegated his duty to his son and employed him to take the measurements instead of taking them himself. The objection as to excess of duty was that, instead of only working out the measurements of work done and the rates to be paid where such rates had not been agreed upon between the parties, the arbitrators also found a particular sum due from defendant to plaintiff.

Held, by the Privy Council.

(i). Following Rolland v. Cassidy (L. R., 13 App. Cas., 777), that though there may have been an error of judgment on the part of the arbitrators, there was no ground for impeaching the good faith of any of the parties concerned or the correctness of the opinion given by the counsel consulted, and that that was not such an irregularity as vitiated the award.

(ii). That there is no doubt that an arbitrator can delegate to a third person the performance of acts of a ministerial character, and that it had been satisfactorily proved that acts of a ministerial character only had been delegated by one of the arbitrators to his son.

(iii). That, as the award consisted of two parts, the first of which gave the detailed measurements and rates allowed by the arbitrators, with a column of remarks showing in some cases the bases of their decision, while the second awarded a specific sum to the plaintiff as the sum resulting from the calculation of the quantities ascertained at the rates allowed in the first part of the exhibit, the whole must be regarded as constituting the award, and that, as that portion of the award which related to the measurements of work done and the rates to be paid for the same, where such rates had not been agreed upon between the parties, was clearly separable from that portion of the award which went beyond the strict terms of the agreement of reference, the first part therefore was an honest determination upon the specific matter referred to the arbitrators and was valid and binding upon the parties, and that the faulty direction given in excess of their authority might be treated as null.

Held, on the merits that it was incorrect that the arbitrators had failed to allow for certain portions of the work done or that they had lowered the rates agreed on by the parties or that the plaintiff was entitled to any damages. BUTA v. THE MUNICIPAL COMMITTEE OF LAHORE. 87 P R 1902 P C

115. An award implies an adjudication or decision by an arbitrator upon the matter submitted to him. A mere petition by the arbitrator reciting that he had induced the parties to settle their dispute by a razinama does not amount to an award. THAKAR DAS v. JASWANT RAI. 1 P R 1904

116. Arbitration—Award—Decree of Appellate Court in accordance with award—Finality of decree—Further appeal—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, sections 521, 522, 582.

Held, that where a Court of first instance wrongly sets aside an arbitration award and passes a decree against the terms thereof, and a Court of appeal dealing with the merits of the case comes to the conclusion that the award was not open to any such objections as are contemplated by section 521 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and upon that finding passes a decree strictly in accordance with the terms of the award, such appellate decree is entitled to the same finality as a decree of the first Court would have had under the last paragraph of section 522, and cannot be made the subject of a further appeal.

Court to question the legality of the order setting aside award—Civil Procedure Code,* 1882, section 521.

Where arbitrators held meetings and took the evidence produced by one party in the absence of the other party which was wholly unavoidable and did not give the latter sufficient opportunity to produce his own evidence: held, that they were guilty of judicial misconduct within the meaning of section 521 of the Civil Procedure Code and that their award was not valid and rightly set aside by the Court.

Query.—Whether in a case in which there has been an order of reference to arbitration under section 508, Civil Procedure Code, and an award has been delivered by the arbitrators but has been set aside by the Court under section 521, and a decree is passed on the merits, it is open to an Appellate Court on an appeal against that decree to consider the question of the legality of the order setting aside the award. SOBHA RAM v. RAM DAS. 66 P R 1907

118. Arbitration—Application to file a private award—Award effecting portion of immovable property—Registration Act, 1877, section 17, clause (b) (i)—Court not competent to remit private award when defective and indefinite—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, sections 520, 525, 526*—Court-fee—Court-fee on appeal from an order rejecting an application to file an award in Court—Court-fees Act,* 1870, Schedule I, articles 1, 17.

Held, that the Court-fee payable upon the memorandum of appeal against an order rejecting an application under section 525 to file an award is Rs. 10 under the sixth clause of article 17 and not an ad valorem fee in accordance with article 1 of the Court-fees Act, 1870.

Held, also, that when an award made without the intervention of the Court is on the face of it defective, determines matters not referred to arbitration, and is so indefinite as to be incapable of execution, the Court has no power under sections 525 and 526 to amend it or to remit it for reconsideration but must refuse to file and enforce it.

Semble: for the purposes of Section 525 of the Code of Civil Procedure an award of arbitrators privately appointed by the parties even if it effects partition of joint immovable property of over Rs. 100 in value and is signed by the parties to signify their acceptance of the same does not require registration and can be filed and made a rule of Court. 119. Arbitration—Award—Delivery of—within the period allowed by the Court—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, sections 508, 521.

Held, that an award made and signed within the period fixed by the Court even when filed in Court after the expiry of that period is valid under sections 508 and 521 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

The expression "delivery" in section 508 means "making" and not "filing in Court." BHAGAT RAM v. GANDA SINGH. 89 P R 1907

119. Arbitration—Award—Order directing private award to be filed—Finality of such order—Appeal—Revision—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, sections 522, 525, 526.

Held by the Full Bench that no appeal will lie from an order under section 526 of the Code of Civil Procedure directing the filing of an award made between the parties without the intervention of a Court, except in so far as the decree may be not in accordance with the award, and equally such an order is not subject to revision on the points on which an appeal would not be allowed.

Held, that an application for filing an award under section 525, Civil Procedure Code, 1882, should be dismissed as premature and must fail where the award had not been pronounced orally or reduced to writing at the time of the application.

Held also, that notwithstanding that the Court of first instance passed a decree in accordance with the award an appeal lay to the District Court, as the first Court had dealt with an application which it had no power to entertain and which it should have rejected, immediately the fact was made known to it, that the award was not in existence at the date of the presentation of the application.

122. Suit based on an award—Right of appeal.

Held, that a suit can be brought upon an award independently of the summary procedure authorized by section 525 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1882, at any period which the law for the limitation of suits permits, and a decree made in such a case is appealable though there would be no appeal from a similar decree made in the summary proceedings under Chapter XXXVII of the Code. 123. Arbitration—Pendente lite—Agreement to refer, made by parties out of Court—Application presented to Court by one party only—Civil Procedure Code, 1908, Schedule II, article 1.

Where a suit was instituted in June 1910, and on 3rd October parties agreed out of Court to nominate certain arbitrators to decide their dispute and, in pursuance of their agreement, had a petition to the Court written out, and owing to the Judge's absence for some days the petition could not be used until 17th October; when plaintiff alone presented it in Court, defendant denying having agreed to arbitration and refusing to join in the presentation.

Held, that not only the writing out of an application, but the presentation of it, must have the concurrence of all the parties to fulfil the requirements of article 1 of Schedule II of the Civil Procedure Code, 1908, and that the Lower Court was consequently right in rejecting the application. MIRAN BAKHSH v. SHER MUHAMMAD. 17 P R 1911

124. Suit based on agreement containing a clause for reference to arbitration—Specific Relief Act, 1877, section 21 (last clause).

Held, that defendant on whom the onus lay had failed to prove that plaintiffs had refused to perform the contract to refer the matter to arbitration before the present suit was instituted and that consequently the last clause of section 21 of the Specific Relief Act, 1877, did not operate as a bar to the plaintiff's suit. UDHE SINGH v. S. BISHEN SINGH. 25 P R 1911

125. Arbitration—Application for reference to arbitration—Several causes of action joined in one application—Nomination of arbitrator by Court—Difference between the old and new Code,—Civil Procedure Code, 1908, section 141, Schedule I, order 2, rule 3 and clause 17 of the second Schedule—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, section 523—Material irregularity.

Held, that O. 2, R. 3 of Schedule I read with section 141 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1908, enables a Court to allow plaintiffs to join several causes of action in one application to file in Court agreements to refer to arbitration under clause 17 of Schedule II.

Held also, that section 523 of the old Civil Procedure Code, 1882, differed materially from the provisions of clause 17 of Schedule II of the present Civil Procedure Code, 1908, inasmuch as under the former it was necessary that the arbitrators should be named in the agreement and but in clause 17 there is no reference to "arbitrators named" and the sole provision is that the reference is to be to the arbitrators "appointed in accordance with the provisions of the agreement."

ARBITRATION—concld.

Where a Court, in contravention of the express agreement between the parties and the imperative terms of the Civil Procedure Code, appointed an arbitrator who did not come under the terms of that agreement, it committed an irregularity which materially prejudiced the plaintiffs. Held, that an order on an application under section 19 of the Indian Arbitration Act, 1899—staying or refusing to stay proceedings, is not a decree within the terms of section 2 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, and is therefore not open to revision by the Chief Court under section 70 (1) (b) of the Punjab Courts Act, 1884.

Held also, that the terms, "could be instituted in a Presidency town" in section 2 of the Arbitration Act is not limited to suits which cannot be instituted elsewhere than in a Presidency town, but applies to suits which can, at the plaintiff's option, be instituted in a Presidency town or elsewhere. 1. Before judgment.
On the application of plaintiff, an order was passed for a warrant to issue, under section 75, Act VIII of 1859, to bring up defendant to show cause why he should not give bail for his appearance—unless defendant gave security for his appearance, with satisfaction of any decree that might be passed against him. Defendant's pleader appeared, and gave the required bail. Defendant not having appeared, the bail was forfeited. Defendant in appeal urged that the order of arrest and subsequent proceedings thereon were bad, in that he should have been arrested and required to show cause before security was demanded.

Held, that defendant in choosing to appear and offer bail through his pleader was prevented from taking this objection. He could not insist upon an irregularity in the course of the proceedings, when he himself acted

ASSIGNMENT.

1. Assignment—Lien on present and future property.

Held, that in equity there could be a valid assignment of property to be subsequently acquired. THE NATIONAL BANK OF INDIA v. THE DELHI COTTON MILLS COMPANY, LIMITED. 57 P R 1902

2. Assignment—Conditional assignment by way of security—Right of assignee to sue in his own name.

Where the payee of a promissory note, not negotiable, assigned it to the plaintiff as a security for a debt owing from him to the latter until its repayment in full, held, that it being merely a conditional assignment the plaintiff was not entitled to maintain an action in his own name alone against the maker of the promissory note, for the recovery of the amount due thereunder.

ASSIGNMENT OF CHOSE IN ACTION.

See ASSIGNMENT OF DEBT.

1. Suit by assignor—Notice of assignment—Conditional assignment.

Plaintiff sued on the allegation that he had a claim for Rs. 10,000 against defendant, arising out of a transaction regarding blue stones; that he assigned the claim to one M. S. for Rs. 6,000, it being agreed at the time of the assignment that the suit to enforce the claim against the defendant, should be brought by and in the name of the plaintiff, but for the benefit of M. S., who would provide the funds required for and receive the fruits of the litigation. No notice of the assignment was given to the defendant either by the assignor or the assignee. It was urged by the defendant, among other pleas, that plaintiff having parted with his property and rights in the subject-matter of the suit, was not entitled to bring or maintain the suit.

Held, that this contention could not prevail; that though the assignee of a chose in action was entitled to sue in his own name in the Courts of this country, and, if there had been an unconditional assignment of the claim and if notice of the assignment had been given to the defendant, the plea might have been good, it was of no force when it appeared that the suit was brought by the assignor in pursuance of the contract of assignment and for the benefit and with the consent of the assignee. MUHAMMAD SADIQ v. POLLARD. 186 P R 1883

Held, that a reversioner out of possession of a childless male proprietor can transfer his interests to a stranger after devolution of inheritance and the assignee is entitled to recover possession of the property and contest the validity of the title of the person in possession subject to the same rules which could have been enforced by the assignor. SHER SINGH v. SIDHU. 11 P R 1907

ASSIGNMENT OF DEBT.

1. A promise to pay money when a debtor receives a debt due to him by a third person, does not constitute an assignment so as to charge the debt in the hands of such third person. It simply holds out to the promisee the expectation that he will receive the money when paid by the third person. Such an arrangement is countermandable. MOOL CHAND v. JUMYUT SINGH. 63 P R 1873

2. Equitable assignment of debt.

M. borrowed money from plaintiff to enable him to carry out a building contract for B, it being arranged between the three that whatever became due from B to M up to the 20th December 1872, should be paid to the plaintiff. Before that date and before any money was paid by B to the plaintiff, the defendant obtained a decree against M and attached what was due from B to M (or what would have been due to M but for the arrangement with the plaintiff). Plaintiff sued to establish his right to receive the money from B.

Held, that there was an assignment to plaintiff of B's debt to M, and he had a right to the money in preference to the defendant. LAKHA v. SOBHA. 66 P R 1875

3. Rights arising out of a contract—Intention—Notice—Assignment of debt.

The rights arising out of a contract, when the matter of the contract permits it, are assignable in equity for a valuable consideration; such assignment may be made by any words or acts showing a clear intention to assign, and may be valid as against the assignor without any notice to the debtor. Nor is notice necessary as against third parties, including judgment-creditors of the assignor, who simply stand in the same position as the assignor. But the intention to create a charge must be shown, and therefore a promise to pay money when the debtor receives a debt due to him from a third person does not constitute an equitable assignment, so as to charge the debt in the hands of such third person.

Defendant, who had a contract with the postal department for the maintenance of a certain postal stage at a monthly payment of Rs. 600, mortgaged to the plaintiff his chauki and horses with possession, and agreed with the plaintiff, his mortgagee, that the said monthly payment accruing to him under his contract would be paid to the mortgagee, of which Rs. 200 should be credited to the mortgage-debt, and Rs. 400 should be applied to the maintenance of the horses.

Held, that the interest affected in the above case was one which admitted of being assigned, and further, that there was a sufficient indication of an intention to transfer or appropriate the debt to the plaintiff or for his use, the assignment thus falling within the principle of an equitable assignment and creating a valid equitable charge upon the fund. If defendant had received the money, he would have been bound to hold on account of the plaintiff, and if it had been attached in his hand, the plaintiff might have had it released under section 280 of the Civil Procedure Code. Mool Chand v. Jumyut Singh (63 P. R. 1873) cited. GURDITTA MAL v. SULTAN MUHAMMAD. 60 P R 1884

4. Chose in action—Assignment of debts—Notice of assignment to debtor—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), Chapter VIII—Contract Act, 1872, section 60.

The plaintiff as assignee of a debt sued two defendants the debtor and the original creditor, the latter of whom was the plaintiff's assignor. The debtor-defendant pleaded that he had settled accounts with the original creditor, and was, therefore, not liable to the assignee.

The first Court having found that the settlement between the debtor and the original creditor was subsequent to the assignment and did not include the debt in suit, and having given judgment in favour of plaintiff, defendant-debtor appealed to the District Judge on two grounds, 1st, that the item now in suit was entered in the deed of compromise between him and the original creditor, and 2nd, that he had no knowledge of the assignment.

The District Judge held that no notice whatever to the debtor of the assignment had been proved, and, relying upon section 60 of the Contract Act, and without coming to any finding as to whether the defendant-debtor had as a matter of fact settled with his original creditor without notice of the assignment, he dismissed plaintiff's claim.

The plaintiff applied to the Chief Court for revision of the decree of the District Judge.

Held, that before plaintiff's suit could be dismissed, it was necessary to find that defendant had settled with his creditor.

Held, also, that the Contract Act has nothing to do with the assignment of debts, and that, although the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, is not in force in the Punjab, the law on the subject in force in this Province is to the same effect as that contained in Chapter VIII and the principal rule in section 131 of that Act.

Although a chose in action is assignable in this country, an assignment cannot operate to the prejudice of the original debtor so long as he has no notice of the assignment. Where, however, the debtor asserts that he has settled the debt with his original creditor, it is necessary to find both whether such settlement has actually taken place, and also whether the debtor was cognisant, or not, at the time of such settlement of the assignment. If it is found that the debt was not settled, as alleged, the absence of notice of the assignment is not material.

Held further, that the institution of a suit by the assignee is itself notice of the assignment. JHOKI RAM v. MALIK KADIR BAKHSH. 12 P R 1894

5. Assignment of debt—Right of assignee to sue.

Held, that where a plaintiff sues for the recovery of a debt as an assignee, he is bound to prove that he was a bona fide assignee of the debt and capable of giving a valid discharge especially where the defence questions the validity of the alleged assignment. MUL CHAND v. PIYARE LAL. 23 P R 1903

Held, that this was an improper proceeding; that the Court should have attached and sold D's rights in the house, whatever they were, and have left the purchaser of them and E to bring the matter of who was the owner of the house, and to what extent, to a decision. LALU MAL v. RAM CHAND.

56. Mortgage with power of sale—Consent of mortgagor to sale—Sale of mortgaged property after attachment by a third party—Section 240, Act VIII of 1859.

Where there is a mortgage deed in English form, with a power of sale, the parties acting according to English law, the mortgagee can sell the property without the consent of the mortgagor; and such sale is not void under section 240, Act VIII of 1859, though it is effected after an attachment of the property by a third party, a judgment-creditor of the mortgagor.

A mortgaged a house to the Simla Bank for a loan, the deed being in English form with a power of sale to the Bank to be exercised without any further consent from the mortgagor in the event of his failing to repay the loan. A failed to repay, and the house was put up for sale by the Simla Bank and sold to B. Before the sale to B. certain judgment-creditors of A had attached the house. B having been refused possession of the house on the ground that the Simla Bank had (for reasons unconnected with these attachments) no authority to sell, sued A for specific performance, and obtained a decree for possession from the Chief Court. The original Court refused to execute this decree on the ground that attachments (before the sale to B) of the house by the judgment-creditors of A, rendered the sale void under section 240 of Act VIII of 1859. The Commissioner held the sale to B valid, but that B was bound to pay the claims of the attaching creditors.

Held, by the Chief Court, that the sale to B was valid, and that she was not bound to meet the claims of the attaching creditors. BYRNE v. BAIN.

59. Creditor attaching insolvent's property before judgment—Re-attachment after decree—Effect of such attachment and re-attachment—Priority—Release from attachment before order by Insolvency Court for distribution of assets.

The present petitioner obtained an attachment of a house belonging to an insolvent prior to judgment, and before the insolvent applied for the protection of the Court under Act IV of 1872, and subsequently, but after the Insolvent Court had attached the house, re-attached the same property after he had obtained a decree against the insolvent. The Judge of the Insolvency Court refused to give him any priority over the other creditors, although it was contended that the effect of the original attachment followed by a decree was to create a charge on the attached property in favor of the attaching creditor and to convert him into a secured creditor.

Held, that even on the assumption that the attachment in execution of decree was still subsisting, the petitioner had not succeeded in showing that he was entitled to the priority he claimed, or that there was any illegality in the order of the Insolvency Court directing a distribution pro rata amongst the scheduled creditors but inasmuch as it appeared that the Court executing his decree had released the attached property from attachment before the distribution of assets was ordered by the Insolvent Court, no advantage could possibly be derived by the decree-holder from a process which had ceased to exist. Ram Chund v. Gunga Bishen (37 of 1871 Civil), referred to. 60. Pre-emption—Payment of purchase money by pre-emptor in Court—Attachment by his creditor.

Held, that money deposited in a Court to be paid to a vendee under a pre-emption decree cannot be withdrawn by an attachment under a decree of a third party and that a Court is not competent to pay it out to any one but the person entitled to it under the decree for pre-emption.

61. Civil Procedure Code, 1882, section 266 (c)—Building site of houses occupied by agriculturists not liable to attachment and sale in execution of decree.

A, having obtained a decree against the representatives of an agriculturist, attached the site of their house, and contended that under section 266 (c) the materials of houses and other buildings belonging to and occupied by agriculturists, are alone exempt from sale; that the judgment-debtors should be allowed to remove the materials, such as bricks, beams and doors, and that the site under the house be sold.

Held, that the house and its materials could not be attached and that the attachment of the site could not affect the tenant's immunity from the attachment of the materials of the house which constitute the house as it stands.

62. Execution of decree—Order releasing property from attachment—Finality of such order—Res judicata.

The heir and representative of a deceased judgment-debtor, being himself also a judgment-debtor under another part of the same decree, objected to the attachment of the property of the deceased on the ground that he had a lien upon it. On the date fixed for evidence, as the decree-holder did not appear, the executing Court without taking any evidence, allowed the objections and released the property. The decree-holder, not having attempted to have the ex-parte order set aside, applied for a fresh execution by attachment of the same property, and in defence it was urged that he had finally lost his right of executing against that property, as the previous order of release was final and conclusive between the parties.

Held, that though the order aforesaid allowing the objection was passed in a proceeding under section 244 (c), Civil Procedure Code, that order was in effect nothing more than a dismissal for default, and therefore it was no bar to a fresh application for execution of the same decree.

Similarly such an order could not operate as res judicata as the matter was not "heard and finally decided."

63. Suit for a declaration that land belonging to an agriculturist is liable to attachment and sale.

Held, that section 15 of the Punjab Alienation of Land Act does not prohibit the attachment in execution of a decree of the land belonging to an agriculturist, and that a decree-holder is entitled to claim a declaration that certain land is liable to attachment and to be thereafter dealt with as provided in section 326, Civil Procedure Code. Held, that fodder required for the owner's cattle is exempt under clause (n) of section 266 of the Civil Procedure Code, read with section 70 of the Punjab Land Revenue Act, 1887, from attachment in execution of a decree against an agriculturist.

A Civil Court can only attach so much as will leave in the opinion of the Collector of the District a sufficiency for the owner's cattle.

69. Assignment of land revenue—Liability to attachment in execution of decree.

ATTACHMENT—contd.

Held, that under clause (3) of section 8 of the Punjab Descent of Jagirs Act, 1900, a sub-assignment of land revenue made with the sanction of Government is as incapable of attachment in execution of decree as the assignment itself,

Section 8 of the Punjab Descent of Jagirs Act, 1900, is not limited to assignments solely made by Government but also includes a sub-assignment made by the original assignee. BHAGAWAN DAS v. RAM DAS.

70. Attachment of immovable property before judgment—Compensation for erroneous attachment—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, section 491—Applicability of to Small Cause Court.

Held, that a Court of Small Causes has no jurisdiction to award compensation under section 491, Civil Procedure Code, for an erroneous attachment before judgment of immovable property as it is excepted by the Second Schedule to the Code from attcahment by such a Court. Held, that a decree-holder who simply obtains an order for a rateable share of the assets in the proceeds of sale of the property attached at the instance of another judgment-creditor is not, when the decree, in execution of which the property was attached, is satisfied and the attachment withdrawn, entitled to the benefit of that attachment; and that the assignee of such property by virtue of a private alienation made after the removal of such attachment has a good title as against such decree-holder.

Held, also, that a transfer of immovable property in favour of a creditor for good and valuable consideration is not void merely because its obvious effect might be to defeat or delay the claim of a less vigilant creditor. LAHORI MAL v GANGA RAM. 81 P R 1908

72. Attachment of an unused Khurli—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, section 266, clause (c), Meaning of.

Held, that the words "belonging to" in clause (c) of section 266, Civil Procedure Code, 1882, are not synonymous with "occupied by," the latter words are not a mere repetition, but they qualify the former words. "Occupied by" means "lived in by" or "used for agricultural purposes by," and therefore a khurli, in which the judgment-debtor does not live and which at the time of attachment was not being used by him for any purpose whatever, is liable to attachment. Held, that the pay of an Assistant Surgeon in Military employ, not being a public officer within the meaning of section 60 (1) (i), Civil Procedure Code, 1908, is protected from attachment, in execution of a decree.

Held also, that where a Commanding Officer refuses to comply with an order of attachment although the pay is attachable, the Court under order XXI, rule 48 (3), Civil Procedure Code, should proceed to recover from Government for the benefit of the decree-holder the sums which should have been stopped out of the judgment-debtor's pay, leaving Government to settle up as it pleases with its officer, the judgment-debtor. 19. Auction sale of house—House knocked down to highest bidder, but no deed of conveyance executed—Completion of sale—Transfer of Property Act, section 54*—Specific Relief Act, section* 13.

In the absence of a special agreement to the contrary, a sale by auction of immovable property is not, as far as the rights and liabilities of the vendor and purchaser are concerned, different from an ordinary contract for the sale of such property, i.e., a contract that a sale of such property shall take place on terms settled between the parties, It does not, of itself, create any interest in, or charge on such property. In such cases the auctioneer primarily acts as the agent of the vendor on whose behalf he offers the property for sale to the public, and when his hammer falls, he merely accepts the bid of the purchaser. Ordinarily such an acceptance creates a contract for the sale of the property the vendor becoming in equity a trustee for the purchaser of the estate sold, but the right of the purchaser is a right in personam against the vendor and is not a right in rem so as to affect or bind the property or third parties. The legal estate in the property does not pass until the execution of the deed of conveyance, but if anything happens to the estate between the time of sale and the time of completion of the purchase, it is at the risk of the purchaser. of proving that there was no such claim lying upon the defendant. If he had such a claim, its withdrawal was a good consideration, but if the former suit was brought to recover monies which the plaintiff knew to be due only upon a wagering contract, the withdrawal of his unfounded action would be no consideration for the defendant's promise. 5. Bank refusing to continue customer's account—Offer of repayment of amount still in deposit—Plaintiff refusing to accept such offer and subsequently drawing cheque on Bank—Dishonour by Bank of such cheque.

The legal relations existing between a banker and his customers discussed and explained.

Money deposited in the hands of a banker in the ordinary course of business is money lent to the banker by the depositor, with a superadded obligation that it is to be repaid when called for by cheque. The transaction amounts to a mutuum or loan for use and consumption, it being understood that the banker is to have the use of the money in return for his consent to take charge of it. This contract can always be put an end to by either party. The lender can recover his loan by drawing a cheque on the banker for the amount and presenting it to him for payment : the borrower can repay the money or tender repayment to the lender when he pleases. Both parties have equally the right to terminate the relationship of debtor and creditor which springs out of the transaction entered into between them.

Where in a suit for damages for alleged breach of contract by dishonour of a cheque, it appeared that the defendant Bank, having decided not to continue the plaintiff's accounts, offered to repay the plaintiff by sending him for signature a cheque duly filled up for the total amount of the balance due to the plaintiff, and requesting him to present it at the Bank for payment, the Bank undertaking then and there to honor it, whereupon the plaintiff refused this offer of performance, and insisted on the Bank remaining in the position of his debtor, although no period was fixed by the contract between the parties for the duration of the loan, and subsequently drew a cheque on the bank, which on presentation by the payee for payment, was dishonored : held, that the Bank's offer of performance was under all the circumstances a legal and proper compliance with the duty cast upon it by its contract with the plaintiff, and that the plaintiff, having refused this offer, could not hold the Bank responsibls for the subsequent refusal to honor his cheque. 6. Promissory note—Consideration—Shares—Bank Directors—Fraud and misrepresentation—How far misrepresentations of a Director binding on the Bank

In a suit on a promissory note for Rs. 12,500, dated the 21st October 1884, the defendant pleaded that the promissory note had been executed in consequence of certain misrepresentations made by C, a Director of the plaintiff's Bank ; that the Bank was bound by his acts, and that the defendant had a month later repudiated the transaction to the Director and the Bank.

The facts appeared to be as follows :—

The Bank was registered as a Joint-Stock Company on the 10th June 1884. C was elected as a Director on 1st September 1884.

BANKS—contd.

On 9th June 1884, C wrote a letter to the defendant in which he described himself as a Director; and in October 1884 showed the defendant an informal list of subscribers, in which his name appeared as the owner of 600 shares. All this was done for the purpose of inducing the defendant to become a shareholder. As a fact, C was not the owner of 600 shares. He also stated to the defendant that the shares were then being sold at a premium of Rs. 25 each. As a fact they were at par. In consequence of these representations, the defendant on the 21st October 1884, signed (i) a formal application for 100 shares on a deposit of Rs. 125, and (ii) the promissory note now in suit.

The effect of these documents was as follows:—

The defendant proposed to the Bank to grant him 100 shares on a deposit of Rs. 125 per share. He also at the same time proposed to the Bank to lend him Rs. 12,500 on his promissory note, and directed this same to be applied to payment of the deposit of Rs. 125 per share. On the 25th October, the Manager of the Bank, in collusion with C, informed the defendant that the 100 shares had been obtained with some difficulty (on this date 1,425 shares were lying undisposed of), and that he had advanced the defendant Rs. 10,000 for a deposit on 100 shares; also that he had paid a premium of Rs 2,500 for the shares, making a total of Rs 12,500 lent to the defendant on the promissory note.

The defendant never replied to the Bank's letter, and took no steps up to the date of this suit to repudiate his shares. On July 8th, 1885, he wrote to the Bank to sell his shares. On these facts it was contended for the plaintiff that defendant's silence and his request to sell his shares constituted an acceptance of the Bank's offer, and therefore the Bank was entitled to recover Rs. 12,500 on account of the promissory note Held, that this contention was not valid. Supposing the defendant had assented to the terms contained in the Bank's letter, and had afterwards discovered that at the time of his purchase the shares were at par and not at a premium, it would be open to him on making the discovery, either to avoid the transaction and return the shares, or to affirm the contract, thereby retaining the shares, and sue the Bank for damages sustained by him in consequence of the deceit. Assuming that he had impliedly assented to the Bank's offer, he was still entitled to plead by way of equitable defence that he was fraudulently overcharged Rs. 2,500 by the Bank's Manager, acting for the Bank, and he should not be relegated to a fresh suit for the recovery of this amount, as the purchase of shares and the loan constituted in reality a single transaction.

The defendant contended per contra that there never was any binding contract for the shares, and that, therefore, there was no consideration for the promissory note. Held, that the fact that defendant, with notice that 100 shares had been granted to him, and with notice of the fraud as to premium, took no steps to inform the Bank that he did not accept the shares, and in his letter of 8th July 1875, described the shares as his own, amounted to a tacit acceptance of the offer and affirmation of the contract notwithstanding the fraud as to the premium, and that the fraud, through the misrepresentation of C, prior to the defendant's application, did not affect the Bank, as C was not their agent. PROVINCIAL BANK OF INDIA, LIMITED v. RAO RAJA TEJ SINGH. 127 P R 1889

7. Fraud and misrepresentation Repudiation.

The plaintiff Bank was registered under the Indian Companies Act, 1882, on 10th June 1884, as a limited liability company with a capital of five lakhs of rupees, divided into 2,500 shares of Rs. 200 each.

On 1st September 1884, a general meeting of the shareholders was held, at which six directors, including one C, were elected, and one P was appointed manager. These proceedings were confirmed at a subsequent meeting on 3rd October 1884.

Informal lists appear to have been in circulation in which persons entered their names for the shares they would take; but on 8th October 1884 only 1,111 shares had been formally taken, and 1,389 remained in the hands of the Bank undisposed of.

Between the 8th and 25th October 1884, C visited Jodhpur with the express purpose of inducing the Princes of that State to take shares in the Bank. He succeeded in inducing them to take 975 shares, giving for them promissory notes at the rate of Rs. 125 per share, viz., Rs. 100 the amount called up by the Bank and Rs. 25 premium. In this way the present defendant-appellant, one of the Jodhpur Princes, took 400 shares and gave a promissory note for Rs. 50,000.

The remaining shares out of the 2,500 were disposed of by the end of December 1884, in the manner described in the judgment of the Chief Court, reported as Punjab Record No. 127 of 1889 (pp. 438, 439).

Upon a suit brought by the Bank to recover the amount due on the promissory note given by the defendant for Rs. 50,000.

Held, (1) That as decided in Punjab Record No. 127 of 1889, the District Judge, Delhi, had jurisdiction to entertain the suit.

(2) That the suit was not barred by limitation. It was not disputed that it was barred unless the plaintiff was entitled under section 13 of the Indian Limitation Act, 1877, to deduct the period during which the defendant had been "absent from British India." The defendant was not and never had been a resident of British India.

Persons with respect to particular territories are exhaustively divided into two classes, (1) those who are present within, and (2) those who are absent from those territories; and unless it can be affirmed that a person is or has been "present," it must necessarily follow that he is or had been "absent." I. L. R. XIV Calc. 457, followed.

(3) That the defendant's application for shares in October 1884 was made under the influence of fraud and misrepresentation for which the Bank was responsible, and that he was consequently at liberty to avoid the contract when the fraud and misrepresentation came to his knowledge.

(4) That there had been a proper allotment of shares to defendant. His letters left no doubt that he fully understood that he was both a shareholder in, and a director of the Bank, and that he accepted the position. The mere fact that the scrip had not yet been delivered to defendant, or that it was apparently as yet not even ready for delivery, did not in any way prove that the shares were not in fact allotted to the defendant. (Buckley's Law and Practice under the Companies Act).

(5) That although defendant was entitled to repudiate the contract on the fraud and misrepresentation becoming known to him, he was bound to exercise this right within a reasonable time; this he had not done, and therefore he must be held to be still the owner of the shares standing in his name and bound to meet the promissory note given by him to the Bank in payment for the shares, to the extent of the true price of the shares, at the time the note was given. 7. Purchase by uncle with his own funds in name of himself and nephew—Advancement—Presumption—Onus probandi.

It has been established by several decisions of the Privy Council that the criterion in the case of benami purchases in India is to consider from what source the purchase-money came; that the presumption is that a purchase made with the money of A., in the name of B., is for the benefit of A., and that from the purchase by a father, whether Muhammadan or Hindu, in the name of his son, the presumption of English law of an advancement in favour of that son cannot be drawn.

The point for decision was whether the plaintiff, who was the purchaser of two houses proved to have been purchased with his own funds, and the conveyances of which were in his own and his nephew's name in equal shares, did in fact purchase for the advancement of his nephew as well as for himself or for himself alone.

Held, that there being no sufficient evidence to establish that the purchase in the name of the defendant, as well as of the plaintiff, was made with the intention of giving him a half-share, the presumption in favour of the plaintiff by reason of his having found the whole purchase-money prevailed. BUTA v. JAGGA. 147 P R 1882

20. Suit for damages for breach—Bride's father refusing to complete contract on ground that bridegroom was a confirmed gambler and unable to maintain a wife—Sufficiency of such plea as justification for breach of contract.

In a suit for damages for breach of betrothal contract it appeared that the defendants had betrothed their daughter to the plaintiff about 11 years before suit, when the plaintiff was about 2 years old, and the girl 7 or 8 years of age. It further appeared that the plaintiff had fallen into confirmed habits of gambling, and that the defendant in consequence assembled a panchayat a year and a half before suit, who advised him to wait for six months longer in the hope that the boy would reform. A short time before suit, he assembled a second panchayat, and brought to their notice that the boy had not reformed, and apparently asked if any one would be surety for his daughter's support if the marriage was carried out, but no security was then offered. About three weeks before suit, the plaintiff's maternal uncle summoned a third panchayat saying that the boy had improved, and offered a cousin of the plaintiff's as surety for the girl's maintenance if the marriage were carried out. The defendant, however, appeared to be dissatisfied with the offer and finally married his daughter elsewhere. With regard to the security said at last to have been offered, it was admitted that no deed was executed, and the proposed surety was not called as a witness, to show what extent of responsibility he was willing to take.

Held, that under the above circumstances the defendant was justified in breaking off a betrothal which offered no prospect of a suitable husband for his daughter, having first taken every means in his power to bring about a suitable arrangement before he did so. DHONU v. ISHAR DAS. 174 P R 1882

21. Suit for breach—Liability of guardians of minor girl other than those who betrothed.

In a suit for damages for breach of a betrothal contract brought against the mother of the girl and her two brothers, it was found that the girl had been betrothed to plaintiff by her mother and her father, since deceased; but it was contended by the two defendants, the girl's brothers, that they were not liable inasmuch as the contract had been entered into by the girl's parents.

Held, that as the said defendants were the present guardians of the girl, who was still a minor, and as they had knowingly repudiated the original contract and refused to complete it, plaintiff was entitled to a decree against all three defendants for damages to be paid by them if they did not marry the girl to plaintiff when she came to a marriageable age. Ram Chand v. Laljee (No. 21 of 1868, Civil), and Mussammat Golabi v. Santa (No. 7 of 1880, Civil) cited. GANDU v. ISHAR DAS. 197 P R 1882

22. Effect of betrothal.

It is opposed to all the best authorities in Hindu law to treat the betrothal as giving the intended husband any rights over the bride. Betrothal is no necessary part of the nuptial rite, being merely a promise to give a girl in marriage. DYAL v. NARAIN DAS. 64 P R 1884

23. *Suit for damages for breach—Defendant justifying his refusal to carry out the contract by custom—Onus probandi—Custom of Aroras—*Riwaj-i-am.

In a suit for damages for breach of a betrothal contract, the parties to which were Aroras, it appeared that the existence of the contract and the subsequent refusal to perform it were facts not denied by the defendant, the father of the girl, but that the contention was, that owing to physical infirmities produced by supervening disease, viz., smallpox, contracted by plaintiff about two years after the betrothal, the plaintiff was not a fit person to contract marriage, and that the father of the girl was therefore excused by custom, from performing his promise of giving the plaintiff his daughter in marriage. It was admitted that the custom by which the parties were governed in matters relating to contracts of betrothal was correctly stated in the Riwaj-i-am prepared at Settlement, which provided that "if after betrothal the boy or girl * * * * * contracts any disease whereby the healthy condition of the body may be permanently impaired * * * * * * the other party is at liberty to cancel the betrothal."

Held, that the defendant, upon whom the onus under the circumstances lay, had failed to prove that the boy's health of body was permanently impaired, and that therefore the custom as embodied in the Riwaj-i-am justified him in refusing to perform the contract to give his daughter in marriage to the plaintiff's son. CHANDAN MAL v. MITTA RAM. 132 P R 1888

24. Suit for damages for breach of betrothal contract—Recovery of money paid under the agreement.

Held, that a suit for damages for breach of a betrothal contract is maintainable. Sums advanced to the father of the girl may be taken into consideration in assessing such damages.

25. Betrothal Contract—Suit for damages for breach of—Proper person to sue and be sued.

Held, that it is competent for the plaintiff, a minor, for whose direct benefit the betrothal contract was effected between his father and the father of the girl, to sue for damages in respect of its breach, and the proper person to be sued is the father of the girl who broke it and not the girl who was no direct party to the contract. 53. Presumption—Cousins holding land in same village, and nowhere else—Common ancestor.

Plaintiffs, proprietors, sued for possession of 12 bighas of common land, lately held by one S, a deceased occupancy tenant. Some of the defendants pleaded an adoption, while the rest claimed the land as collaterals of the deceased. The Court of first instance disbelieved the adoption, and decreed for plaintiffs, holding that the collaterals had failed to prove that a common ancestor of themselves, and deceased, had held the land. On appeal by the collaterals, the Commissioner reversed the decree, on the ground that in Settlement enquiries he had always found it a safe rule to presume that, where 4 or 5 cousins, descendants of a common ancestor, lived in a village having land, and having no land or holding in any other village, their ancestor had settled in the village, and had held the land, until such presumption was rebutted by reasonable evidence.

Held, that the onus of proving that the relationship of landlord and tenant had ceased to exist between the parties, at such a time as would bar the present suit, lay upon the defendants under section 109 of the Evidence Act.

57. Evidence Act (I of 1872), section 91 —Party in possession under unregistered deed of sale—Onus of proving that party so in possession is not owner—Pre-emption.

The defendants purchased from two brothers H. and G. their respective shares in certain wells. H. first sold his share for Rs. 500 and executed a deed of sale which was not registered: but the vendees got possession under the sale. Subsequently G. sold his share of the same wells to the same vendees for Rs. 494, and executed and registered a deed of sale. On the 3rd December 1879 the present plaintiff, who was not a co-sharer in the wells but held lands in the patti in which the wells were situated, brought two suits against H. and G. respectively to enforce his right of pre-emption in respect of the lands sold. His suit in respect of the land sold by H. was dismissed on the 5th March 1880 as barred by limitation, and this order was upheld in appeal. The other suit in respect of the share sold by G. was also dismissed, on the 15th March 1880, on the ground that the vendees had become by their purchase from H. co-sharers in the well and had thus a preferential right of pre-emption to the plaintiff. In appeal to the Chief Court it was urged that the first deed of sale not having been registered the vendees were debarred by section 91 of the Evidence Act from proving the first sale and that therefore the vendees had not proved that they were co-sharers in the wells at the time of their purchase from G.

Held, that such contention could not prevail, as the vendees having obtained possession of the land under sale from H., such possession must be held to be prima facie proof of their ownership, and the onus was on the plaintiff to show that they were not owners.

Held further, that the plaintiff himself by instituting a suit against the vendees to obtain the benefit of the sale to them by H. admitted the fact of the sale, and his suit having been dismissed it must be taken as against him that the defendants were at the time alleged owners of a share in these wells, Sudama v. Kesho (102 of 1879, Civil followed. 58. Evidence Act (I of 1872), sections 109, 110, 114—Plaintiff suing to eject defendant as a tenant holding under an expired lease—Defendant setting up title as owner—Both parties' deeds inadmissible in evidence for want of registration—Presumption of ownership—Possession.

Plaintiffs sued to recover from the defendant possession of the land in suit on the allegation that in 1874 they had given him the said land on a lease for five years, which had now expired. Defendant denied the lease, and alleged that in 1872 he had purchased the land from a person who had himself a few days previously purchased from the plaintiff, deeds of sale being executed on both occasions, and that he (defendant) had since the date of his purchase held possession of the land as owner. Both the plaintiffs' lease, and the deeds relied upon by the defendant, were inadmissible in evidence for the purpose of affecting the land for want of registration under Act VIII of 1871, and neither party could therefore prove the terms of the contract under which the defendant's possession originated, in consequence of the provisions of that Act, and section 91 of the Evidence Act.

Held, per Smyth, J., that as the defendant had admittedly held peaceable possession of the land for several years, therefore, under section 110 of the Evidence Act, the burden of proving that he was not the owner of the land was on the plaintiffs who affirmed that he was not the owner: that all that they had proved was that they were the owners some years ago, before the defendant came into possession of the land, and though a presumption arose from this that they had remained the owners, this was met by the counter-presumption which arose from the defendant's long possession, and that in presence of those conflicting presumptions, the plaintiffs, on whom the burden of proving that defendant was not the owner fell, must fail unless they could show circumstances which would have the effect of turning the balance in their favour, the defendant also being allowed to show circumstances in support of his contention that he was the owner.

Held, per Barkley, J., that as the defendant alleged that he was owner of the land, and the plaintiffs denied this, alleging that he held it as tenant under a lease that had expired, section 110 of the Evidence Act threw the burden of proving that the defendant was not the owner on the plaintiffs. But one presumption may be met by another presumption, and if facts were proved which showed that the parties had been acting as landlord and tenant, the burden of proving that they did not stand or had ceased to stand in that relationship to each other was thrown by section 109 on the defendant. The Court might also presume under section 114, if it thought it likely with regard to the facts of the particular case and the common course of events, that the plaintiffs' title the existence of which until 1872 was admitted, continued in existence, and might then put the defendant to the proof of his having acquired a valid title. Moreover, the strength of the presumption arising from possession depended also on the length of time such possession had continued, and therefore less evidence would be required to remove the presumption arising from undisturbed possession in a case like the present, where the defendant's possession was admitted to have commenced less than 8 years before suit, than where it had continued for a longer period. Sudama v. Kesho (102 of 1879, Civil), cited. Plaintiffs sued as the heirs of one F. to recover certain land which they alleged belonged to F. Defendant pleaded that he had purchased the land from F. some five years before for Rs. 580; that a deed of sale was executed, which, however, was not registered; and that he had held possession of the land as proprietor ever since.

Held, that under section 110 of the Evidence Act the onus was under the circumstances of the case on the plaintiffs to prove that defendant was not owner of the land in suit: that all the plaintiffs had done to discharge the onus thus cast upon them was to show that F. was the owner of the land before he delivered possession of it to the defendant; that something more than this had to be shown before it could be held that F. remained owner of the land till the time of his death; and that therefore plaintiffs' case failed. Sudama v. Kesho (102 of 1879, Civil) and Hassan v. Fazal Wahid (121 of 1882, Civil), referred to. PIR BAKHSH v. JHANDA MAL.

60. Suit by mortgagee to redeem land alleged to be sub-mortgaged to defendant—Defendant setting up absolute sale by plaintiff of all his rights—Inadmissibility of the instrument evidencing the transaction for want of registration—Act I of 1872, section 110—Possession—Ownership.

In a suit to recover possession of certain land on payment of Rs. 300, the plaintiff, who himself held the land in mortgage from the original proprietor, alleged that he had sub-mortgaged the same land to defendant and had endorsed the particulars of the transaction on his own mortgage-deed which was handed over at the time to defendant. The defendant replied that the transaction between him and plaintiff was an absolute sale of all plaintiff's interest in the land. The endorsement evidencing the transaction was inadmissible as evidence as it was neither stamped nor registered, and oral evidence of the terms of the contract was held to be inadmissible with reference to section 91 of the Evidence Act.

Held, per Curiam, that the plaintiff's suit must fail.

Per Elsmie, J.—The defendant obtained lawful possession of the land and is now in lawful possession of it. Title is to be presumed from lawful possession until the want of title or a better title is proved. The case is governed by section 110 of the Evidence Act; as there is no question raised as to the proprietorship of the land, the dispute being between a mortgagee and a person who has derived his rights from that mortgagee, the real question in issue is the ownership of the mortgage granted by the proprietor; and it cannot be said that because defendant does not set up a complete title to the ownership of the land he is therefore in the position of a man who has pleaded a limited title and is therefore bound to prove it, for so far as the plaintiff is concerned defendant has set up a complete title.

Per Smyth, J.—Under the circumstances of the case the burden was on the plaintiff to show that by the terms of the agreement between him and the defendant he was entitled to recover possession. This he was unable to do, nor was he able to show conduct on the part of the defendant or any other circumstances consistent only with the view that the defendant held the position of sub-mortgagee and not that of assignee of the mortgage. In a suit by plaintiffs, the proprietors of certain land, to recover possession from the defendants whom they alleged to be their tenants, the defendants admitted the plaintiffs, proprietary rights, but set up a claim to hold the land on mortgage. Held, that plaintiffs were under the above circumstances entitled to a decree awarding them possession. Badra v. Makhna (58 of 1877 Civil) and Sarbaland Khan v. Chanda Singh (84 of 1877 Civil), followed. SAWAN SINGH v. LEHNA SINGH.

62. Benami transaction—Presumption where a person purchases property in the name of his relatives.

Plaintiff, who was one of three brothers (Muhammadans), sued to release from attachment ⅓rd of a house attached in execution of a decree against his elder brother, alleging that he was the owner of such share. It appeared from the deed of sale that this property had been sold to all three brothers, but the decree-holder (defendant) contended that the elder brother was the sole owner, and that, so far as the other two brothers were concerned, the transaction was benami. The lower appellate Court holding that "when a property is purchased by a person in the name of his relatives, a father for his son, an elder brother for his younger brothers,—the presumption is that it is a benami purchase and the property belongs to the person who provided the money," dismissed plaintiff's suit.

Held (reversing the order of the appellate Court) that no such general rule could be laid down as that stated above: that it was for the defendant who alleged that the sale was not what it purported to be, a sale to all three brothers, but a sale to the elder only, to establish the facts from which he desired the inference to be drawn, and that the defendant having failed to discharge this onus, the plaintiff was entitled to a decree. 63. Will of parda-nashin women leaving whole of property away from legal heirs—Person relying upon the will bound to establish due execution with full knowledge and without any exercise of undue influence—Failure to discharge onus.

The question for decision was whether a will propounded by the defendant was really the will of the testatrix by whom it purported to be executed. It appeared that the said will left the whole of the property of the deceased away from her legal heirs, and, further, that the deceased was a parda-nashin woman living apart from her relations and natural advisers; that she had been ill for some months before the time when she was alleged to have executed the will, and died some 17 days afterwards: that at the time she was alleged to have executed the will there were no members of her own family present, except the defendant, who was her maternal uncle, and whose son and daughter-in-law were the persons chiefly benefited by the provisions of the will.

Held, that under the above circumstances it was incumbent on the defendant, as the person relying upon the will, to establish by the strongest and most satisfactory evidence not only that the deceased executed the will, but that she executed it with full knowledge of its effect, and that she was not induced to execute it by the exercise of any undue influence.

Held further, on the facts, that the defendant had failed to discharge the heavy burden cast upon him by the law as above stated. SYAD MUHAMMAD KHAN v. SYAD BADR-UD-DIN 149 P R 1882

64. *Suit to enforce bond—Defendant denying receipt of consideration—*Onus of proving consideration—Recital of receipt of consideration in bond—Acknowledgment before registering officer—Presumption of truth of such acknowledgment—Rebuttal of such presumption.

In suits to enforce a bond, the execution of or consideration for which is denied by the defendant, the general rule is that, as the plaintiff has to prove his case, the proof of the payment of the consideration lies upon the party who asserts it, that is to say, upon the plaintiff; and inasmuch as the acknowledgment of receipt of consideration in bonds and deeds is generally inserted in India before any actual payment of consideration takes place, and is merely intended to be formal, the simple existence of such an acknowledgment would not affect the application of the general rule as above stated. But where the acknowledgment is of a more formal character, made and recorded in pursuance of an Act of the legislature, as, for instance, the Registration Act, the presumption ought to be in favour of the truth of such a public declaration. This presumption, however, is not conclusive, and may be rebutted; it merely serves to shift the onus of proof to the party who denies the truth of the acknowledgment. Ala Baksh v. Shama (153 of 1882 Civil), cited. In a suit upon a bond in which it was pleaded that at the time of execution the obligor was insane and incapable of contracting, and in which it was further proved that the general condition of the obligor was that of insanity, held, that the onus lay upon the party who alleged that the bond was executed in a lucid interval to prove that the obligor was in a condition at the time of execution to form a rational judgment as to its effect upon his interests. 66. Evidence Act (I of 1872), section 110 —Suit for possession of house—Plaintiff alleging permissive occupation and defendant pleading long adverse possession.

Plaintiff sued to recover possession of a house on the allegation that permissive occupation of it had been given to the defendant about five years before suit. Defendant pleaded that the house had originally come into his possession by virtue of an exchange, and that he had continued in proprietary possession for the last twenty-four years. The facts found were that the plaintiff had failed to prove that he had made over the property permissively to the defendant, and further that the defendant had undoubtedly been in apparent proprietary possession of the disputed premises for over twenty years, during which period he had exercised the right of an owner by practically re-building the house, and by locating persons in it of his own right.

Held, that under the above circumstances the rule of evidence embodied in section 110 of the Evidence Act must receive due effect, and that the onus was clearly on the person who alleged that the possession had really been permissive all along to prove his allegation; that this onus was not displaced by the mere admission by the defendant that the house in dispute originally belonged to the plaintiff, as that admission must be taken with the qualification by which it was accompanied, viz., that the ownership was transferred to the defendant by an exchange, and that the defendant had been in adverse possession for the last 24 years: and that it was sufficient for the defendant to rely on this possession as conferring an indisputable title upon him, which could not be displaced unless the plaintiff could prove, not only his original right of ownership, but also that the possession, which was apparently adverse, was in reality permissive. Sudama v. Kesho (102 *P. But the Divisional Judge, finding that defendant had failed to establish his right to more than half the land in suit, gave plaintiff a decree for the other half, which on plaintiff's death had been entered in plaintiff's name.

Held, that the plaintiff having failed to prove his adoption by P. the suit ought to have been dismissed in toto, and that it was irregular to enter into the question whether defendant could prove a title to half, and on his failing to do so to give the plaintiff half. The defendants pleaded that the entry was incorrect; that the tenure of the village was bhayachara, and that there was no shamilat in the abadi which was divisible. The District Judge having found there was no divisible common land of the village in the abadi, gave plaintiffs a decree in accordance with defendants' admission for partition solely of any common land within their patti that might be found unoccupied. Plaintiffs appealed to the Divisional Judge, who reversed the decree of the lower Court and granted plaintiffs a decree for separation of their share in the shamilat abadi-deh, but did not specify the exact land assigned thereby to plaintiffs. Defendants appealed to the Chief Court, and it was Held, that the onus of proving that there was shamilat in the abadi which could be partitioned and that partition thereof was feasible rested upon the plaintiffs, and that they had failed to rebut the statement in the earlier Settlement Record that the village site was not liable to partition.

73. Punjab Courts Act, 1884, section 40 (i) and (ii)—"Point of law involved"—Question as to burden of proof—Separation deed between husband and wife—Allegations of misconduct on part of wife—Revision—Civil Procedure Code, section 622.

The Divisional Judge granted a certificate of appeal under section 40 of the Punjab Courts Act to the effect that "a question "of law is involved, namely, whether a "child born in the lifetime of its father is "not presumed to be a legitimate one, and "whether the onus probandi was not on the "defendant-appellant to prove the unchastity "of his wife, and whether it is not a question "of 'no proof' about the finding of "unchastity of the plaintiff-respondent, and "that the case is, in my opinion, of sufficient "importance to justify a further appeal."

Held, that the certificate on the question of onus probandi and the mode of decision was not one contemplated in the Act and was bad.

Semble: The right construction of the word "involved" is that it applies to the case rather than to the appeal which is to be certified under sub-section (i) (d), or admitted under sub-section (ii) of section 40 of the Act, and includes points which may be raised by way of defence in the appeal.

But held, that the Divisional Judge had acted with material irregularity, within the meaning of se tion 622 of the Civil Procedure Code, inasmuch as (1) he had started a new ground of defence not pleaded by the defendant, viz., that the agreement for separation between the defendant and his wife (the plaintiff) was obtained under pressure, and should not be enforced; (2) he had absolved the defendant from liability, although finding that defendant had committed a breach of agreement from the beginning; (3) he had wrongly decided the question of onus of proof as regards breach of the terms of the agreement; and (4) he had dealt in generalities and conjectures about plaintiff's general bad conduct instead of giving definite findings on the evidence as regards specific misbehaviour on her part.

Although Hindu Law does not recognize divorce, the marriage tie being indissoluble, yet where the finding of a Court, in a suit by the wife for maintenance, would put an end to the plaintiff's conjugal rights, make her an outcast, and probably drive her into the streets for her livelihood, the evidence as to adultery and immorality on her part should be of a definite character as well as cogent and reliable, before the Court acts upon it for the purpose of dismissing her suit.

Section 622 of the Civil Procedure Code lays down the conditions under which the Court may revise the proceedings of subordinate Courts, and its powers of interference is subject to these conditions. But once the jurisdiction to revise is established on any of the grounds specified in the first part of the said section, there is no limitation imposed on the power of the Court as to the mode of disposal. The section is intended to arm the Court with the power of remedying injustice in cases not subject to appeal under certain specified circumstances, and, therefore, when the grounds of jurisdiction are established and a fit case shown for the exercise of its powers, there is nothing in the section to preclude the Court from finally disposing of the case itself because points of fact, and not points of law, are involved.

The Court finding that defendant had entirely failed to prove breach of the conditions of the agreement between him and plaintiff on the part of plaintiff, or that the latter had been guilty of any immorality, set aside the order of the Divisional Court, and restored the decree which plaintiff had obtained in the first Court. MUSSAMMAT NIKKI v. BISHEN DAS. 41 P R 1898

74. Punjab Courts Act, 1884, section 40—Questions of law involved—Burden of proof—Construction of deed—Contradictory finding by lower Appellate Court—Material irregularity.

Held, that the proper allocation of the burden of proof and the construction of a deed which merely affected the parties to the suit and concerned no one else, were not "questions of law involved in the case" within the meaning of section 40 of the Punjab Courts Act, 1884.

45 P. R. 1894 and 68 P. R. 1897, followed.

It was further contended, on behalf of appellant, that inasmuch as the Divisional Judge had held that article 127 of the Limitation Act was applicable to the case, his subsequent finding that the property in dispute was not "joint family property" amounted to an error of law or, at least, to a material irregularity within the meaning of section 622 of the Civil Procedure Code.

Held, that even upon the assumption that such findings were erroneous and contradictory, they would not amount to "questions of law involved" within the said section of the Punjab Courts Act.

Held further, that all that was decided by the Divisional Judge was that, if the allegations in the plaint were correct and the property were to be held to be "joint family property," then under these conditions article 127 of the Limitation Act would be applicable, and that this did not amount to holding that the property was in fact "joint family property," so as to throw the burden of proving that it was not on the other side, or preclude the Court from finding on the merits that it was not in fact "joint family property."

It not being contended that the parties were members of a joint Hindu family, and it being admitted that all the house property other than that in dispute had been partitioned, though some property consisting of agricultural land was still held jointly, held, that the burden of proving that the property in dispute was joint family property was at the outset rightly placed on plaintiffs, and that there was nothing in the findings of the Divisional Judge as above explained which shifted the burden to the other side.

Held, therefore, that the Divisional Judge had not acted with material irregularity in dismissing plaintiffs' claim on the ground that they had failed to discharge the onus which rested on them. SADHU RAM v. MUSSAMMAT BAINI BAI. 66 P R 1898

75. Suit to enforce registered sale-deed —Defendant denying receipt of consideration —Onus of proving consideration—Delay in attempting to enforce deed.

In a suit to enforce a registered sale-deed, the consideration for which is denied the deed being registered, imports no doubt consideration. Ordinarily, therefore, the onus of proving the want of consideration would be on defendants, but the fact that the plaintiffs took no action on a sale-deed executed in their favour in 1887 nor attempted to assert their rights until February 1897 nor even applied for dakhil-kharij, nor took possession of the property, shifts the onus of proof to them, and the Court under such circumstances is justified in demanding strict proof of the payment of the consideration mentioned in the deed of sale.

Wazir Singh v. Jai Gopal and others (17 P. R. 1888), followed. RAM CHAND v. HARNAM SINGH. 68 P R 1900

76. Of adoption.

In cases when the right of adoption is admitted or is found to prevail and the parties are not members of an agricultural tribe, or land-holding group, the burden of proof ought to lie on those who deny that a particular kind of adoption, e.g., that of a daughter's or sister's son cannot be made. SOHNUN AND OTHERS v. RAM DIAL AND OTHERS 79 P R 1901

Held, that a party relying upon a special family custom, such as that only one son of the last owner, viz., the fittest or the eldest, succeeds to the whole estate the others getting only maintenance, must prove that such custom was ancient, invariable and definite. ZARIF KHAN v. AMIR KHAN AND OTHERS. 85 P R 1901

78. In suits for the recovery of possession of immovable property when resisted by a plea of adverse possession, the plaintiff is bound to prove possession and dispossession within twelve years, but where the property in dispute up to a short time before suit remained waste and unoccupied, the plaintiff is not required to prove acts of possession within twelve years of suit, he has only to prove a primâ facie title not extinguished by limitation in such a case. Waste land allowed to remain so by the proprietor cannot be held to be a discontinuance of possession, and the onus is in such a case shifted on to defendant to prove when his possession became adverse. RAMZAN ALI v. BASHARAT ALI AND OTHERS. 105 P R 1901

79. Khatris although following agricultural pursuits, cannot be presumed to have adopted the general customs of agriculturists in matters of succession and alienations, and the record of rights cannot operate to make a Khatri proprietor an agriculturist subject to a custom which govern the latter. The presumption is that a Khatri is only bound by so much of the record of rights as deals with pre-emption and similar customs. The burden of proof therefore that a Khatri in matters such as alienation or succession is governed by custom rests always on the party alleging that he is so bound. HARNAM SINGH v. DEVI CHAND. 107 P R 1901

80. Where a person comes into Court alleging purchase of the shamilat, the onus of establishing it is on him, which is not discharged by proof that lands of separate khatas have been sold to him, as the rights of a proprietor in the former are not a mere accessory to the latter. RAM DAS v. AMIR SHAH. 113 P R 1901

81. The burden of proof of right of a reversioner to restrain alienation of occupancy holding is upon the person asserting the rights to restrain such alienation. FAIZ BAKHSH v. DITTA 115 P R 1901

82. Although a presumption at the outset is against the power of an adoption of a daughter's son, but where evidence such as an entry in a Wajib-ul-arz or Riwaj-i-am or precedents are produced by the adopted son the burden of broof is shifted to the party denying the validity of such an adoption. HEM RAJ v. SAHIBA. 116 P R 1901

83. The burden of proof that a sister of a deceased sonless Jat proprietor was entitled to inherit the landed property of a deceased in perference to the collaterals, though in the first instance, is on the sister, but that the rules of inheritance detailed in a Riwaj-i-am are sufficient to shift such burden on to the collaterals. SHERAN v. MUSSAMMAT SHARMAN. 117 P R 1901

84. The burden of proof that collaterals of a sonless Khatri resident of a town are entitled to inherit the deceased's property in preference to his daughters and their sons is upon the collateral asserting such rights WISHAN DAS v. THAKAR DAS. 119 P R 1901

85. Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, section 118—Presumption—Proof of consideration—Undue influence—Contract Act, 1872, section 16.

Where a money-lender admittedly lent money to a dissolute young man while he was still a minor, and again within a few days of his attaining his majority supplied him with large quantities of jewellery in presence only of his (plaintiff) touts, relations and dependants, and then obviously gave a false colour to the transaction in his claim, held, that such circumstances are facts from which undue influence is to be presumed, and are sufficient to shift the ordinary presumption laid down in section 118 of the Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, that until the contrary is proved, the presumption should be made that every negotiable instrument was made for consideration, and that the onus, therefore, of proving the actual amount of the advances must be laid on the plaintiff. MIRAN BAKHSH v. MUHAMMAD HUSSAIN. 2 P R 1902

86. A money-lender advancing money to a Mahant on the security of immovable property belonging to a shrine must prove that the necessity really existed. KASHI RAM v. BAWA TOLA. 3 P R 1902

87. Onus of proving a custom authorizing alienation of ancestral land by a proprietor, governed by Punjab Customary Law, without proved necessity rests on the person so alleging. SHER MUHAMMAD v. FATTEH DIN. 6 P R R 1902

88. The onus of proving that a male proprietor cannot alienate acquired property at his pleasure, rests on the party denying such power. MEHR KHAN v. KARAM ILAHI. 13 P R 1902

89. Suit for possession of immovable property—Adverse possession—Burden of proof.

90. Burden of proof that by custom a childless proprietor was competent to alienate ancestral immovable property in favor of some of his collaterals in presence of other collaterals of equal degree lies on the person asserting the existence of such custom. AMIR AND OTHERS v. MUSSAMMAT ZEBO AND OTHERS. 42 P R 1902

91. The onus of proving a custom empowering the alienation of ancestral holdings is on the person relying on such a custom. HAIDAR KHAN AND OTHERS v. JAHAN KHAN. 50 P R 1902

92. In an action for malicious prosecution it does not invariably rest entirely on the defendant to rebut the prima facie evidence arising from the finding of Criminal Court in favour of accused by showing that he had reasonable and probable cause, but it is for the plaintiff to prove express malice as well as the want of probable cause and its non-existence. FEROZ SHAH DOSSABHOY DARRAH v. WAUTERSZ. 60 P R 1902

93. Custom—Inheritance—Aroras of Kasur, district Lahore—Exclusion of daughter by brother—Burden of proof.

In a case, the parties to which were non-agricultural Aroras, a shop-keeping and money-lending class of Kasur, Lahore District, held that the onus of proving that in matters of succession they were governed by a family custom, whereby brothers excluded daughters, was upon plaintiff who asserted it. ANANT RAM v. HUKMAN MALL. 62 P R 1902

94. The onus of proving that by a special family custom, a widow succeeds to the whole estate of her husband as absolute owner with full power of alienation is on the person relying on such a custom. MUHAMMAD ANWAR-UL-HAQ v. HABIB-UL-RAHMAN. 74 P R 1902

95. Custom—Alienation—Sale by sonless Jat proprietor to a distant collateral who is a co-proprietor in the village—Objection by nearer collaterals not residing in the village—Burden of proof.

In a case by the nearer collaterals of a sonless proprietor for a declaration that a sale effected by the latter in favour of a distant collateral would not affect their reversionary rights, the defence contended that as the alienation was in favour of another collateral, and that as the plaintiffs were no longer members of the village community, being residents of another village, they had no locus standi. The lower Courts holding that the plaintiffs had failed to establish affirmatively that by custom they were entitled to challenge the sale in question, the burden of proof being upon them dismissed their suit.

Held, that although in cases where the family of the objectors had for generations back entirely cut themselves off from their village of origin and settled in another village, or had unmistakeably been shown by their conduct to have given up any rights they might have had to property in such village, the burden of proof that they were nevertheless still entitled to the rights which they would have possessed had they remained in the village lies upon them, yet that in a case where the father of the objectors had left the village and had acquired property in another village, and where there was no proof that their father or that they themselves had abandoned any rights which he or they might have to land in that village the burden of proof that they were not so entitled lay upon the defendants.

96. Possession—Ejectment—Suit by person ejected brought more than six months from date of dispossession against one having no title—Title of possession—Burden of proof.

Possession in law being a substantive right or interest which exists and has legal incidents and advantages apart from the true owner's title, a person in possession of land without title has an interest in the property which is good against all the world except the true owner. Therefore where a plaintiff has been forcibly dispossessed of immovable property by a person having no title he can sue for possession simply on the strength of the possession which he had before he was dispossessed, provided he sues within the twelve years' period allowed by article 142 of the Limitation Act. In such a suit, unless defendant proves a title, plaintiff should succeed without being asked to prove his own title to ownership, and even if the defendant proves that he has no such title. ABDUL HAMID v. SARBULAND KHAN 78 P R 1902

97. Mortgage—Authority of mortgagor to impose any easement on the property mortgaged whereby the security is rendered insufficient—Validity of such act—Burden of proof.

Held, that a mortgagor in possession has no authority without the consent of the mortgagee to do an act which is likely to prove destructive or permanently injurious to the property mortgaged. The onus of proving the validity of such act, and that the security was not thereby rendered insufficient rests on the mortgagor or his representative in interest. 98. Sale—Suit by vendor for declaration of right.

claration of right disputing the genuineness of the mutation proceedings.

Held, that the plaintiff was bound to establish his case affirmatively, the onus probandi being upon him either by proving that he was personated before the Revenue Officer or that in fact he never admitted the transaction before him. GHARIB KHAN v. SIKANDAR. 91 P R 1902

100. As the same presumptions as to following the general custom of the Punjab do not arise in the case of persons who do not depend entirely on the land for their support, the burden of proof that such persons in matters of alienations or successions are governed by custom rests on the party making such an allegation. MOTI RAM v. SANT RAM. 103 P R 1902

101. Although the existence of a custom of pre-emption in a particular sub-division such as is referred to in section 11 of the Punjab Laws Act has to be established, instances in the neighbouring sub-divisions, though not of themselves sufficient to prove the existence of such a custom in that sub-division, are evidence of such existence. BURDEN OF PROOF—contd.

107. Where a general agricultural custom is found to prevail as regards alienation of proprietary rights, the presumption is, unless the contrary can be shown, that such a custom is also applicable to the occupancy rights. 112. The burden of proof that Khatris, who do not depend entirely on land, in matters of alienation and succession follow Punjab Customary Law rests on the person making such an allegation. 123. Custom—Succession—Hindu Law—Brahmins of mauza Mankiala, tahsil Gujar Khan, district Rawalpindi—Onus probandi.

Held, that apart from local and special circumstances and conditions the initial presumption in regard to Brahmins is, that they are governed by Hindu Law, and that the defendants, on whom the onus probandi rested, have failed to prove that Brahmins of mauza Mankiala, tahsil Gujar Khan, district Rawalpindi, follow agricultural custom in matters of succession. MUSSAMMAT MAYA v. GURDIT SINGH. 1 P R 1910

124. Custom—Succession—Collateral residing in another village, or village proprietary body—Escheat—Onus probandi.

Held, that a nephew of a deceased proprietor, who does not reside in the village where the deceased left land and is not a proprietor in it, succeeds to his uncle's property in preference to the proprietors of the village—And that the initial onus, generally speaking, would lie on the proprietary body to show that they had a right to exclude a near agnatic relative of the deceased owner from the inheritance.

Held also, that a right of escheat to the proprietary body cannot be presumed to exist; it must be affirmatively proved. DASOUNDA SINGH v. MANGAL. 18 P R 1910

125. Occupancy holding—Succession—Punjab Tenancy Act, XVI of 1887, section 59 (c)—entry in Wajib-ul-arz regarding succession of bhaiya karabati—meaning of—Custom—onus probandi.

Held, that where in the Wajib-ul-arz the occupancy tenants are recorded as stating, that if one of them should die without sons succession should go to bhaiya karabati. Such entry, if viewed (1) as a record of custom, cannot be used to override or extend the scope of section 59 (c) of the Punjab Tenancy Act, XVI of 1887, and if viewed (2) as an agreement, should be interpreted in a reasonable way, and it is reasonable to suppose that the landlords, if they agreed at all, agreed to the succession of such brothers and karabati only as might be entitled under tenancy law and custom, and the idea of a right according only to descendants of a person who once held the land, is a fundamental idea in the minds of the peasantry.

Held also, that the burden of proof is on the persons claiming occupancy rights, and they must prove that their ancestor once occupied the land. ALLAH DITTA v. ACHHRU MAL. 38 P R 1910

126. Custom—Alienation—Alienation by father—Ancestral and self-acquired property—onus of proof—suit to set aside alienation as being made without legal necessity—conjecture and positive proof.

In a suit to set aside a deed of sale of immovable property executed by the plaintiff's father, who had succeeded to it as the next reversionary heir on the death of the widow of the last male owner, the plaintiff alleged that the land sold was ancestral property, and that the alienation had been made without legal necessity and was therefore void.

The evidence showed that the last male owner had acquired some lands in the district by purchase and others on abandonment by collateral relatives, but there was no evidence defining the boundaries of these portions respectively, that being merely a matter of conjecture.

Held, that the onus of proving that the property alienated was not self-acquired in the hands of the last male owner, was on the plaintiff, who could not under the circumstances derive any assistance from conjectures, however reasonable in place of positive proof. ATAR SINGH v. THAKAR SINGH.

127 Custom—Adoption—Adoption of brother's daughter's son without the consent of adopter's reversioners—Validity of—Hindu Jat agriculturists of Hoshiarpur tahsil—onus probandi.

Held, that among Hindu Jat agriculturists of the Hoshiarpur tahsil of the Hoshiarpur district adoption of a brother's daughter's son is not valid without the consent of adopter's reversioners.

Held also, that the rule laid down in 50 P. R. 1893 F. B. (Ralla and others v. Budha) is that among agriculturists the onus of establishing the unfettered power to adopt a person who is not an agnate is on the party who sets up the power, and that evidence of power to adopt a daughter's son does not shift the burden of establishing the power to adopt the son of a brother's daughter. CANTONMENTS.

1. Act VIII of 1859, section 205*—Government Notification No.* 1225, September 26th, 1866*—Sanction of Chief Court for sale of certain property in land—House in cantonments not "property in land."*

By Punjab Government Notification No. 1225, September 26th, 1866, hereditary or joint-acquired property in land cannot be sold in execution under section 205, Civil Procedure Code, without the previous sanction of the Chief Court.

Held, that a house in cantonments is not "property in land" within the meaning of the notification; that "land" means immovable property for the time being subject to a settlement of land revenue. MOOTSUDDEE MULL v. ABDOOLA KHAN 26 P R 1870

2. Landlord and Tenant—Bengal Military Regulations of 1836*—Promulgation of, in the Punjab—Commanding a trespass—Invasion of proprietary right by convening committee under the Regulations—Act XVIII of* 1850.

By order of the Governor-General in Council, of the 12th September 1836, which was to take effect from the date of its promulgation at the different stations of the Bengal Army, applications for unoccupied ground for the purpose (inter alia) of being built upon, such ground being within the limits of a Military Cantonment, were to be made in the first instance to the commanding officer of the station, to be forwarded and submitted for the orders of Government; the applications were to be written in a form annexed to the Governor-General's Order; and the grantee was to subscribe to certain conditions, one of which was the following, viz., that all houses in a military cantonment being the property of persons not belonging to the army, which might be deemed by the commanding officer of the station suitable for the accommodation of officers, should be claimable for purchase or hire at the option of the owner, in the former case at a valuation, in the latter at a rent, to be fixed (in case of the parties disagreeing) by a committee of arbitration constituted in manner provided by the Governor-General's Order. This condition was subsequently modified by several G. G. O.'s, until by No. 1001 of 8th December 1864, the condition was stated to be that the owner of any house in a military cantonment not occupied by a person belonging to the army on duty at the station, might be required to rent the house to any Military Officer belonging to the station who might require it to reside in, if the officer commanding the station were satisfied that there was no other suitable house available; that in every such case, if the owner should offer to sell, rather than let, the house to the officer who had so obtained the house, and if the offer were not accepted, the officer should at any time be required to vacate the house within a week of his receiving notice that the house had been sold to another Military Officer on duty at the station who required it for his own residence; and that the rent to be paid in such cases or the price of the house when the officer consented to purchase it, should be fixed (if the parties disagreed as to the amount) by a committee of arbitration. None of these Regulations were formally promulgated at Rawalpindi.

Plaintiff in 1850 made a verbal application to the Officer Commanding the station, through Captain Y. of the 4th Regiment N. I., for permission to occupy certain land at Rawalpindi, and to build a dwelling-house thereon. After a time, plaintiff was informed by Captain Y. that the permission was granted. Plaintiff did not subscribe to any conditions, but the land was marked out; and plaintiff built upon it; and from that time, he remained in undisturbed possession until October 1870. In that month, Captain W. wished to occupy the house built by the plaintiff on this land, as a monthly tenant, at a rent of Rs. 80; but as Captain P. was willing to take the house for a year certain at the same rent, plaintiff refused to let it to Captain W. for any time less than a year, and accepted the offer of Captain P. The defendant, Major-General M. commanding the Rawalpindi Division, on the application of Captain W, ordered a committee of arbitration to be assembled; this application was made before the house was actually let to Captain P. The committee though only convened to assess the rent, found that Captain W. had a prior right to occupy the house as a monthly tenant, and that the rent (Rs. 80) was reasonable. The defendant approved of this finding; and his approval was communicated to Captains W. and P., the latter being informed that the house was not available for him. Captain W. made a forcible entry, and after occupying the house for a few months, during which time plaintiff treated him as a trespasser he vacated it.

Plaintiff sued the defendant for damages for procuring or commanding this trespass, on the part of Captain W. and for an invasion of his (plaintiff's) proprietary rights in convening and confirming the finding of the committee of arbitration, contending that the Regulations above-mentioned did not apply to him, first, because when the Regulations were issued the Punjab was not subject to the Bengal Military Regulations, nor was it even a Province of the Crown, and that they had not after it was conquered been formally promulgated at Rawalpindi, and secondly, because plaintiff had not subscribed to the conditions.

Held, that a formal promulgation of the Regulations in question at the different stations was only intended for existing cantonments, which were governed by the earlier orders, and not for cantonments that might afterwards be established, inasmuch as the latter would as a matter of course be governed by the same Regulations as the former; and that plaintiff held the land subject to the Regulations.

Held, also, that plaintiff was not justified in refusing to let the house to Captain W. as a monthly tenant (or unless it was taken for a year), and in letting it to Captain P.

Held, also, that defendant had not ordered Captain W. to take possession of the house, but had merely expressed an opinion, that he was entitled to possession; and that even if what the defendant did amounted to an order to Captain W. which the latter was bound to obey, that order would only justify Captain W.'s taking possession in a legal manner, and the defendant was not responsible for Captain W.'s forcible or illegal entry into the house.

Held, also, that defendant had not invaded plaintiff's proprietary rights in convening the committee of arbitration, as the rent for a monthly tenancy had to be fixed, plaintiff having only consented to take a certain rent for a yearly tenancy.

Held, also, that the plaintiff had no cause of action in respect of defendant's approval of the committee's finding that Captain W. had a prior right; for, first, inasmuch as in convening the committee to assess the rent, the defendant admitted the priority of Captain W. to the occupation of the house, the committee's expression of opinion on that point, approved of by the defendant was immaterial; and, secondly, in confirming the decision of the committee, which was final, the defendant only unnecessarily expressed an opinion, even if he had exceeded his duty as General of the Division in expressing it.

Held, also, that there was no want of due care and caution on the part of the defendant in convening the committee; and that unless he acted maliciously, he was not responsible, as in convening the committee and confirming their finding he acted quasi-judicially. Semble, if he did not act quasijudicially, but called the committee under a mistake, he was not answerable unless he acted maliciously.

Held, also, that defendant was not a "person acting judicially" within the meaning of Act XVIII of 1850. POLEY v. McMURDO. 71 P R 1873

3. Landlord and tenant—House in cantonments—Liability of landlord to repair—Damages for injuries caused from non-repair.

On 15th November, 1875, plaintiff, Dr. Tandy, rented from defendant a house situate in the Cantonment of Peshawar, without any agreement in writing and without any special terms. On 13th December 1875 an earthquake took place in the Peshawar valley, which injured and shook the house.

Shortly after the earthquake defendant was shown over the house and requested to repair it. The defendant's attention was drawn to the cracked walls, but not to the roof, which was concealed from view by a ceiling. Repairs were executed by the defendant, but not to the roof, which neither he nor Dr. Tandy believed to be unsafe. On 13th March 1876 the roof of the house gave way, and falling in, seriously injured Mrs. Tandy. By para. 1973 of the Bengal Army Regulations the landlord of a house is bound, and can be compelled, to repair a house in cantonments.

The cause of the roof falling in was the great weight of mud on the beams and supports, which were unfit for the heavy load upon them ; and also the fact that the wood-work or a great portion of it, was unsound.

In a suit by Dr. and Mrs. Tandy for damages, held, that the defendant, as owner of a house in cantonments, was liable to keep the same in repair, and having failed in his obligation was liable to an action for damages sustained by the falling-in of the roof through the want of proper repair.

In assessing damages in such a case a Court should not take into consideration the remote consequences that may follow, but the expense, pain and loss, immediately connected with the accident.—RAMJI MAL v. TANDY.

4. Lease of house for period exceeding one month—Validity of such lease—Bengal Army Regulations, para. 24.

Where the defendant agreed with plaintiff to take a lease of her house, situated within the Amballa Cantonment, for the period of one year, held, that such agreement was not void or inoperative by reason of para 24 of the Bengal Army Regulations, which prescribes that houses in Cantonments can only, according to those Regulations, be let by the month, assuming that the plaintiff was bound by the provisions of those Regulations. Poley v. McMurdo (71 of 1873, Civil) cited. CANTONMENTS—concld.

Agreement to pay rent at specified rate—Subsequent refusal to pay at higher rate than that fixed by Cantonment Committee when permitting landlord to build—Act IX of 1872, Chapter II—Undue influence—Coercion.

Plaintiffs, who were the owners of certain houses in the prostitutes' quarters in the Mooltan Cantonment, sued for arrears of rent alleged to be due by defendant, who was a prostitute, occupying one of the said houses, under an agreement in writing to pay rent at the rate of Rs. 2 per mensem. Defendant pleaded that she executed the written agreement under protest, and under the exercise of undue influence by the plaintiffs. The lower Court gave effect to this plea, relying on the fact that the plaintiffs had obtained permission to build the houses in question from the Cantonment Committee on certain conditions, one of which was that they should not charge a higher rate of rent than Re. 1-8-0 per mensem for a house of the description of that for wh.ch rent at Rs. 2 per mensem was claimed in the present case.

Held, that the above facts furnished no valid answer to the plaiutiffs' claim ; that the present suit not being one between the plaintiffs and the Cantonment Committee, but between the plaintiffs and a third party, it was not open to such party to take advantage of the agreement alleged to have been entered into between the plaintiffs and the Cantonment Committee for the purpose of avoiding performance of a contract entered into between her and the plaintiffs ; and as that contract was not in itself illegal, or open to objection on any of the grounds specified in Chapter II of the Contract Act, the defendant was bound by it. Cantonments Act, XIII of 1889, section 4 (2)—power of Government to define the limits of any cantonment so as to extend them—General Clauses Act, X of 1897, section 14.

Held, that looking at the Act as a whole, the word "define" in section 4 (2) of the Cantonments Act, 1889, must be construed to mean, define by way of extension as well as by way of retrenchment, and that under section 14 of the General Clauses Act, 1897, such power can be exercised from time to time. authority under the Cantonments (House Accommodation) Act, 1902, and plaintiff had refused to execute necessary repairs.

Held, that the relation between the parties having been settled by a special Act, the application of the general law was ousted and consequently—

(a) the defendant's remedy was under section 19 et seq. of that Act and the rule embodied in section 108 (f) of the Transfer of Property Act did not apply ;

(b) the Civil Courts had no jurisdiction to decide the question of necessity for repairs and their cost under section 70 of the Contract Act, 1872.

But also, that a finding by the cantonment authority under the provisions of section 19, that repairs were necessary and their cost would enable the Civil Courts to decide whether under section 70 of the Contract Act money paid by the tenant for repairs should or should not be deducted from the sum claimed for rent due. Section 28.

And sections 21, 26, 34—Military tenant to require reference to arbitration—Constitution of Committee of arbitration—Authority of District Magistrate to appoint a member in place of a nominee of a party—Finality of the decision of a Committee improperly constituted.

Held, that a District Magistrate has no right to appoint a member of a Committee of arbitration under section 28 of the Cantonments House Accommodation Act, 1902, in the place of a nominee of a party who had declined to act on the ground of unsuitability of the time fixed for the meeting, but was willing to act if another date was fixed, without first calling upon the party concerned to nominate another member in his place, and the latter had failed to do so within the period allowed to him by law.

A Committee of arbitration constituted in violation of the provisions of the Act has no legal existence and no powers of a Committee of arbitration, and its actions are simply ultra vires and must be disregarded by Courts of law.

Although by section 9, it is not necessary for the plaintiffs to prove this negligence or criminal act, yet it is necessary that such negligence or criminal act should in the case of loss of or damage to articles included in the list either appear or be necessarily inferred, when there has been no declaration. In a suit brought to recover the principal and balance of interest due on a mortgage-bond, and to obtain a declaration of lien upon the mortgaged property, it appeared that in a former suit the plaintiff had claimed and obtained a decree for the interest only due on the same bond up to the date of that suit. Under the terms of the bond it was stipulated that the principal sum should be paid without interest within one year; that, in the event of payment not being made, interest should be paid month by month: and, finally, if any default occurred in regard to the payment of interest, the mortgagee should be entitled to sue for both principal and interest. The lower Courts dismissed the present suit as barred under section 43 of Act X of 1877, holding that the plaintiff had split his cause of action, and was debarred from bringing a fresh suit.

Held, that the suit was not barred under the above section, as the distinct agreement to pay interest, month by month, constituted, when there was default of such payment, a basis of a distinct cause of action, and the creditor was entitled to demand, and to enforce his demand for the payment of interest as stipulated, without being compelled to proceed to the further step of demanding the whole of the debt and enforcing his demand by the sale of the mortgaged property. Thakar Das v. Mohomed Bukhsh (15 of 1866, Civil Ref.) referred to. CAUSE OF ACTION—contd.

29. Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877) section 43—Omission to sue—Intentional abandonment—Suit for property excluded from former suit on account of absence of certificate under Pensions Act.

The property in suit in the present case having been expressly included by the plaintiffs in a former suit, a decree in plaintiffs' favour for the whole of the property then sued for was passed by the Chief Court. The present defendant then applied for and obtained a review of judgment on the ground that under section 4 of the Pensions Act (XXIII of 1871) the Court was precluded from entertaining a suit for the property now in suit, in the absence of a certificate from the Deputy Commissioner authorizing such suit to be tried. The Chief Court, holding this objection to be valid, excluded the property now claimed from its final decree. The necessary certificate, which had been applied for when the objection was raised in the Chief Court, having been granted, the present suit was instituted on the authority of such certificate for the property excluded by the Chief Court, from its decree. The lower appellate Court dismissed the suit as barred under section 43 of the Civil Procedure Code.

Held, reversing the order of the lower appellate Court, that as the plaintiffs did actually sue in the former case for the property now claimed, and as, even if they had not done so, they were under no obligation either to postpone the claim which they were at the time entitled to make, or to relinquish what they might afterwards become entitled to sue for, and as in the previous suit it was decided that the Court could not then entertain the claim, it was impossible to accept the proposition that in the previous suit the plaintiff either omitted to sue for or intentionally relinquished the claim now made. 30. Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877), section 43—Lease of house for season—Notice of intended breach of contract by lessee—Suit for one month's rent accrued due—Subsequent suit for rent of the remaining term as damages.

Defendant took the plaintiff's premises on lease for the season of 1881, at a monthly rent of Rs. 165, payable on the 21st of each month. On August 9th the plaintiff, who after paying the instalments of rent due up to 21st July, had vacated the house, communicated to plaintiff his opinion that he was not liable for further payment. Plaintiff on the 2nd September sued for the instalment of rent payable on August 21st, and obtained a decree on confession of judgment. Subsequently, on the 14th November, plaintiff filed the present suit for Rs. 330, damages for wrongful refusal to pay rent for the remainder of the term from the 21st August.

Held, that plaintiff had not split his claim

It was open to the plaintiff as the promisee to treat the notice of 9th August as a present breach of the contract and to sue at once for damages for non-performance: or to treat the notice as inoperative and await the time when the contract was to be executed and then hold the other party responsible for all the consequences of non-performance. Plaintiff having adopted the latter course and having in his first suit sued for the whole of the claim arising on his then cause of action, viz. one month's rent, the rent for no subsequent period having accrued due on the date of that suit, the provisions of section 43 of the Code of Civil Procedure did not apply to the facts of the present suit. 31. Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877), sections 42, 43—First suit brought by plaintiffs as reversioners to set aside alienation by widow—Subsequent suit for pre-emption of the subject of the same alienation—Distinct causes of action.

The present plaintiffs first brought a suit against one Mussammat H. and the present defendant to have the sale of a house by Mussammat H. to the said defendant cancelled, on the ground that they (plaintiffs) were reversionary heirs of Mussammat H.'s late husband and entitled as such to succeed to the house on her death, and that the sale was made without necessity. That suit having been dismissed on the ground that the sale was for necessity, the plaintiffs brought the present suit against the purchaser (Mussammat H. having in the meantime died) to obtain possession of the house in virtue of their right of pre-emption.

Held, that the suit was not barred under section 42 or 43 of the Civil Procedure Code, as the act of the widow being from the plaintiffs' point of view regarded as an infringement of distinct rights possessed (assuming them to have been possessed) by the plaintiffs, viz., their right as reversionary heirs of the widow's husband and their right of pre-emption, although the act of the widow in selling the house was a single act, it really gave rise to distinct causes of action, upon which separate suits comprising distinct subject-matters might be brought. 32. Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877), section 43—Assignment of money decree obtained on specially registered mortgage deed—Suit by assignee to establish lien under the deed on property subsequently sold.

Plaintiff sued, as the assignee of the rights and interest of the holder of a money-decree obtained upon a specially registered mortgage deed against the defendant, to establish a lien under the said deed with respect to certain of the mortgaged properties sold to the defendant subsequently to the date of the money-decree.

Held, that section 43 of the Code of Civil Procedure (as amended) could not be successfully pleaded as an answer to the suit, as the mere fact of a mortgagee obtaining a money-decree does not per se destroy his lien against third parties who may have acquired the mortgaged property from the mortgagor subsequent to the mortgage, and that therefore the plaintiff was entitled to enforce his lien against the defendant, notwithstanding the existence of the former money-decree against the original mortgagor. Mussammat Chand Kour v. Mussammat Fajjo (113 of 1880 Civil), cited. 33. Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877), section 43—Distinct causes of action.

Plaintiff's father, who was mafidar of ⅘ths of the village of S., entered into a private arrangement with his brother, the grandfather of defendant, whereby in consideration of the brother assisting him in collecting the produce in kind from the proprietors, he was to be allowed a half share of whatever remained from the proceeds of the sale of the produce, after deducting the Government revenue on the resumed portion of the mafi and the mafidar's own dues. In pursuance of this arrangement the produce of certain harvests was stored, preparatory to division, in two granaries, but before any division was effected the two brothers died. Disputes then arose between their descendants, and the present plaintiff filed a suit against the present defendant in which, ignoring the former agreement between his father and uncle, he claimed possession of the entire grain, contending that defendant had no title to it whatever. This suit was eventually dismissed, the Court holding that the plaintiff was not entitled to more than a half share of the grain, which the defendant had never refused to give him, and that according to the practice which had prevailed between the father and grandfather of the parties, it was usual to sell the grain, and after deducting the Government revenue to divide the balance in equal proportions. The Court added that it appeared that a sum of Rs. 673-12-0 was due to plaintiff as the Government and mafidar's share of the revenue, but as it was not clear whether any portion of this sum had already been paid by the defendant's grandfather, or what was the state of the accounts between the parties, it left it open to the plaintiff to bring a separate suit for this item. Plaintiff then brought the present suit for the revenue of 10 harvests.

Held, that the present suit was not barred with reference to the provisions of section 43 of the Code. It was not shown, nor was it contended, that the defendant, prior to the date of the former action, had refused to permit a sale of the grain to take place in accordance with the agreement, and it was admitted that the grain had not then been sold; what the plaintiff then claimed and what the defendant refused to concede was the right to take possession of the entire quantity of grain, so that the refusal on the part of the defendant to allow this, did not create any infraction of the plaintiff's right under the terms of the agreement, and had the plaintiff then sued upon the agreement, the defendant could have successfully pleaded that the plaintiff had no cause of action and that his suit was premature. The dismissal therefore of the former suit did not debar the plaintiff from subsequently suing to recover the revenue, when the defendant, by either taking possession of his own half-share of the produce without paying the revenue, or by refusing to permit the gross produce to be sold, had committed a breach of the agreement whereby plaintiff had acquired a cause of action which was not in existence when the first suit was filed; so that the claim in the present case was not one which the plaintiff was entitled to make, under the terms of the agreement as found by the Court, when the former suit was instituted. Gahi Mal v. Shera (90 of 1881 Civil), referred to. 34. Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877), section 43—Mortgage by mother as guardian of her minor son's property—Suit by mortgagee against mother for money-decree only—Subsequent suit to enforce the lien against mother's son, the latter having attained his majority.

One Mussammat N. mortgaged to the plaintiff certain property belonging to her son, M. B. who was then a minor. His title was not alluded to in the mortgage, but it was alleged in appeal to the Chief Court (though this was denied by M. B. in his reply to the present suit), that the mortgage was effected by Mussammat N. in the capacity of her son's guardian and under circumstances under which the morgage would bind him. The plaintiffs, having sued Mussammat N. alone and obtained a decree against her for the debt due on the mortgage-bond, M. B. being no party to the suit, and the decree not purporting to bind the property, subsequently brought the present suit to enforce their lien against the property, M. B. who had in the meantime come of age and who was stated to be in possession of the property, and his mother, being both made defendants. The lower appellate Court held that the suit did not lie with reference to the provisions of the last clause of section 43 of the Civil Procedure Code.

Held, reversing the order of the lower appellate Court so far as it dismissed the suit as against M. B., that inasmuch as the mother and son clearly could not be regarded as the same party where the question was whether the son was bound by his mother's acts during his infancy, and as it was impossible to say that the son was practically a party to the former suit, since nothing done in that suit would bind him, it could not therefore be said, so far as the plaintiffs' claim against M. B. was concerned, that they had split their cause of action by suing for separate remedies in separate suits, for there was no suit against him before. If the former decree had been satisfied, the plaintiffs' cause of action on the mortgage would have been extinguished, but it was not alleged that it had been satisfied and the present suit was against a different party for a different remedy from that previously decreed. 35. Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877), section 43—Plaintiff entitled to only one remedy suing for wrong remedy—Different causes of action—Land Acquisition Act, compensation awarded to Hindu widow under—Suit by reversioner for the apportionment of such compensation.

Plaintiff, the reversionary heir, sued the defendant, a Hindu widow, for a portion of a sum which had been awarded to the defendant by the Collector as compensation for a house which had been taken up under the Land Acquisition Act. It appeared that, during the proceedings before the Collector, plaintiff had applied for a share of the compensation, but the Collector having refused to entertain the application, plaintiff, before the money had been actually made over to the widow, brought a suit in the Civil Court claiming (1) that the widow should be restrained from making the alienation, and (2) that the money should be invested, lest she should waste it, she being entitled to receive only the income from the investment for her life. The suit was dismissed on the ground that the plaintiff had no cause of action for the relief sought, but it was stated that such dismissal would be no bar to a suit by the plaintiff for the apportionment of the compensation, if he were advised to bring such suit. In the present suit it was objected that the suit was barred under section 43 of the Civil Procedure Code.

Held, that this objection could not prevail, (1) because the section has no application to the case of a person who being entitled to one remedy only, sues by mistake, not for that remedy, but for another remedy to which he is not entitled, and (2) because the plaintiff was suing in the present case upon a cause of action different from that on which he first sued. Plaintiff sued the defendants for a declaration of title to a share in the offerings of a certain shrine, which suit was dismissed upon the ground that it was not cognisable with reference to section 42 of the Specific Relief Act, as there was consequential relief which the plaintiff could have claimed and had not claimed. This order of dismissal having been confirmed on appeal, the plaintiff brought the present suit claiming the consequential relief which he omitted to claim in his first suit.

Held that, assuming the cause of action in the two suits to be identical, the second suit was not barred by the provisions of section 43 of the Civil Procedure Code.

Per Plowden, J.—Where the dismissal of a suit takes place for defect in the frame of the suit in contravention of section 42 of the Code of Civil Procedure, accompanied by a refusal to adjudicate upon the subject-matter submitted for decision, section 43 of the Code does not preclude a plaintiff whose suit has been thus dismissed from bringing a second suit founded upon the same cause of action. The object of the final clauses of section 43 is to prevent further litigation concerning the subject-matter of dispute, and there has been no previous litigation regarding the subject-matter in dispute within the meaning of section 42 when the Court has refused to exercise its function by giving a decision between the litigants on the subject-matter in dispute. In such cases the plaintiff is at liberty, section 43 notwithstanding, to commence proceedings de novo, and that without any express permission.

Per Elsmie, J.—There is nothing in section 43 of the Code which prevents a man who has mistaken his remedy and sued for what he is not entitled, from subsequently bringing a suit for a remedy to which he has a right. BHOLA SINGH v. GURDIT SINGH.

In a suit for damages for wrongful exclusion of plaintiff by defendant from certain property, it appeared that the same plaintiff had previously sued for and obtained from the same defendant a perpetual injunction directing the latter to abstain from the same wrongful act.

Held, that the second suit was barred by section 43 of the Civil Procedure Code, as it was not open to the plaintiff to sue twice for different remedies, and different claims on the same cause of action. CHAJJU SINGH v. NIHAL SINGH.

Held, that a suit for a sum payable according to village custom, as "dhart" on a sale of grain to which the plaintiff is entitled, but which has been paid to defendant, is not

"a suit for a sum payable on account of village cesses" within the meaning of section 77 (3) (j) of the Punjab Tenancy Act, 1887, but is a suit for money received by defendant to the use of plaintiff, and as such cognizable by a Civil Court. (81 P. R., 1889), referred to.

Held further, that where a plaintiff brings in a Civil Court a single suit which comprises two claims on different causes of action, one of which is cognizable by a Civil Court, while the other is cognizable by a Revenue Court, and the decree of the Civil Court deals with both claims on the merits, such decree cannot be registered as the decree of a Revenue Court, the Chief Court having no power under section 100 of the Punjab Tenancy Act, 1887, to deal with part of a decree, but only power to deal with the decree as a whole. 39. Court Fees Act, 1870, sections 12 (ii), 16, 17—Suit for specific performance of contract to sell, and for pre-emption on sale—"Distinct subject"—Appeal and cross-objections—Court-fee payable—Joinder of causes of action—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, section 44 (a), 45 and 561.

Plaintiff sued, alleging a contract to sell him a house for Rs. 2,500, out of which Rs. 100 were paid as earnest-money, and a subsequent sale (in guise of a mortgage by conditional sale) to a third party, and prayed for a decree either for (i) specific performance of the contract of sale on payment of Rs. 2,400, or (ii) for pre-emption on the sale on payment of Rs. 2,500, or whatever might be found to be the market-value of the house. The plaint was stamped in accordance with the value of the first claim only, and the objection of the defendant as to the stamp which was taken by him in the first Court was not disposed of by any formal order.

The first Court decreed the claims in the alternative, and they were both included in the defendants' appeal to the Divisional Judge, which was valued on the same principle as the plaint. The Divisional Judge having reversed the decree as respects the first claim, but upheld it as regards the second, the defendant appealed to the Chief Court from the latter portion of the judgment and the plaintiff put in cross-objections dealing with the former portion. A preliminary objection was taken by appellants that the Court-fee of Rs. 2 on the petition of cross-objections was insufficient, and that it should be calculated on the value of the claim for specific performance to which such cross-objection related. It was also urged that the plaint should be stamped, in accordance with section 17 of the Court-fees Act, on the values of the two distinct claims therein included.

Held, that appellants' contention was correct. Plaintiff alleged two distinct causes of action, viz., the contract to sell, and the subsequent sale giving him a right of pre-emption if not rendered nugatory by the previous agreement, and his suit, therefore, embraced two "distinct subjects" within the meaning of section 17 of the Court Fees Act, even though alternative, and not cumulative, relief was alone asked for; and as the plain object of that section is to prevent any loss to the revenue, owing to separate causes of action being lawfully combined in one suit, the fees to be paid are to be the same as if separate suits had been filed. Therefore, under section 16 of the Act, respondent was bound to stamp his cross-objections calculated on the value of the claim for specific performance about which the appellants had not appealed.

Held, further, that under section 12 (ii) of the Act, plaintiff would have to pay additional Court-fees in the first Court, as the question of valuation was there raised and "wrongly decided," defendants' objection being overruled by implication.

A obtained a decree against B in a Civil suit, and subsequently B instituted criminal proceedings against A for criminal breach of trust. In consideration of B's withdrawing this prosecution, A gave B a receipt purporting to acknowledge payment by the latter to the former of Rs. 16,120, the amount of the decree mentioned. C, a servant of B, filed this receipt in the Court whose duty it was to execute the decree, and the Court recorded an adjustment of the decree. Afterwards, A applied for execution of the decree, which was refused. Upon appeal to the Chief Court, it was contended for the decree-holder that the receipt had been filed in the Deputy Commissioner's Court in fraud of an understanding between A and B, that the latter should pay the amount of the decree to the former and the receipt was not to be used until such payment had been made; that the receipt was void, as it was based upon an illegal consideration, viz., the compromise of the offence of criminal breach of trust; and that the adjustment of the decree not having been certified to the Deputy Commissioner under section 206, Civil Procedure Code, either by the decree-holder in person or by his authorised agent, execution of the decree might still be had. Held, that as it was found to be a fact that A authorized or permitted the receipt to be filed as a certificate of adjustment of the decree, the consideration for the receipt could not be inquired into, nor the adjustment questioned; and that C's not being properly authorized by power of attorney was an immaterial irregularity; but that if the decree-holder had been over-reached, or the judgment-debtor had acted mala fide in causing the receipt to be filed, a separate suit might be brought. A had attached property as belonging to his judgment-debtor, which B, who alleged himself the owner, obtained the release of under section 246, Civil Procedure Code. But in a subsequent case this was corrected, the Court there holding that a suit by a judgment-creditor to establish his judgment-debtor's title to property seized in execution would lie, but not in a Small Cause Court. A suit by one whose property has been seized in execution as belonging to the judgment-debtor, and not released under section 246, Act VIII of 1859, is founded on a cause of action cognizable by the Small Cause Court, as it is a suit for personal property under section 6, Act XI of 1865. 47. Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), section 43—Suit by mortgagee for possession—Previous suit for interest due under mortgage—Mortgage providing for possession to be given in default of payment of interest—Distinct causes of action.

In a suit by a mortgagee for possession under the terms of his mortgage deed which provided that the mortgagor was to retain possession, paying Rs. 60 per annum, but that in case of default the mortgagee should be at liberty to sue for possession, it appeared that in a previous case the mortgagor having made default, the plaintiff had sued for the interest due, and got a decree, but did not then sue for possession. A further default having been made, he brought the present suit, which the lower Courts dismissed as barred by section 43 of the Civil Procedure Code.

Held, that the said section was no bar to the suit, inasmuch as a fresh cause of action had arisen from a breach of the contract subsequent to the previous suit. Phalla v. Kesar Singh (No. 138 of 1882, Civil) distinguished. RAMAN v. WAZIRA. 79 P R 1886

48. Succession—Daughters—Suit by reversioners to contest daughters' succession—Compromise—Subsequent suit by same reversioners to set aside alienation by daughters—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, section 43.

One K. S., a Hindu Jat, died leaving a son Kh., two daughters, the present petitioners, and certain immovable property. Kh. married and had a son L., who survived him. After the death of Kh. and the re-marriage of his widow, the daughter of K. S. went to the house left by K. S. to reside with, and take care of, their minor nephew L. On the death of L. the reversionary heir of K. S. sued the said daughters who had taken possession of both the land and houses left by K. S., but in 1860 this suit was compromised, one-third of the land and houses being left with the daughters. On the 28th January 1893, the daughters having sold part of the said house property to B. S. and C. S., the reversioners, again sued, praying for a declaration that the sale should not affect their rights after the death of the female vendors, and they pleaded that the sale was not for a necessary purpose, and that the consideration was fictitious. The defendants, who were the daughters and the vendees, pleaded that the daughters had inherited the property in dispute from K. S.; that they were full owners and had been in possession for the preceding 27 years, and that the sale was for necessity and for full consideration.

The lower Courts found that, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, the presumption was that the daughters were not full owners but merely life tenants; that their possession was permissive and not adverse to the plaintiffs; that the sale was not for necessity or for consideration, and that the plaintiffs were not barred, under section 43 of the Civil Procedure Code, from suing by reason of their suit in 1860, and decreed plaintiff's claim. A certificate to appeal having been refused by the Divisional Judge, the defendant-daughters applied to the Chief Court on the revision side, to admit a further appeal on the following grounds :

"(I). That the certificate should have "been granted, as there is a "point of law and custom "involved ;

"(a) does section 43 apply or "not ?

"(b) have or have not, the "daughters by custom more "than a life tenancy ?

"(II). The daughters have full power to "alienate.

"III). There was necessity."

Held, that the real question was not whether the daughters by custom took more than a life tenancy, but what were their rights under the compromise of 1860, and that there was no ground for admitting an appeal upon that question.

Held, further, that the present suit being upon an entirely new cause of action was not barred under section 43 of the Civil Procedure Code by the omission to claim the house in the former suit. MUSSAMMAT IND KAUR v. SUJAN SINGH. 47 P R 1894

Plaintiff, who carried on business at Pind Dadan Khan, constituted the defendant his agents at Karachi for the sale of cotton, &c., all payments being made by the defendants to the plaintiff by the latter drawing hoondees upon the former who honored them. Upon the sale of the cotton, &c., there remained due to the plaintiff Rs. 1,752-6-3, for which he sued at Pind Dadan Khan.

Held, that the dealings between the parties did not show that defendant was bound to render accounts to his principal at Pind Dadan Khan, or to pay him there and therefore the Court at Pind Dadan Khan had no jurisdiction to try the suit. KARM CHAND v. DEVI DAS 22 P R 1874

At Amritsar, defendand informed plaintiff that he did not intend to allow the marriage.

58. Suit to set aside decree based on award—Fraud—Act XV of 1877, Schedule II, article 158, power of Court to extend time prescribed by—Power of Court to give relief where defendant has fraudulently prevented plaintiff applying within prescribed period.

Held, that a suit will not lie to set aside a decree passed in accordance with an award of arbitrators, merely on the ground that such decree has been obtained by fraud.

Semble, per BARKLEY, J.—Such suit would lie if it could be shown that the judgment and decree in question were a nullity.

Held, further, per BRANDRETH, J., that if the parties to an award accept such award and do not file any objection within the period allowed (see Act XV of 1877, Schedule II, article 158), an objection even on the ground of fraud cannot legally be heard afterwards.

But held also, per BRANDRETH, J., that if in the above case the plaintiff succeeded in proving that the defendant by deceiving plaintiff's agent had fraudulently induced him not to make any application within the prescribed period, the Court would be justified in giving relief from such fraud and allowing a fresh period for the plaintiff himself to make the application. 60. Promissory Note—Bill of Exchange—Original consideration—Stamp—Construction of instrument.

Though in certain cases where a negotiable instrument, taken on account of a pre-existing debt and as a conditional discharge of such debt, is inadmissible in evidence for want of a proper stamp or for some other reason, the creditor may, if payment be not made when the instrument falls due, revert to his original rights, and disregarding the instrument, sue for the original consideration, provided he has not endorsed or lost or parted with the instrument under circumstances which would make the debtor liable upon it to some third person, yet when the original cause of action is the instrument itself, and does not exist independently of it, e.g., when the money is lent upon it, in such case there is no cause of action for money lent otherwise than upon the instrument itself, and the instrument being the only contract between the parties, the plaintiff cannot (with reference to section 91 of the Evidence Act) establish his case without it.

A document construed by the lower Courts as a promissory note, but which appeared to be rather in the nature of an unconditional order directing a certain person (viz., the plaintiff) to pay a certain sum of money to a certain person, held to fall within the definition of a " bill to exchange." in section 5, Act XXVI of 1881, notwithstanding the concluding clause of the instrument which contained a promise (conditional on his meeting the bill) to repay the plaintiff on a specified date. The latter clause was held not to control the operative part of the instrument as an "unconditional order for the payment of money to a certain person," but merely to contain an assurance for the satisfaction and information of the drawee. 61. Wrongful ouster—Wrongful possession of profits—Different cause of action.

In April 1882, the plaintiff sued the defendants for recovery of possession of certain premises of which he had been dispossessed in July 1881.

His claim was decreed. Subsequently he sued the same defendants for rent by way of damages for occupation.

The defendants pleaded that the plaintiff having omitted to claim damages in the former suit, could not claim damages for any period anterior to the date of institution of that suit—such claim being barred by section 43 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

Held, by the Full Bench that wrongful ouster and wrongful possession of profits constitute distinct and separate causes of action. The right to possess immovable property and the right to enjoy the profits of such property are two distinct rights. An infringement of the former does not necessarily involve an infringement of the latter right.

62. Civil Procedure Code—Forms of action—Statement of facts in plaint.

The Divisional Judge dismissed the plaintiff's suit as a suit for the price of goods sold and delivered and directed the plaintiff to sue on a contract of 10th April 18~5: he also held that the suit as laid, viz., for the price of goods sold to the defendant as an ordinary purchaser independently of the contract, would not lie, and that plaintiff's proper remedy was to sue for a statement of account on the contract.

Held, that the Divisional Judge's decree should be reversed, and a hearing of the appeal directed.

The Code of Civil Procedure does not deal with forms of action, it requires a statement of facts in the plaint and that the plaint should disclose a cause of action. If a cause of action is disclosed, that cause of action is to be heard and determined subject to the defence of the defendant. MUHAMMAD SHARIF v. SHAMSHER KHAN. 11 P R 1891

63. Civil Procedure Code, sections 42 and 43—Whole claim which the plaintiff is entitled to make—Previous suit dismissed as premature, there being no cause of action.

Section 43, Civil Procedure Code, is not applicable where the suit set up in bar has been dismissed because there was no cause of action.

A plaintiff must, under section 43, include the whole of the claim which he is entitled to make in respect of the cause of action, and cannot afterwards sue for any portion of the claim in respect of which he may have omitted to sue. The object of the section which is a sequel to section 42, is to prevent further litigation. A premature suit is not within the purview of the section at all.

What is contemplated in the second clause of the section is a second suit advancing a claim supplementary to the first and in respect of " the portion omitted or relin- " quished in the first suit." When the cause of action arises, a second suit may be brought for the whole of the claim arising out of it, notwithstanding the dismissal of the first suit as premature; and it need not be for the same claim or the same remedies as was sued for in the first plaint. 65. Mortgage—Effect of payment of prior mortgage by subsequent incumbrancer as against intermediate charge—Cause of action—Limitation.

G., an occupancy tenant of a one-eighth share of land, on the 19th January 1869 mortgaged five-sixths of his share to one G. R. In June 1871, default having been made in the payment of interest by the mortgagor, G. R. under the terms of his mortgage sued for, and obtained possession of the mortgaged land both as against G. and one S. R. who claimed to be in possession of the whole one-eighth share of the holding under a mortgage, dated the 1st June 1870. S. R. was left in possession of the remaining one-sixth of the said share. On the 10th June 1882, G.'s son—G. himself being dead—mortgaged the same five-sixths of the share to one Gh., the previous mortgage to G. R. being recited, and it being stipulated that Gh. should pay the consideration money to G. R. and take possession from the latter after redemption. The sons of S R.—S. R. having died meanwhile—sued, in March 1891, both G.'s son and Gh. and claimed by virtue of the intermediate mortgage to S. R. to recover from Gh. possession of the land mortgaged first to G. R. in 1869 and, subsequently, to Gh. in 1882. The defendants pleaded, inter alia, that the suit was barred by limitation and that in any event Gh. had, by redeeming G. R.'s mortgage, acquired all the rights of G. R., in the land.

The first Court dismissed the suit as barred by limitation, but the Divisional Judge, on appeal, held that the suit was within time, and further, that G. R.'s mortgage having been extinguished by the payment in 1882, was of no avail to Gh., and decreed plaintiffs' claim, Gh., appealed to the Chief Court.

Held, in accordance with the ruling of the Privy Council reported in I. L. R., I. All., 325, that inasmuch as limitation did not begin to run against the plaintiffs until the redemption of G. R.'s mortgage in 1882, the suit being filed in 1891, was within time.

But held, in accordance with the ruling of the Privy Council reported in I. L. R., X Calc., 1035, that as Gh., had a right to extinguish the prior mortgage to G. R. or to keep it alive, the presumption, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, was that he intended, when paying off G. R.'s mortgage to keep the prior charge alive for his own benefit, and that, standing in the place of G. R., he could successfully set up G. R's mortgage as a defence to plaintiff's claim for unconditional possession of the land.

66. Act XIII of 1855—Death caused by actionable wrong—Cause of action—Contributory negligence.

Plaintiffs, who were the legal representatives of one G. A., sued for compensation under Act XIII of 1855 for loss sustained by the death of the said G. A., which, it was alleged, was caused by injuries received in a railway accident occasioned by the negligence of defendant's servants. The lower Court having given a decree in favour of plaintiffs, defendant appealed to the Chief Court, and it was then contended, on his behalf, that although G. A.'s injuries were caused by the negligence of defendant's servants the cause of action was the death of G. A., and that inasmuch as death would probably not have ensued but for the plaintiff's imprudently removing G. A. from the hospital to which he had been taken after the accident, plaintiffs had been guilty of contributory negligence such as disentitled them to recover compensation.

Held, that the cause of action was the wrongful act on the part of defendant's servants resulting in injuries which caused the death of G. A., and not the death simply, although the cause of action was not complete for the relations until death occurred, death being an essential constituent of the cause of action, and that, therefore, the plaintiffs' imprudent conduct in removing G. A. from the hospital, being subsequent to the negligence which caused the injuries, did not constitute contributory negligence or disentitle them to compensation. The removal of the deceased from hospital was to be regarded merely as one of the natural and probable consequences of the infliction of the injuries, it having admittedly been done bonâ fide for the benefit of the deceased by a relation. When a document is inadmissible in evidence under section 34 of the Stamp Act, 1879, section 65 of the Evidence Act, 1872, does not allow, and therefore section 91 expressly forbids secondary evidence of the document to be given. Section 315, Civil Procedure Code, confers rights on purchasers against persons to whom their money has been paid, and in the absence of an express or an implied bar, such rights are enforceable in the ordinary way, i.e., by suit, as well as in the special manner indicated in the said section. An assignee of the auction-purchaser is entitled to recover the purchase money in a similar manner, and his suit is not unmaintainable merely because at the date of its institution he had an application pending in the Chief Court for revision of the order dispossessing him of the property.

It is for a judgment-debtor, who has succeeded in getting the Court to set aside a sale under section 312 of the Code, to move the Court to restore his property to him, and if he fails to do so, there is nothing to prevent the decree-holder and the purchaser from retaining the former the sale-proceeds, the latter the property itself. It is only when the purchaser is deprived of his bargain and ejected therefrom at the instance of the judgment-debtor that he acquires a cause of action to sue for refund of his money, and it is doubtful whether there is failure of consideration until such ejectment takes place. Upon the death of one A. A. on the 17th of January 1891, plaintiff and defendant, claiming to be his wives, applied separately for certificates under the Succession Certificate Act, 1889, and on the 22nd July 1891, the District Judge granted defendant a certificate subject to the condition that she should give security, with three sureties equal to the amount of the debts and securities in respect of which the certificate was applied for. On the 22nd August 1893, one A. R. gave security to the extent of Rs. 2,000, but according to plaintiff's allegation, the truth of which was not denied by defendant, the certificate was granted for the realization of sums, aggregating Rs. 35,586, deposited by A. A. in certain Banks. On the 22nd May 1894 plaintiff sued Mussammat Satara Begam, the said Banks and A. R., in respect of the said sum of Rs. 35,586, her suit being founded on the allegations that she was the wife of A. A., and that he had gifted the whole of his property to her by deed, dated 6th January 1881. The suit was dismissed as against the Banks and A. R., but the District Judge gave plaintiff a decree for half the amount claimed against Mussammat Satara Begam, defendant No. 1, who, thereupon, appealed to the Chief Court. For appellant, it was contended (i) that at the date of institution of the suit no portion of the sum claimed had been realized by her, and as she was not in possession of the money there was no cause of action against her; (ii) that the suit was barred under either article 48 or 49 of the Limitation Act, having been brought more than three years after the death of A. A.; (iii) that the deed of gift, being unregistered was inadmissible in evidence; (iv) that plaintiff was not the wife of A. A., but only his mistress.

Held, as to the first contention, that as defendant was bound under the certificate to realize the said sum of Rs. 35,586 and to account to plaintiff for her share, plaintiff had a good cause of action against defendant in respect of such share which defendant could have realized prior to the suit but wilfully failed to realize; as to the second contention, that the suit was not barred by limitation; as to the third contention, that plaintiff had failed to prove that the deed of gift was ever acted upon, and, therefore, could not claim anything under it; and as to the fourth contention, that the lower Court had rightly held upon the evidence that plaintiff was the wife of A. A.

70. Civil Procedure Code, 1882, section 34—"Cause of action"—Want of knowledge—Review of judgment—Informalities in presenting application for review.

Plaintiff, a minor, under the Court of Wards, sued through the said Court for recovery of certain movable property left by his deceased father and in the possession of defendants, who were his step-mother and his half-sisters, on the ground that plaintiff, as the sole heir of his father, was alone entitled to the said property. Defendants pleaded that the suit was barred by section 43, Civil Procedure Code, plaintiff having in May 1891 brought another suit for possession of the house property of his father, held by the defendants, and having omitted to include in it his present claim, the cause of action being the same in both instances. Plaintiff, in his replication, pleaded that he was unaware at the time of the former suit of the existence of the property claimed in the present suit. A preliminary issue was framed on this question, and after the evidence of the parties had been heard, was decided in plaintiff's favour by the District Judge, who thereupon ordered the suit to proceed on the merits. Subsequently, however, an application for review of judgment was entertained, and the previous finding as regards section 43 was reversed, the suit being dismissed. Plaintiff appealed to the Chief Court, and it was contended on his behalf that the application for review was informal and should not have been entertained, and that in any event, the suit was not barred by the said section, inasmuch as (a) the previous claim was for recovery of ancestral immovable property in which plaintiff's right was not derived solely from his father, but accrued to him as a descendant of his remoter ancestors and as a member of the tribe, while the present suit was brought in his capacity as representative of his father alone, and (b) at the time of the previous suit plaintiff was ignorant of the existence of the property now claimed.

Held, that informalities in presenting an application for review of judgment cannot be raked up after the review has been accepted and a decree passed disposing of the suit, and the Court of Appeal is not the proper place to take the objection.

Held further, that the alleged distinction between the causes of action had not been established, and that plaintiff had failed to prove that at the time of the previous suit he was ignorant of the existence of the property now claimed by him.

If a plaintiff can be fixed with knowledge at the time he brought his former suit of circumstances which made it probable that he had another claim arising out of the same cause of action, and which therefore should have put him on enquiry to find out its details, the bar of section 43 of the Code would apply to a subsequent suit by him for the whole or any portion of such a claim. Plaintiffs sued for a declaration of proprietary rights in certain land upon the allegation that defendants were taking advantage of an entry in the Revenue papers to endeavour to oust plaintiffs from the said land. It appeared that the Revenue authorities when making the entry in question more than six years before suit, had included the area in dispute in defendants' estate, but that neither plaintiffs nor defendants were parties to the action of the Revenue authorities. For defendants it was contended that plaintiffs had no cause of action apart from the entry in question, and that the suit having been instituted more than six years after the making of such entry was barred under article 120 of the Limitation Act, 1877.

Held, having regard to the plaintiffs' allegations and the circumstances of the case, that plaintiffs had, with reference to section 42 of the Specific Relief Act, 1877, and section 45 of the Punjab Land Revenue Act, 1887, a cause of action which accrued within the period of limitation and would be entitled to a decree if they prove their allegations. —NATHA SINGH v. SADIQ ALI. 20 P R 1900

3. Plaint, return of, for amendment—Plaintiff claiming two kinds of relief in alternative—Misjoinder—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882*), sections* 45, 53 (f).

Plaintiff claimed to be declared the proprietor of the whole village in suit, or failing that to be declared occupancy tenant. The lower Court ordered the plaint to be returned for amendment by striking out the alternative relief prayed for, on the ground that plaintiff had misjoined two claims, one of which was cognizable by the Civil Court, and the other by a Revenue Court under section 45 (a) of the Punjab Courts Act.

Held, that there was no misjoinder which authorized the return of the plaint for amendment, that the first relief claimed was one which the Civil Court could grant and could therefore adjudicate upon; and the plaint should therefore have been accepted. If, after it had been received, it became necessary to consider whether the second relief could not be granted, for want of jurisdiction in the Civil Court to grant it, the proper course would be to decide to that effect and dismiss the suit. 4. Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), sections 28, 45, 578—Misjoinder—Material error—Plaintiff obtaining right of further appeal by such misjoinder—Proper order to pass on such appeal.

In a suit brought by plaintiffs against two defendants, which united two distinct causes of action in which both the defendants were not jointly interested, and which was therefore not properly cognizable by the original Court with reference to the provisions of sections 28 and 45 of the Civil Procedure Code, it appeared that the objection of misjoinder was taken at the first hearing in the pleas of both defendants, but was not formally disposed of by the original Court, and the suit proceeded to trial on the merits, resulting in a dismissal of the plaintiff's suit, which decree was upheld by the Divisional Judge on the merits, whereupon the plaintiffs lodged a further appeal in the Chief Court. It further appeared that the plaintiffs by illegally combining the two causes of action in one suit, obtained a right of further appeal (owing to the combined claims being in excess of Rs. 500), which they would not otherwise have enjoined under the provisions of section 40 (a) of the Punjab Courts Act, 1884.

Held that, under the above circumstances, the provisions of section 578, Civil Procedure Code, did not cover the initial mistake of permitting such a misjoinder as is above described.

Held further, that the right order to pass on plaintiffs' appeal was, without entering into the merits of the claim, to direct the Court of first instance to require the plaintiffs to amend their plaint by striking out one of the two causes of action illegally joined together, and thereafter to dispose of the amended plaint in accordance with law. Kahna v. Dyal Singh (126 P. The creditor of two Muhammadans, father and son, sued in one case to enforce two bonds of different dates and by different executants on the ground that the obligors formed a joint family and were as such liable on each bond.

Held, that the plaintiff could not join the two causes of action and must elect which of the bonds he would proceed against in the present case.

The bond on which the plaintiffs elected to proceed provided as follows: "that the " obligors owed obligee Rs. 396 cash and " 443 maunds of wheat; that the cash would " be paid on a certain date without interest; " that in default interest would be paid at " the rate of 2 annas per cent. per six " months; that as regards grain, $1\frac{1}{2}$ times as much grain would be delivered on a certain " other date, and in default obligors would " go on paying $1\frac{1}{2}$ times as much of the " amount due for each year, year by year." In other words, the agreement was to pay the money with simple interest at 25 per cent. per annum and to pay compound interest on the grain at the rate of 50 per cent. per annum.

It was contended for the defendant that (i) the interest agreed upon should be treated as a penalty, and (ii) the agreement should not be enforced, having been obtained by the exercise of undue influence.

Held, (i) that the interest agreed upon could not be looked upon as a penalty, as it was payable not on the breach of the agreement but in pursuance of the contract on the occurrence of a certain contingency; (ii) that the defendants had failed to prove that they reposed confidence in the plaintiff, or that the latter had any real or apparent authority over them and had obtained an undue advantage by the exercise of this confidence or authority, or that any of the circumstances existed from which undue influence as defined in section 16 of the Contract Act could be presumed. From the mere circumstance that a man has made a bad bargain, it does not follow that this was due to abuse of confidence or authority; (iii) that as the rule as to undue influence in contracts has been fixed by statute for this country, the statutory rule should be followed, although it is less flexible and does not permit the much wider discretion enjoyed by the Courts in England. *I. The widow and the daughter of a deceased proprietor sued his son, the legal heir of another widow, and a number of alienees who had purchased distinct and separate properties from the son, for their shares in the property of the deceased. The defendants pleaded inter alia that the cause of action as against each group of defendants who held separate properties was different, and consequently there was a misjoinder of causes of action.

Held, that there had been no misjoinder. Plaintiff's cause of action was the refusal by the sons to recognise their right to share in the family property. To enforce this, the son and his alienees were rightly sued together in order to obtain a decision on the whole dispute. CHUHAR MAL v. MUSSAMMAT BAKHTWADDI. 149 P R 1890

The building by each defendant was his separate and independent act. Held, on further appeal (the objection was taken in the Court of first instance), that the suit was bad for misjoinder.

8. Causes of action, joinder of—Suit to cancel bonds executed in favour of separate parties in respect of the same transaction—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, sections 28, 45—Evidence Act, 1872, section 92.

Plaintiffs sued upon the allegations that their father, who was insane, was entitled to a share in certain property in the possession of a third party; that they had no means whereby to institute a suit in connection with the said claim; that an agreement was entered into between plaintiffs and defendants Nos. 1 and 2, by which the latter stipulated to supply all the money needed for conducting all proceedings, civil and criminal, in connection with the case, and plaintiffs contracted in consideration thereof, to give defendants Nos. 1 and 2 a one-fourth share of whatever should be decreed, together with all expenses incurred by the defendants in the litigation; that a formal deed embodying all the terms of the said agreement was executed by plaintiffs in favour of the defendants on the 1st October 1884; that on the said day defendants Nos. 1 and 2 by way of further security, caused plaintiffs to write two bonds, one for Rs. 8,000 in favour of themselves, and another for Rs. 7,000 in favour of defendants Nos. 3 and 4; that, except as stated above, plaintiff had received no consideration for the said bonds; that a criminal complaint was filed in connection with the case by plaintiff, but had proved unsuccessful, and that defendants Nos. 1 and 2 had by formal notice, demanded payment of the first bond, plaintiffs, therefore, prayed that the two bonds might be declared void and delivered up from defendants' custody, and cancelled. Defendants pleaded (inter alia) that the plaint was bad for misjoinder of causes of action as well as of parties and while admitting the bonds, denied the agreement. The lower Court held that the plaint was bad for misjoinder and directed its amendment by striking out one set of defendants and the prayer for relief in respect of the bond in their favour. Plaintiffs appealed to the Chief Court.

Held, that the order of the lower Court must be set aside. As plaintiffs put their claim their cause of action was a single one, and they were bound to sue for the whole relief arising in respect of it, and as there was no question of joinder of causes of action, section 45 of the Civil Procedure Code had no application. And as the cause of action to claim the relief sought in respect of the two bonds was a single one, plaintiffs were not precluded from bringing a single suit merely because some of the defendants were not interested in the entire subject-matter of the suit.

As regards the contention on behalf of defendants that section 92 of the Evidence Act precluded plaintiffs from asserting that any of the defendants other than those whose names appeared thereon, were interested in either of the bonds, held, that the said section only prevents a variance orcontradiction of the terms of a contract by oral evidence and did not preclude plaintiffs from giving evidence to prove that defendants Nos. 1 and 2 caused the second bond to be drawn up in favour of defendants Nos. 3 and 4 as part of the security to be given by plaintiffs to themselves. 9. Misjoinder of parties and causes of action—" Cause of action "—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, sections 45, 283, 295.

Plaintiffs sued on the allegations that one H. K., Mess Khansama of a certain regiment in 1891-92, had dealings with them, and used to take loans from them on the distinct understanding that plaintiffs would have the first charge for their advances on all monies due to him from the Mess, and be entitled to recover the latter direct from the Mess President every month and repay themselves; that this agreement, which was at first oral and was acted on from September to December 1891, was reduced into writing on 7th January 1892; that for January 1892 Rs. 665 were due by the Mess to H. K.; that defendants Nos. 1—8 got the said sum attached by the Cantonment Small Cause Court in execution of their decrees against H. K. on various dates; that plaintiffs filed objections to the attachments on the ground of their prior right to the money; that the said objections were all rejected, and that the Court had ordered the money to be rateably distributed among defendants Nos. 1—8. Plaintiffs therefore prayed for a decree for Rs. 665 against all the defendants. The defendants pleaded, inter alia, (i) that the suit was bad for misjoinder of causes of action and parties; (ii) that there was no cause of action as plaintiffs were no parties to the order under section 295, Civil Procedure Code, and as the money had not yet been paid to defendants; (iii) that the alleged agreement between H. K. and plaintiffs was fictitious and without consideration, and in any event, did not create any lien; and (iv) that nothing was due to plaintiffs from H. K. The first Court gave plaintiffs a decree for the full amount claimed against all the defendants, whereupon defendants, Nos. 6 and 7 appealed to the Divisional Judge, who held that the agreement was void for want of consideration: that the suit was bad for misjoinder of defendants and causes of action; that in any event, plaintiffs could only be entitled to a declaration of their right to the money belonging to H. K., and not to a money decree against the other defendants who had not yet received anything under the order of distribution; and, lastly, that the decree could not be a joint one against all the defendants for the whole sum, but, if at all, severally against each defendant to the extent of his share. He, therefore, accepted the appeal and dismissed the whole claim. From this decree plaintiffs appealed to the Chief Court in respect of the whole sum of Rs. 665, but impleaded as respondents only the successful defendants in the lower Appellate Court.

Held, that the suit, if regarded as one under the penultimate clause of section 295, Civil Procedure Code, was bad on the ground that it was instituted before the defendants had realized the money which was the subject of contention, the order for distribution being a mere proceeding in Court to which the plaintiffs were no parties, and which could not affect them unless and until the defendants had realized their shares in pursuance of it and thereby took possession of money to which plaintiffs were properly entitled.

Held further, that the suit, if regarded as one under section 283, Civil Procedure Code, to set aside the attachments ordered by the Small Cause Court at the instance of the defendants and to declare the plaintiffs' right to the money in dispute, was bad for misjoinder, the various attachments having been made by different defendants on different dates for different sums out of Rs. 665, and plaintiffs' objections thereto having been disposed of by separate orders on different dates.

But, held, that the agreement between plaintiffs and H. K. was for good consideration and gave the former a prior right to realize the debt due them out of the money due from the Mess to H. K.

The Court, to avoid further litigation, allowed plaintiffs to amend their plaint by adding a clause setting out the (admitted) realization of their proportionate share by the present respondents and claiming its refund. JHAMAN LAL v. SANT LAL. 43 P R 1897

10. Dissolution of partnership—Jurisdiction of Court—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, section 17 (3) (ii)—Misjoinder of causes of action—No appeal from preliminary decree within fixed period, effect of as regards appeal from final decree—Representative of deceased partner, liability of—Presumption against wrong-doer—Comparison of handwriting by experts.

Plaintiffs instituted a suit in the District Court of Ludhiana for dissolution of partnership, a settlement of accounts and a decree for whatever might be found due to them from defendants, which they stated to be in all probability a sum of Rs. 11,500. They joined as defendants both the remaining partners, and also the representatives of a deceased partner. Defendants pleaded, inter alia, that as the parties were all residents of Jullundur District, the Court had no jurisdiction to entertain the suit, and that there was a misjoinder of causes of action. The suit having been decreed by the District Court, defendants appealed to the Chief Court.

A preliminary objection by plaintiffs to the effect that inasmuch as defendants had not appealed from the preliminary decree of the lower Court within the prescribed period, the appeal from the final decree was barred, having been overruled:

Held, that as the contract of partnership was entered into by the parties at Ludhiana, where balance sheets of accounts were prepared between the parties, and plaintiffs had a share in a shop there which carried on the same business as the firm of the parties, the District Court of Ludhiana had jurisdiction in the suit under section 17 (3) (ii) of the Civil Procedure Code.

Held further, that the defendants, whether they were partners or representatives of partners, were necessary parties to the suit as framed, and that, therefore, there was no misjoinder of causes of action.

A representative of a deceased partner is liable to the extent of the deceased's assets in his hands, and this is ordinarily a matter for inquiry in execution of decree, but there is no absolute impropriety in its being decided prior to decree.

The Chief Court, finding that the deceased partner had previously to his death removed an unknown quantity of partnership property from the shop at Ludhiana, and that he had died a few days thereafter, concluded that his representatives had come into possession of the whole of the property so removed, and further finding that the shop books had come into the hands of the said representatives and were being wilfully withheld by them, held that, in the absence of trustworthy evidence as to the amount of assets in their hands, the defendants were liable to the full extent of the plaintiffs' claim.

Where on the death of the survivor of two widows, all the reversioners fourteen in number, brought a joint suit for possession of property which was alleged to be wrongfully withheld from them by the defendant, and which was admittedly undivided.

Held, that though the rights of the plaintiffs might be divisible and have accrued to them undivided on the death of the said widow, the substance to which those rights attached being undivided, plaintiffs' title and property was still joint, and that they were therefore entitled to jointly sue defendant, whose wrongful holding of possession of the property was the single act which infringed those rights.

Held further, that even if the words "cause of action" were construed in the limited sense of including merely the facts constituting the infringement of the right, but not those constituting the right itself, the plaintiffs were nevertheless entitled to sue jointly, as it was the same wrongful act of the defendant which infringed these rights, whether joint or distinct, in the property in dispute.

It appeared that during the lifetime of the widows the reversioners had brought several suits for declaratory decrees in respect of various alienations effected by the said widows in favour of the present defendant from time to time, but that they had not sued for certain houses which were now included in their claim.

Held, that inasmuch as the reversioners' right to possession of the houses could not accrue during the lifetime of the widows, their suit for possession thereof, on the death of the survivor of the widows, was not barred under section 43 of the Civil Procedure Code. Plaintiff sued on the allegations that the property in suit belonged to one H. S., who died without male issue, plaintiff being his reversionary heir; that on the death of H. S., his widow took possession of the property as a life tenant, and that on the death of H. S.'s widow, on the 20th July 1897, the defendants took possession of the property unlawfully, and though repeatedly asked to give up the property, definitely refused to do so one month before suit. Plaintiff further alleged that if defendants claimed to being in possession in virtue of any deed, such deed was inoperative as against him. The defendants advanced various claims to the property, and two of them raised a plea of misjoinder, which was put in issue and decided against them in the first Court. On the merits the first Court found that plaintiff was entitled to get possession of the land and house, provided that he paid off three mortgages which affected a portion of the land and the thouse, viz., a mortagage of Rs. 300 in favour of one defendant, another of Rs. 99 in favour of a second defendant, and another of Rs. 99 in favour of a third defendant as regards the house. Plaintiff appealed to the Divisional Judge, who held that he was entitled to get the whole of the property without any payment, the mortgages being held to be either fictitious or notfor necessity. Defendants in that appeal took no cross-objections on the point of misjoinder, nor did they appeal against the first Court's finding thereon. On appeal to the Chief Court, one defendant raised the question of misjoinder in the written grounds of appeal, while the other defendants in their appeals did not raise the question in their written grounds.

Held, that there had been no misjoinder of causes of action. Only one cause of action was disclosed in the plaint, the meaning of which was clearly that on the demise of the widow the right to possession of the property vested in the plaintiff, who was entitled to eject certain trespassers, and the fact that the various defendants raised different defences to the plaintiff's allegation, was immaterial.

Held further, that even if there were a misjonder of parties, the defect would be covered by section 31 of the Civil Procedure Code, while section 578 of the Code would preclude the Chief Court from interfering as the merits of the case had not been affected and the objection as to misjoinder had not been taken in the lower Appellate Court. Held, that an order returning a plaint for amendment on the ground that it violated the rules contained in section 44 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1882, is appealable, under section 588 (6).

Plaintiff instituted a suit against one S. M., the husband of defendant No. 1, defendants Nos. 2—5 and the father of defendants Nos. 6 and 7 for partition of a house alleged to be the joint property of all, but on the objection of certain of the defendants his plaint was returned for amendment by including the whole joint property. Subsequently S. M. died, and thereafter plaintiff came into Court alleging that defendant No. 1, S. M.'s widow, had taken possession of her husband's estate, to one-third of which he was entitled as heir, defendants Nos. 2 and 3 being entitled to the remaining two-thirds. He therefore prayed for possession by partition of the share to which he was entitled in the whole estate, including that which had descended to him from S. M.

The lower Court returned the plaint for amendment, on the ground that there was a misjoinder of causes of action, the rule contained in section 44 (b) of the Code having been violated, and the causes of action for the share of S. M.'s property and partition of the original share of the appellant having accrued on different dates.

Held, (i) that appellant was barred neither by rule (b) of section 44 nor by any other rule of law from seeking an adjudication in the suit for partition of his right to a share of the share to which S. M. would have been entitled on partition had he been alive, and (ii) that the date of the cause of action in a suit for partition is, as a rule, fixed arbitrarily, partition being a continuing right which can ordinarily be enforced whenever a co-sharer finds the joint enjoyment irksome, there being no distinction in a suit for partition between claims for a share to which the plaintiff has been entitled for a long time and for a share to which he has only recently become entitled. 14. Civil Procedure Code, 1882, section 43—Suit to include whole claim—Discretion of plaintiff having several causes of action to sue in respect of one only—Subsequent suit in respect of another cause of action not barred.

The defendants had a sister F, on whose marriage they took possession of her share in the property, and mortgaged the whole, including their own joint property to one S. Thereupon the plaintiff No. 1 and the father of plaintiff No. 2 instituted a suit against the present defendants and S, claiming possession of one-third of the property mortgaged on the allegation that they were F.'s reversioners, and in respect of the remaining two-thirds a declaration that the alienation would not affect their reversionary rights, and obtained a decree for the relief sought. Subsequently they instituted the present suit against the two sisters alone for possession of the residue of F.'s land. It was pleaded that the present suit was barred by section 43, Civil Procedure Code, by reason of the previous suit.

Held, that section 43 was not applicable and did not bar the present suit. The fact that a suit embracing the relief sought in the present suit and in the former suit might not have been bad for misjoinder did not necessarily entail that the present suit was barred by reason of the relief claimed not having been included in the former suit, and that although the respondent's right to possession of the shares of F. had accrued when the previous suit was instituted, the immediate cause of action was the execution of the mortgage, and the plaintiffs were entitled to sue separately for relief claimed, which had no connection with the mortgage.

2. Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877), section 43—Lekha mukhi mortgage—Suit for possession under terms of mortgage-deed—Subseqeunt suit to recover mortgage debt.

The plaintiff brought the present suit to recover the sum allged to be due under a mortgage of certain land, the plaint also containing a prayer that the amount found to be due should be decreed against the mortgaged property. The mortgage was a usufructuary one of the kind known as lekha mukhi, and the deed was executed on the 28th May 1861, and was duly registered. It appeared that previous to this suit, the mortgagee brought a suit against the representatives of the original mortgagors (the latter being dead) to obtain possession of the mortgaged land, of which he alleged he had had possession till within two years of the suit. The first Court having examined the accounts, and finding that a balance was still due to the mortgagee, considered him clearly entitled to a decree for possession, holding further that it was unnecessary to come to a finding as to the exact amount really due. This decree was reversed in appeal by the Commissioner, who held that plaintiff could not claim possession of the land, but should establish his debt and proceed against the land. From this order the plaintiff made no appeal, but forthwith lodged the present suit to recover Rs. 4,200 alleged to be due under the mortgage contract, and asked that the amount should be decreed against the land.

Held, that the suit was not maintainable, because, assuming that the plaintiff could as an alternative remedy sue for the balance due

The widow of one A. Y. having succeeded to a 5-biswas share in the village, mortgaged this share by way of conditional sale to one S. R., now represented by the defendant. The mortgagee having foreclosed was put into possession of the land under a decree for possession. After the death of the widow, one of the present plaintiffs, brother of A. Y., sued to recover from the mortgagee certain resumed revenue-free grants in the village, which had been settled with the widow, on the ground that this land was not included in the mortgage or in the decree for possession, saying that he would sue separately for the mortgaged land as heir of A. Y. The only issue in this case was whether the land claimed was included in the mortgage and subsequent decree. This issue was decided by the first Court in plaintiff's favour, but the appellate Court (after impleading the plaintiff's nephew the second plaintiff in the present suit, accepted the appeal and dismissed the plaintiff's suit. Meanwhile, and while the above appeal was pending, the two plaintiffs brought the present suit to recover the 5-biswas share from the defendant on the ground that the widow's alienation was only valid for her life and did not bind them as heirs of A. Y.

Held, that the present suit was not barred by section 43 of the Civil Procedure Code, as there had been no splitting of the claim which plaintiff was entitled to make in respect of his cause of action, nor did he in the former suit omit to sue in respect of any portion of his claim.

In considering whether there has been any splitting of the cause of action, it is necessary to look at the object with which the suits were brought, and the issues arising in them. In the present case, though both suits were brought to recover property which the defendant claimed to hold under the widow's conditional sale, the object of the first suit was only to show that the property to which it related was not included in the sale, and no issue as to the validity of the sale was raised by the pleadings. The object of the present suit was to raise the question of the validity of the sale itself, and it must be taken to relate to property distinct from that previously sued for, as, when the suit was brought, the first plaintiff had got a decree in the previous suit that the land then claimed was not included in the conveyance.

Held also, that even if the first plaintiff's claim were barred by section 43, it would be impossible to hold that this bar would affect the second plaintiff, as he was not made a party to the former suit in the Court of first

Defendant set up a title to the land as owner, but this plea was overruled, and a decree passed for the amount of profits found to have been taken by the defendant for the three years previous to suit. Subsequently, plaintiff sued the same defendant for possession of the lands which had been the subject of the former suit, and also for mesne profits for three years intervening between the two suits.

these two villages to the vendee, and accordingly he sued the defendants to obtain possession of the share sold in B., and obtained a decree. Subsequently the same plaintiff brought the present suit to recover possession of the share in K. sold to him by the defendants for Rs. 500.

Held, that the latter suit was not barred by section 43 of the Civil Procedure Code, as the transactions which took place between the parties could not be said really to form only one transaction, but resulted in two separate sales of distinct properties, and therefore the present suit was founded on a cause of action distinct from that on which the former suit was based. Madda Singh v. Bukan Singh (9 of 1881 Civil), distinguished. Where A. and B. are joint owners in joint possession of immovable property (viz., houses) in districts X. and Y., and B. excludes A. from enjoyment of one only of the houses in district X., whereupon A. sues in district X. for partition of all the houses in district X. and gets a decree for one-half, and A. continuing in joint possession with B. of the property in district Y. afterwards demands from B. partition of the property in district Y., and on B.'s refusal sues for it in district Y., held, that there has been no such splitting of claim by A. in the first suit that he cannot maintain the second. Madda Singh v. Bukan Singh (9 of 1881 Civil), distinguished. Plaintiff, against whom a notice of ejectment had been issued by defendant, the recorded proprietor of the land in question, sued for proprietary rights in the said land, and his claim was rejected. Subsequently he brought the present suit to establish his right of occupancy in the same land.

Held, by the Financial Commissioner, that the second suit was barred by the provisions of section 43 of the Civil Procedure Code. JIWAN v. PIR BAKHSH.

9. Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), section 43—Distinct causes of action.

L., H. and S. were three brothers. Plaintiffs, who represented L, were absentees, and in 1882 sued H.'s son, the present defendant, for their one-third share of the estate and got a decree. When that suit was instituted, S. was dead, and the defendant in possession of the whole estate.

VI.—SPLITTING CAUSE OF ACTION—contd.

Held, that a subsequent suit by the plaintiffs to recover one-half of S.'s one-third share of the estate, was barred by the provisions of section 43 of the Code of Civil Procedure, the cause of action in the two suits being identical, viz. the defendant's refusal to acknowledge the plaintiffs' right to enter in 1882, not on a third, but on a half of the estate. Where plaintiff first sued to have it declared that he was the adopted son of one B., and as such entitled to the property belonging to him, which suit was dismissed on the ground that the plaintiff was entitled to further relief, held, that a subsequent suit by the same plaintiff to have his adoption declared, and to have the property which was still joint partitioned, was not barred by reason of section 43 of the Civil Procedure Code, as that section cannot properly be construed to mean that a plaintiff entitled to only one remedy on his cause of action, who by mistake sues for what the Court considers is not the remedy to which he is entitled, will be precluded from subsequently suing for the proper remedy. Mussammat Prab Devi v. Harkishn Das (47 of 1884 Civil), followed. One B, an occupancy tenant, having mortgaged her holding with possession, and the mortgagee having taken possession and held the same without interruption, the proprietors brought a suit against B and the mortgagee, for cancellation of the mortgage and obtained a decree. Subsequently the same plaintiffs sued the same defendants to recover possession of the holding.

Held, that the second suit was barred by section 43, clause 3 of the Civil Procedure Code, the causes of action in the two suits being one and the same. Syad Yar Khan v. Ram Chand (24 of 1882 Civil), Phalla v. Kesar Singh (138 of 1882 Civil), and Malik Fatteh Muhammad v. Administrator-General of Bengal (59 of 1883 Civil), cited. 12. Splitting cause of action—Suit on bond—Suit for interest only—Subsequent suit for principal and interest.

The question for decision was whether a suit on a bond, dated 1883, for principal and interest was maintainable in face of the fact that the plaintiff had brought a previous suit in 1885, in which he sued for interest only. The true construction of the bond was held to be that it created only one obligation, viz., to pay the principal sum with interest at Rs. 25 per cent. payable yearly, and in default of yearly payment, with further interest at the same rate on the yearly interest.

Held that, when the plaintiff brought the former suit, the only cause of action he had was the defendant's breach of his obligation to pay the principal with interest for two years, while the plaintiff only claimed the interest and not the principal, and he could not, therefore, now claim the principal with subsequent interest, the suit being barred by section 43, Civil Procedure Code. H. and D. obtained an ex-parte decree against K. in the Court at Peshawar on the 17th December 1883. In May 1884, application was made and granted for transfer of this decree for execution to the Court at Rawalpindi. The latter Court fixed the 6th of October 1884 for sale of certain property (a house situate on revenue-paying land and the land attached thereto) belonging to the judgment-debtor. On the same date, however, the Court passed an order for stay of execution on an application made by K.'s mother as his guardian, to the effect that K. was a minor, and the decree void in consequence. This order did not reach the sheriff in time, and the sale took place as advertised on the date fixed. On the 22nd December 1884, the sale was confirmed. On the 4th July 1885 the ex-parte decree was set aside on appeal, but the auction-purchaser was no party to this proceeding. On the 7th April 1887, K. instituted two suits simultaneously, the first for a declaration that the sale of the house was void and for possession thereof, and the second, for recovery of certain revenue-paying lands of which, it was alleged, the defendants had taken forcible possession.

The contentions raised on behalf of plaintiff were—

(i) that the decree was void, having been passed against a minor without appointment of a guardian ad litem;

(ii) that there was no lawful attachment; that no notices and warrants had been issued under sections 250, 251, Civil Procedure Code; that no attachment was made on the spot by proclamation, nor had any publication been made at the Court-house or the Collector's Office; that no boundaries had been specified; that no proclamation was issued under section 287, and that no time for sale was notified as provided in section 290 of the Civil Procedure Code; and

VI.—SPLITTING CAUSE OF ACTION—contd.

(iii) that the sale was illegal, having taken place after the order to sell had been withdrawn.

The auction-purchaser contended, on the other hand, that (i) section 43, Civil Procedure Code, barred the one or the other of the two suits; (ii) both suits were barred by article 12 of the Limitation Act; (iii) the auction-purchaser was under no obligation to go behind the decree and to inquire how it had been obtained or whether the sale had been rightly ordered, and (iv) the suits were not maintainable, vide section 312, Civil Procedure Code.

Held, (i) that section 43 did not apply; that even if there were no necessity or justification for bringing two suits, yet as both had been instituted simultaneously, one suit could not be said to have priority over the other in point of time; that there was no relinquishment and no question of a subsequent suit in respect of the portion relinquished.

I. L. R. I All. 650, and W. N. 1888 p. 147, followed in preference to I. L. R. IX Mad. 279.

(ii) that the onus of proving that plaintiff was a minor at the date of the ex-parte decree was on plaintiff, that he had failed to discharge it, and that consequently the decree must be held to be valid and binding;

(iii) that the suits were maintainable; their object was not to attack the sale on account of irregularities in publishing or conducting it, but for defects of such a nature as made the sale void, ab initio, having been made without jurisdiction, and therefore a nullity;

(iv) that the formalities laid down in the Court as preliminary to a valid sale had not been complied with, and that the sale was therefore de facto void; and

(v) that article 12 of the Limitation Act did not apply as the suit was based on the allegation that the so-called sale was no sale at all.

14. Splitting cause of action—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, section 43.

In 1874 plaintiffs, representatives of one out of four branches of a joint family, sued defendants, representatives of two other branches, for partition of joint property and obtained a decree for one-fourth share. K., the representative of the remaining branch, was not made a party to the suit, as his whereabouts were not known; but at partition, which followed in execution of decree, his one-fourth share was reserved in the joint possession of the parties. In 1887 plaintiffs claimed one-third in K.'s one-fourth share. Defendants pleaded that the suit was barred by section 43 of the Civil Procedure Code, inasmuch as K's existence was as problematical in 1874 as in 1887, and the plaintiffs had as good a right to claim partition of his share then as at the date of the later suit. Both the lower Courts concurred in this contention and dismissed the claim. On appeal to the Chief Court, held, that the suit was not barred by section 43 of the Code. The facts entitling plaintiffs to claim a share in K's estate were not known in 1874, and probably did not exist, or if they did exist, could not be advanced with the same certainty as in 1887, and consequently this was not a claim which the plaintiffs were entitled to make in respect of their cause of action in 1874. The proceedings of 1874 contemplated that K. would return and claim his share. SHADI v. GAINDA. 127 P R 1890

15. Execution of decree—Attachment of mortgaged property—Suit by mortgagee under section 283, Civil Procedure Code—Subsequent suit for possession—Splitting cause of action—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, section 43.

Certain mortgaged property was attached in execution of a decree against the mortgagor, he being at the time in possession. The mortgagee intervened unsuccessfully, and then instituted a suit under section 283, Civil Procedure Code.

Held, that he was not bound in that suit to ask for possession, and that a subsequent suit for possession was not barred under section 43 of the Code. GANPAT RAI v. HIRA SINGH. 29 P R 1891

16. Section 43, Civil Procedure Code, 1882—Splitting cause of action.

In 1888 the plaintiff, then a minor, sued the defendant, through M. K., a next friend, for his share of the land left by his grandfather in mauza B. He omitted to sue for other land to which he was equally entitled in mauza K. H., and which also has been taken possession of by the defendant and was still held by him.

Held, that the second suit for the recovery of land in mauza K. H. was barred by section 43 of the Civil Procedure Code, the cause of action in both suits being one and the same, and the Code of Civil Procedure containing no exception in favour of a minor plaintiff suing by his next friend. 3. Immovable property—Covenant for title—Caveat emptor.

Where the purchaser of immovable property knows at the time of purchase that a third party professes to have the proprietary right, he buys the disputed title at his own risk, unless the vendor covenants to the contrary; and if the third party makes good his title and ousts the purchaser or deprives him of the benefit of his bargain, the latter cannot recover the money paid or claim relief from his vendor. The rule of caveat emptor applies to the purchaser of immovable property; and after the transaction is completed the purchaser has no redress for defect of title unless the vendor has covenanted for title. 4. Act X of 1877, section 315—Execution sale—Error in extent of saleable interest of judgment-debtor—Suit against decree-holder for purchase-money—Caveat emptor.

Held, that neither section 315 of Act X of 1877, nor the principle of that section, applies to a purchase in execution of decree where the judgment-debtor has a saleable interest in the property sold, and the only error is as to the extent of such interest.

The maxim of caveat emptor applied as between the auction-purchaser and decree-holder in suit by former against latter for compensation in respect of loss consequent upon such error. BUTA SINGH v. CHATTAR SINGH. 131 P R 1879

5. Sale to plaintiff without notice of former sale—Refund of purchase-money—Caveat emptor—Fraud.

Plaintiff, having been deprived of some land purchased by him, at the suit of one M. who had purchased the same land more than two years before him, sued his vendors to recover the price paid.

Held, that if the vendors sold to the plaintiff, keeping back from him the fact of a former sale, in which one of them took part, this would be a fraud upon the plaintiff which would render the doctrine of caveat emptor inapplicable, and would give the plaintiff an equitable right to recover the money obtained from him by fraud. Hira Nand v. Mahia (90 of 1876 Civil), distinguished. the lessee were fulfilled, proprietary rights in the village would be conferred on him—Power of such lessee to alienate his rights without sanction of Government—sections 20 and 65, Contract Act, 1872.—Caveat emptor.

The village of Rupnagar in the Ferozepur district, the property of Government, was leased on certain conditions to four persons of whom, owing to death and desertion, Hanwanta, son of Peman, alone after a while represented the original lessees. In 1882 the terms of the lease not having been fulfilled, one M. was put in possession as farmer of half the village, the other half, or ten biswas, remaining with H. for a further term of five years conditional upon the unfulfilled terms of the original grant being carried out within that period. In June 1886, H sold to one K. S. for Rs. 8,000 all his rights in a 5-biswas share of the village, and the purchaser was put in possession of the land and began to cultivate it. In November 1886 the Deputy Commissioner passed an order disallowing the above alienation as having been made in contravention of the terms of H.'s lease, and finally, on 29th April 1887, it was resolved that a 10-biswas share of the village should be granted in proprietary right to M., a 5-biswas share to H., and that the remaining 5-biswas share which represented the share alienated to K. S. should be resumed by Government. Early in 1890, at which time K. S. was dispossessed of his rights, lease of the 5-biswas share resumed by Government was granted to one R. R., and in 1891 the present plaintiff, son of K S. (deceased), filed a suit against H. demanding either possession of a 5-biswas share of the village under the terms of the deed of sale, or a refund of the purchase-money, Rs. 8,000. The deed of sale contained no covenant for title by the vendor, and the plaintiff failed to establish his allegation of fraud and misrepresentation against the vendor. The plaintiff, however, contended that there had been a material mistake as to a matter of fact between the parties, and that either the contract was void under section 20 of the Contract Act, 1872, or that there had been a breach thereof for which compensation was due under section 65 of that Act;

Held, (1) that the plaintiff's suit for possession of the 5-biswas share sold to K. S. must fail, because the share in question had been resumed by Government and assigned to a third person who was in possession thereof;

(2) that no material mistake of fact had been proved which would under section 20 of the Contract Act be applicable nor any breach of a contract, nor had a contract become void within the meaning of section 65 of the Act, and that the doctrine of caveat emptor was applicable to the case. There is nothing in the Act to indicate that the natural guardian of the minor, according to the personal law to which he is subject, has a right to be appointed on that ground; but it is left to the discretion of the Court to appoint a fit person from among the relations of the minor, when none has been appointed by will or deed. D., the younger son of H. R. deceased, who claimed a certificate under a will alleged to have been executed by H R., the genuineness and validity of which was disputed by D. R. The Court (Judicial Assistant) refused to take evidence as to the genuineness and validity of the will, and granted a certificate to D. R. as eldest son of H. 5. Act XXVII of 1860, sections 3, 6—Appeal from order granting certificate—Application by mother of deceased for supersession of certificate—Refusal to grant certificate on ground of mother's unchastity.

Held, following Makhan Mal v. Mussammat Prem Kor (No. 76 of 1881, Civil), that no appeal lies from an order of a District Court granting a certificate under section 3 of Act XXVII of 1860.

Such an appeal having been treated by the Chief Court as an application to supersede the certificate granted under section 6 of the Act, but it appearing that the present applicant, whose claim was founded on her being the heir of her son, was unchaste during her son's lifetime, and there was therefore ground for supposing that she might be precluded from inheriting his property, held, that the application to supersede the certificate granted by the District Court should be refused. 4. Legal Practitioners Act, 1879,—sections 13, 14—Champertous agreement between legal practitioner and client—"Grossly improper conduct in discharge of professional duty."

One A. M., a certificated mukhtar, entered into an agreement with certain clients wherein it was stipulated that A. M. should undertake all the expenses up to final appeal connected with a civil case, to be instituted on behalf of his clients in consideration of receiving half the net proceeds of the litigation. The lower Courts holding that A. M. had thereby been guilty of "grossly "improper conduct in the discharge of his "professional duty," within the meaning of section 13 of the Legal Practitioners Act, 1879, suspended him from practice under section 14 of the Act.

The matter having been referred by the Divisional Judge to the Chief Court.

Held, that the mere existence of the relation of pleader and client is sufficient for the instant condemnation, as opposed to public policy, of any agreement for the supply of funds for litigation in consideration of a delivery of a share in the property, in suit on recovery, and that a legal practitioner entering into such an illegal agreement is, for the same reasons as establish the contract to be opposed to public policy, guilty of "grossly improper conduct in the

Held, that an agreement to supply funds to carry on a suit in consideration of having a share of the profits of litigation if recovered whereby practically the whole or much the greater share of the profits was to go to the backer and only a definite small sum to the nominal plaintiff who had also undertaken not to compromise the suit amounted to champerty and was void as contrary to public policy and that under such circumstances the backer was only entitled to recover his actual outlay with reasonable interest.

Plaintiff's suit brought to recover money paid under the following circumstances, dismissed: Money was made over to the Deputy Commissioner on behalf of certain indigent persons whose parents or other relatives had been killed in an accident at the plaintiff's premises. At the removal of the corpses, the Deputy Commissioner in the presence of a large crowd expressed to the plaintiff, to the defective state of whose building the accident was partly attributable, that the sufferers were in very indigent circumstances, and that looking to the plaintiff's means it was proper that he should come to the relief of their families. He at once expressed his readiness so to do. Some of the principal citizens of Amritsar who were then standing round were asked what they thought would be a proper sum for him to give. They then said Rupees 500 for the relations of each person. The Deputy Commissioner, however, expressed his opinion that Rupees 250 would be a more appropriate amount, and accordingly the sum of Rupees 3,000 with Rupees 250 for the police and the medical attendant, was made over to one of the subordinates of the Deputy Commissioner, who had left the place. The Deputy Commissioner immediately after the money had come to his office, commenced a system of relief out of the money. In this way he had disposed of Rupees 300, when he received a telegram requesting him to stop the disbursement, and he shortly afterwards received a letter from the plaintiff's agent requesting the return of the money. He, however, disbursed the rest of the money; whereupon plaintiff sued.

Plaintiff sued defendant for Rs. 1,056, alleged to be due by defendant, on account of principal and interest due on two cheques, one for £35, dated 21st October 1889, and the other for £25, dated 16th November 1889, drawn at Nowshera on Messrs. Cox & Co., of London, on cheque forms bearing impressed stamps of the value of one penny which it was alleged were dishonoured by the drawees on presentation. Plaintiff alleged that the cheques were endorsed with defendant's signature and sought to make defendant liable on the ground that he was an acceptor or drawee in case of need.

Held, that inasmuch as the cheques were for amounts exceeding Rs. 20 in value and were executed in British India after the 1st April 1879, they were by section 5 of the Indian Stamp Act, 1879, chargeable with a duty of one anna, and as they were not duly stamped, they were not admissible in evidence. CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE, 1882—contd.

Appellant obtained decree against the respondents on the 3rd February, 1888, and applied for execution thereof on the 25th October, 1888. A warrant was directed to issue, but on the 27th November, 1888, both parties put in a petition reciting that an arrangement had been made between them, by which the debt was to be paid by instalments, and praying that the sanction of the Court might be given thereto. The proceedings were thereupon ordered to be filed, a separate order of even date being recorded in the proceedings that the property should remain under attachment but not be brought to sale. On the 8th April, 1892, the appellant filed an application in which, after reciting the former arrangement, it was prayed that the respondents might be summoned with a view to recovery of the sum still remaining due, and on the 5th July, 1892, the appellant again applied for execution by attachment of the judgment-debtor's property.

Held, that the order of the 27th November, 1888, was not one falling under section 210 (order XX, rule 11 of the new Code) of the Civil Procedure Code, inasmuch as the application leading to that order did not purport to be under that section, nor was it presented within the period of 6 months prescribed by article 175 of the 2nd schedule of the Limitation Act for the presentation of applications under that section.

Held further, that the said order was one sanctioning "an agreement to give time for the satisfaction of the judgment-debt" within the meaning of the Civil Procedure Code, and that, as the mere sanction by the Court of an agreement under that section does not "alter" the decree, the decree to be executed was the decree, dated the 3rd February, 1888.

Held also, that inasmuch as the applications of the 8th April, 1892, and of the 5th July, 1892, were applications for "execution or to take some steps in aid of "execution," they were applications to which article 179, and not article 178, of the 2nd schedule of the Limitation Act was applicable, and that consequently the decree of the 3rd February 1888 was time-barred.

Plaintiff sued upon two mortgage-deeds, executed on the 19th January, 1890, and the 5th March, 1890, respectively.

In the case of the second mortgage of the consideration money of Rs. 1,800, Rs. 1,000 were on account of principal and Rs. 144 on account of interest on two decrees passed in favour of pliantiff against defendant, and the Divisional Judge, finding that interest was not allowed on one of the said decrees, which was for Rs. 738, and that no sanction of the issuing Court had been given, Held, that the agreement in the mortgage-deed to pay interest was invalid under section 257A of the Civil Procedure Code.

Held, that the section applicable to the case was section 258 (order XXI, rule 2 of the new Code.) inasmuch as the judgment-debt had been adjusted in whole to the satisfaction of the decree-holder, and that though such adjustment had not been certified to the Court whose duty it was to execute the decree, it could be recognized as an adjustment by a Civil Court except in execution. 4. Bond executed in satisfaction of decree — Subsequent suit on bond.

Held, that where the benefit of a decree is given up by the decree-holder and in consideration thereof a bond is given by the judgment-debtor, such bond may be the foundation of a subsequent suit, notwithstanding that the satisfaction of the decree was uncertified by the Court.

Plaintiffs claiming to be interested in the income of a shrine, sued that accounts be taken and explained to them from 1871, and that they be allowed to inspect the strong-room in which the offerings were stored and for partition of such of the offerings as were partible and for their share on partition. The first Court held that they were entitled to have accounts taken from 1888 only and passed orders under order XX, rule 16, of the Code of Civil Procedure, but the Divisional Judge, on appeal, held, that the order of the first Court being an interlocutory order no appeal lay. Plaintiffs preferred a further appeal under a certificate granted by the Divisional Judge to the Chief Court and the defendants amongst other objections urged that the suit being a small cause of value not amounting to Rs. 1,000, no further appeal lay under section 40 (1) (i).

Held, that as section 2 of the Code of Civil Procedure includes an order directng accounts to be taken in the definition of decree, an appeal lay to the Divisional Court, and that the suit as framed being excluded by articles 30 and 31, Schedule II, Act X of 1887, from the jurisdiction of a Court of Small Causes, a further appeal lay under the certificate granted by the Divisional Judge inasmuch as the nature of a suit for an account is not changed merely by reason of a share in the collection being claimed.

1. Section 16—"Dwelling."

The defendant was shown to have left Calcutta, where he resided in a hired dwelling-house, and to have resided in Delhi from 29th September to 26th December, where the action was brought. His wife and children had all along lived in his ancestral house at Delhi.

Held, that these facts proved a "dwelling" in Delhi, sufficient to give the Delhi Courts jurisdiction over the defendant under section 16 of Act V of 1908. TOTA RAM v. RAMJEE DASS. 63 P R 1870

2. Held that temporary absence is consistent with dwelling in a particular place, there being nothing to show an intention of not returning. GUNDA MULL v. MULLA MULL. 17 P R 1871 of an alleged contract made with defendant for the sale to defendant of a house situate in the cantonment of Sialkot for Rs. 6,500.

The defendant objected to the jurisdiction of the Lahore Court.

Held, that the defendant's objection was well founded. The suit as framed was one for the determination of a right to, or interest in, immovable property within the meaning of section 16, clause (d), Civil Procedure Code, 1908, such right or interest being directly and not merely incidentally or collaterally in issue. I. L. R. VI Mad. 344, referred to.

Held, further, that the proviso to section 16, Civil Procedure Code, did not apply, as the immovable property in respect of which relief was sought was not held by, or on behalf of, the defendant at the date of the suit. DIWAN LACHMAN DAS v. W. HASLET. 39 P R 1891

4. Jurisdiction—Sale of a house in foreign territory by a British Insolvency Court—Suit for the recovery of a share of the purchase-money on the ground of co-ownership—Suit for determination of an interest in immovable property.

Held that a suit to follow the purchase-money of a house in a foreign territory, which had been sold by the order of a British Insolvency Court, on the ground that it was not the sole property of the insolvent, and that a certain portion of it belonged to the plaintiff, is a suit "for the determination of any right to or interest in immovable property" within the meaning of section 16, clause (d) of the Code of Civil Procedure, and can only be instituted in a Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the house is situated. 2. Suit for immovable property situate in different districts—Sanction.

Under the Code of Civil Procedure, 1859, in a suit for immovable property situate in several districts, the sanction of a superior Court was requisite to the institution of a suit in one district.

Under the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, section 17, no such sanction is requisite, the plaintiff having an absolute right to institute his suit in any one of such districts within which any portion of the property is situate, without obtaining any sanction. of boundaries laid down by the Settlement authorities—Punjab Courts Act, 1884, section 18.

In a suit by the proprietors of mauza Bharthwali in Muzaffargarh District, for a declaration that certain land awarded to the proprietors of Kachur in the Mooltan District by the Settlement authorities in a boundary dispute belongs to them and should be included within their village, the decree given by the Munsif in the plaintiff's favour was reversed on appeal by the Divisional Judge on the grounds that as by the orders of the Settlement Officers the disputed area at the time of the institution of the suit formed part of the Revenue District of Mooltan, and as the Revenue Officers had complete power to settle the boundaries of districts, and as such orders could not be questioned by a Civil Court, the Munsif of Muzaffargarh acted without jurisdiction.

Held, that the Civil Court had jurisdiction to go into the question of the correctness of the boundaries laid down by the Settlement authorities

Held, also, (1) that the Munsif, having raised the point of jurisdiction himself and decided that he had jurisdiction, substantially complied with the provisions of sub-section (1), section 18 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and (2) that at best the proper place of institution was uncertain, and the objection not having been taken in the first Court, the Divisional Judge should not have allowed it with reference to sub-section (2) of section 18. Combe v. Edwards (*L. Some of the defendants, i. e., the drawer and acceptor and some of the indorsers, contended that the Court had no jurisdiction as the hundi was drawn and payable at Karachi. Held, by the Full Bench, that when a plaintiff sues the drawer, acceptor and subsequent indorsers, the cause of action arises out of the original contract, which in this case was the hundi, and that, that having been made and being payable at Karachi, the Dera Ismail Khan Court had no jurisdiction to hear the suit. Section 22.

Staying proceedings, grounds for—Civil Procedure Code, 1908, section 22—Analogous suit instituted elsewhere—Plaintiff not party thereto.

Plaintiff having obtained permission to sue in formâ pauperis in the Court of the District Judge, Ferozepore, for certain property which he claimed as heir of one B. L., instituted his suit in that Court. Application was thereupon made to the Court under section 22 of the Civil Procedure Code to stay proceedings on the ground that one of the defendants in plaintiff's suit was at the time suing certain of his co-defendants in the Umballa Court for part of the property comprised in plaintiff's claim. It was admitted that plaintiff had not been made (and he was not necessarily) a party to the latter suit. The District Judge granted the application on the grounds that "all the property claimed at Umballa was included in the present suit; that plaintiff though not a party to the Umballa case would probably be made one now, that the Umballa case had been pending some time and much evidence had been taken, and that the points for decision in both cases were the same."

Held, that, as the jurisdiction given by section 22 of the Civil Procedure Code is of an exceptional character to be exercised cautiously and only upon very clear cause shown the sole test under that section being whether "the Court is satisfied that justice is more likely to be done by the suit being instituted in some other Court," and there being no mention of convenience or expediency, the mere fact that the points for decision in both cases might be analogous was not sufficient reason for holding that justice was more likely to be done by compelling the plaintiff to sue in the other Court, especially in view of the facts that plaintiff had not been made a party to the suit at Umballa and that the value of the property claimed by plaintiff at Ferozepore was considerably larger than of that in suit at Umballa. 4 *Calc. Plaintiff instituted a suit for Rs. 234 in the Cantonment Small Cause Court at Rawalpindi, the Judge of which ordinarily exercised powers up to Rs. 500, but which when the present suit was instituted was presided over by a Judge who had no power to hear suits over Rs. 50 in value. Thereupon the District Judge withdrew the case to his own file under section 24 of the Civil Procedure Code, and eventually disposed of it himself.

Held, that the District Judge having decided the case with the powers of a Small Cause Court Judge, his decision was final under the last clause of section 24 of the Code, and not open to appeal. Hulas Rai v. Rehmatullah (No. 95 P. R. 1877), cited. PARSICK v. BUTA MAL. 80 P R 1887

Section 24—concld.

Plaintiffs, money-lenders, residing in the Sialkot Cantonment, instituted a suit for Rs. 159-2-0 in the Cantonment Small Cause Court against defendant, who resided at Ghazipur in the Sialkot tahsil, and alleged that the latter had borrowed Rs. 101-12-0 from them at their place of business within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Cantonment Small Cause Court. The Judge of that Court for the time being having power to hear suits only up to the value of Rs. 50, returned the plaint for presentation to the District Judge, who thereupon sent it to the Munsif of Sialkot for disposal. The suit having been dismissed by the latter, plaintiffs appealed to the District Judge, who held that, as the case had been withdrawn from a Small Cause Court, the Court of the Munsif who tried it must, under section 24, Civil Procedure Code, be deemed to be a Court of Small Causes, and that, therefore, an appeal did not lie. Plaintiffs applied to the Chief Court on the revision side, and contended (i) that the suit was not "withdrawn" by the District Judge from the Court of Small Causes, and (ii) that the suit was cognizable by the Munsif as well as by the Small Cause Court and was, in fact, tried by the former in his capacity as Munsif.

Held, that the suit had been "withdrawn" by the District Judge within the meaning of section 24, Civil Procedure Code.

Held further, that the suit which was admittedly cognizable by the Cantonment Small Cause Court, was under section 16 of the Small Cause Court Act, 1887, not cognizable by the Munsif of Sialkot who had jurisdiction within the local limits of such Court. SAIDHU MAL v. HASSU. 58 P R 1897

Held, that the Judge was bound to wait until the date fixed and not to announce judgment at an earlier date, and that in neglecting to take this course his action was in flagrant violation of the provisions of law, and that, therefore, the judgment was a nullity. A suit was transferred under section 24 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1908, from the Amritsar to the Lahore District. A decree was eventually passed against the whole family estate. On application for execution of the decree certain property was attached and sold, including the immovable property (situate within the Amritsar District) now in dispute. No objections were taken at the time of the execution of the decree, on the ground that the property was not within the limits of the territorial jurisdiction of the Judicial Assistant Commissioner of Lahore to whom the case had been transferred for trial and by whom the decree had been passed. Six years after the sale of the property in dispute one of the judgment-debtors filed the present suit, alleging that the property in question was his separate property and not liable to attachment and had not as a matter of fact been attached, and also that as it was situate in the Amritsar District, the District Judge of Lahore had no jurisdiction to attach it under the decree and even if it was so attached and sold by him, the order being without jurisdiction was a nullity.

Held, that the execution of a decree being only a continuation of the suit, a Court which has passed a decree with jurisdiction to do so can execute that decree itself against immoveable property outside its ordinary territorial jurisdiction.

Held also, that a party professing to be injured in any way by an execution proceeding is not entitled to obtain relief by a separate suit if he has not availed himself of a remedy open to him under section 47, Act XIV of 1882. GURBACHAN SINGH v. RAM SAHAI. 8 P R 1902

9. Decree—Representative.

Held, following the decision of the Privy Council in Chowdry Wahed Ali v. Mussammat Jumaee (11 B. L. R. 149), that where a decree against a person in a representative capacity has been properly passed and proceedings taken under it to obtain execution against the party in his representative character, he should be considered a party to the suit with respect to any question which may arise between him and other parties relating to the execution of the decree, within the meaning of section 47 of the Civil Procedure Code. Munshi Aziz-ud-din v. Mussammat Dulhan Begam. 88 P R 1886

10 And sections 2, 145—Order refusing to grant execution against surety—"Party to the suit"—Decree.

Held, that an order refusing to grant execution under section 253, Civil Procedure Code of 1882, against one who is sought to be charged as having become surety for execution of the decree before such decree was passed, is an order made against a "party to the suit" under section 47 of the Code, and consequently falls under the definition of "decree" contained in section 2 of the Code. Muhammad Sadik v. Haji Ata Muhammad. 104 P R 1883

11. Sub-section (3)—Questions for Court executing decree—"Parties to suit"—Representative—Right to sue.

The decision of the Privy Council in Chowdry Wahed Ali v. Mussammat Jumaee (11 B. L. R. 149), to the effect that "where "a decree has been properly passed and pro-"ceedings taken under it to obtain execution "against a party in a representative character, "there seems to be no good reason for say-"ing he should not be considered a party to "the suit with respect to any question which "may arise between him and the other parties "relating to the execution of the decree" within the meaning of Act XXIII of 1861 section 11 Act V of 1908, section 47 (1), cited and followed.

Held, semble, that the above decision does not go to the length of affirming that a person who is a party to a suit in any character is a party in every other character he may happen to fill: and therefore an objection by a judgment-debtor that, while the decree was against his private property, the thing attached was property which he was holding as a mere trustee or executor or in his capacity of an office-bearer would not fall within section 47 of the Code of 1908 so as to bar a separate suit.

Held further, that where the subsequent suit is no longer between the judgment-debtor claiming in a different capacity against his decree-holder only, but he is suing to eject a stranger to the previous suit who has bought the attached property at the auction, the latter cannot be said to be either a party to the prior suit or the representative of a party, so as to bring the case within the scope of section 47 (3) of the Code. Moreover, if the auction-purchaser could be deemed a representative of either party, it would be of the judgment-debtor whose right and interest he had bought, and the question would therefore be not between the parties to the suit, but between a party and his own alleged representative. Munshi Aziz-ud-din v. Mussammat Dulhan Begam (88 P. R. 1886), referred to. Sodhi Hukam Singh v. Sardar Arjan Singh. 12 P R 1887

12. Questions for Court executing decree—Parties—Representative.

One H. sued and obtained a money decree against the sons and widow of one S., deceased, to be executed against the property of the said S. In execution of this decree, the decree-holder attached certain houses as the property of S., whereupon one of the judgment-debtors objected to the attachment of one house, claiming it as his sole property, acquired from his maternal grandfather. The objection having been allowed, the present suit was brought by H. to set aside the order and declare the house liable to attachment.

Held, that the case fell within the decision of the Privy Council in Chowdry Wahed Ali v Mussammat Jumaee (11 B. L. R. 149), and was not maintainable, inasmuch as the proper mode of seeking relief from the order impugned was by way of appeal.

The question which arose in execution of the plaintiff's decree was "a question arising "between the parties to the suit in which "the decree was passed, and relating to "the execution of the decree," within the meaning of section 47 of the Civil Procedure Code, and did not cease to be such a question either because the objector was a party before decree as the legal representative of a deceased debtor, or because the objector claimed release of the property as belonging to him in his personal and not in his representative capacity. Munshi Aziz-ud-din v. Mussammat Dulhan Begam (88 P. R. 1886), and Sodhi Hukam Singh v. Sardar Arjan Singh (12 P. R. 1887), referred to. Kashi Ram v. Harnam Das. 47 P R 1887

13. And section 50—Questions for Court executing decree—Parties—Representative.

Held (applying the principle laid down by the Privy Council), in Chowdry Wahed Ali v. Mussammat Jumaee (11 B. L. R. 149), that where execution has been properly taken against the representative of a deceased judgment-debtor under section 50 of the Civil Procedure Code, and the said representative has made an objection to the sale of the property attached on the ground that it is ancestral property, the question thus raised is a question arising under section 47 of the Code, and an appeal therefore lies from the decision thereof by the executing Court. Kashi Ram v. Harnam Das (47 P. R. 1887), cited. Ram Chand v. Gholu Shah. 87 P R 1887

14. Parties to suit—Representatives.

Held, that a person claiming to be the representative of a deceased decree-holder for purposes of executing the decree in favour of the heirs, and who has been recognized by the Court as a petitioner, but has not been recognized as the representative of the deceased decree-holder, the Court having refused to permit him to execute the decree, unless and until he has established his representative title in a regular suit, is not a "representative" within the meaning of section 47 (3) of the Civil Procedure Code.

The only legitimate construction of the expression in the above clause "questions "arising between the parties to the suit in "which the decree was passed or their "representatives" is one which restricts it to de facto representatives admitted as such on the record, and neither "parties" nor "representatives" includes persons who claim to be but are not admitted in the record to be parties or representatives, as the case may be. In execution of a decree against the defendant, the present plaintiff attached the defendant's rights and interest under certain deeds of usufructuary mortgage, and at a subsequent sale became the purchaser thereof. The auction-sale, which took place in 1882, was never confirmed by the Court in which the execution proceedings were pending, nor was a certificate of sale granted till 1885, nor did the auction-purchaser obtain possession of the mortgaged property, or ask for the assistance of the Court under order XXI, rule 95, of the Code. But shortly after obtaining his certificate of sale, he filed the present suit asking to be put into possession of the hypothecated land, and to have a clerical error in his certificate corrected.

Held, that the suit was barred by the provisions of section 47 of the Civil Procedure Code. Sodhi Hukam Singh v. Sardar Arjan Singh (12 P. R. 1887), and Kashi Ram v. Harnam Das (47, Ibid.), cited

A. obtained a decree for redemption and possession against B. on the 13th May 1884. The decree directed redemption on payment of Rs. 1,000. A. applied for execution and obtained possession on 14th June 1884. There was further litigation between the parties—appeals and a remand—and the first Court after remand directed that A. should pay Rs. 1,603-12-0 instead of Rs. 1,000. The additional Rs. 603-12-0 were not paid by A. till 17th January 1887. B. claimed from A. the profits of the land from 14th June 1884 to 17th January 1887. A. pleaded that the claim did not lie, being barred by section 47, Civil Procedure Code, and that the plaintiff was not entitled to the profits claimed.

Held, that the question involved in the case was not a question relating to the execution or satisfaction of the decree. The mesne profits claimed not having been dealt with by the previous decree, a separate suit was maintainable for their recovery.

Held further, that the plaintiff was entitled to the profits claimed. Although A. legally obtained possession in execution, it was finally decided that he was not entitled to possession until he paid Rs. 1,603-12-0. Until such payment his possession was wrongful. JAMYAT SINGH v. NIHAL CHAND.

A successful plaintiff in a pre-emption suit paid part of the purchase-money in foreign circle currency notes. The Court in the first instance accepted the notes in payment without any objection, and afterwards allowed the plaintiff two more days to supply currency notes of the Lahore Circle, or other legal tender, which order was complied with.

Held, that the order of the lower Court was correct. Currency notes are money in the ordinary acceptation of the term, although they may be notes of a different Circle from that in which they are tendered. The words "purchase-money" are not defined, and there is nothing either in section 17, Punjab Laws Act, or in order XX, rule 14, Civil Procedure Code, 1908, to put a restricted or technical meaning upon them. 70 P. The amendment of section 244, Civil Procedure Code, 1882, by section 26 of Act VII of 1888, has had the effect of practically doing away with the necessity of resorting to the Court which passed the decree, when the execution of such decree is pending elsewhere, in order to implead the representative of the judgment-debtor if he happens to die while execution is going on. In such a case, the Court executing the decree is enabled by virtue of the said section to implead such representative, and is not debarred from so doing by section 234 of that Code, which is at best imperative only when no execution is pending, but the decree has not been fully realized.

An application for execution of a decree which had been transferred to a Court for execution was consigned to the Record-room by an order in the following terms:—"There "has been no attachment, nor has property "been pointed out on the spot; decree-holder "or his mukhtar not present. Let the file be "sent to the Record-room (lihaza misl dakhil "dafter hoe)." A subsequent application for execution having been made to the same Court and granted, it was objected on appeal that in consequence of the order above set forth the executing Court had become functus officio and could not proceed with the execution without a fresh certificate from the Court which passed the decree.

Held, that the effect of such order was merely that the application "was struck off" the file of the business pending in the Court, but that the case really continued pending in the Court, which was, therefore, competent to proceed with the execution on a fresh application made to it within time.

26. Civil Procedure Code, 1908, section 47, order XXI, rule 15—Application for execution of whole decree by one of several joint decree-holders—Dismissal of application—Appeal.

An application for execution of the whole decree was made, under order XXI, rule 15, of the Civil Procedure Code, by one of four joint decree-holders, but was dismissed by the District Judge on the ground that the decree could not be executed until all the decree-holders joined in the application. It appeared that the judgment-debtor was not summoned to defend the application, but on appeal from the District Judge's order he was impleaded as well as the other co-decree-holders. The Divisional Judge ordered that the execution should proceed on the applicant joining with him such of his co-sharers as were willing to execute the decree jointly with him, and impleading the rest who objected and declined to take out execution, and that the Court should take possession of the entire land decreed, and separate off the shares of applicants from those of the others through the agency of the Collector. The judgment-debtor appealed to the Chief Court and it was contended on his behalf that the order of the District Judge under order XXI, rule 15, of the Code was not appealable, and that, therefore, the order of the Divisional Judge was without jurisdiction and void.

Held, following I. L. R. XVII Mad. 394, that the Divisional Judge had jurisdiction to hear the appeal.

Although, if an application under order XXI, rule 15, of the Code is dismissed without summoning the judgment-debtor or issuing process, and the latter is not made a party to the appeal, the question may be one beyond the province of the appellate Court to adjudicate upon, yet if, as in the present case, the judgment-debtor is impleaded on the appeal, the question then becomes one under section 47 of the Code and an appeal lies.

On the 19th May 1897, Hyat obtained a decree against Saghar Mal, vendee, for pre-emption of certain land and it was ordered that on payment by him of Rs. 2,000 purchase-money by the 28th June 1897, for payment to Saghar Mal, vendee, together with Rs. 29, cost of sale-deed and registration, he should be put in possession of the land, and that, in default of deposit of the said sums, the decree should become void. The decree-holder by mistake, paid into Court only Rs. 2,000 by the 28th June, and on the 1st July the vendee submitted an application urging that the decree had become void in consequence of the failure of the decree-holder to pay in the whole amount specified in the decree. This application having been rejected, the judgment-debtor (vendee) appealed to the Divisional Judge, but his appeal was dismissed on the ground that no appeal lay.

29. Execution proceedings—Jurisdiction of Court to entertain application after full satisfaction of the decree being entered—Procedure—Review—Appeal—Appeal from an order declining to review the previous order.

Section 47 of the Civil Procedure Code does not apply to a Court which has fully executed a decree and has thereby become functus officio, it applies only to a Court executing a decree at the time when an application connected with execution is made; therefore, where a judgment-debtor after the final settlement had been effected and the execution proceedings terminated, full satisfaction of the decree being entered and the execution record being consigned to the Record-room, made an application to the Court for the refund of a certain amount alleged to have been recovered from him by the decree-holder in excess of the sum due under the decree, held, that the only course open to the judgment-debtor was to apply for a review of the order declaring the decree satisfied and striking of the execution proceedings, but that where no objection to jurisdiction had been taken in the Court below and the forum for the application for review was the same as

The pre-emptors then asked the Munsif for the return of their purchase-money as they no longer wished to go on with the purchase, as their decree of pre-emption had been superseded by the declaratory decree. The Munsif without informing the vendee ordered the refund of the money. The vendee appealed to the Divisional Judge who declined to interfere, on the ground that the procedure for paying money into Court in pre-emption cases was not a procedure in execution of a decree, and that he had no jurisdiction to hear an appeal from such an order. Held, that as the effect of the Munsif's order was to deprive the vendee of his money which he was entitled to under a decree of Court, it fell within the scope of

'A' purchased from 'B' the equity of redemption in a certain property which was previously mortgaged with possession to 'C' and then redeemed the mortgage of 'C'. 'D' sued 'A' to enforce his right of pre-emption and got a decree for delivery of possession of equity of redemption, but in execution of his decree he somehow obtained possession of the property in lieu of its equity of redemption. 'A' then filed a regular suit to recover possession of the property as a mortgagee on the ground that 'D' had taken unlawful possession in execution proceedings. Thereupon the defence contended that the suit was barred by the provisions of section 47 of the Civil Procedure Code.

Held, that the suit was not barred under section 47 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The question to be decided in this suit did not relate to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of the original decree within the meaning of that section because the decree in the pre-emption suit has and had no concern with it.

7. Twelve years' old decree—Application when "granted" within the above section—Moneypayable at a "certain date"—Each of several assignees of portions of a decree not entitled to execution separately.

On an application filed in August 1886, for execution of a decree passed in April 1874, it appeared that a previous application by the present applicant, who was an assignee of a part of the decree, was made under section 230 of the Civil Procedure Code of 1882, in October 1883, the object of which was to obtain an order for the distribution of a sum of Rs. 150 which was said to be in the hands of the Nazir, and to have a notice issued to the judgment-debtor to appear and show cause why the decree should not be executed against him. This notice (under order XXI, rule 22) was issued, and eventually the case was heard in the presence of the parties, and the Court having directed the ratable distribution of the Rs. 150 in the hands of the Nazir, left the decree-holders to make any application for further proceedings to recover the balance which they might be advised to take and as no such proceedings were taken, the Court subsequently ordered the case to be consigned to the record-room.

Held, that the application of October 1883 must under the above circumstances be taken to have been "granted" within the meaning of section 230 of the Civil Procedure Code.

The decree in the above case directed the money due under it to be paid annually in two instalments at a specified rate "each harvest," referring apparently to the Fasli harvests of rabi and kharif.

Held, that money payabale as above could not be said to be payable "at a certain date" within the meaning of clause (b) of section 48 of the Civil Procedure Code, and that therefore applying clause (a) of the same section, the present application for execution was barred.

Procedure Code, applied and as twelve years had not elapsed since the date of the decree, the application was within time.

Held, on appeal to the Chief Court, that the law of limitation for applications to execute decrees of mofussil Civil Courts is contained in article 179, Schedule II, Act XV of 1877. Section 48, Civil Procedure Code, does not contain the law of limitation, but fixes a period after which an application for execution, though not barred by the law of limitation, shall not be granted. The Code of Civil Procedure does not restore a right which the law of limitation prevents from being exercised.

Held, also, that section 9, Limitation Act, does not apply to applications but to suits only. BEHARI LAL v. BANESS. 109 P R 1889

9. Delivery of property—Certain date—Construction of decree.

The decree in this case bore date, the 18th August 1873, and was to the following effect: "Decree for Rs. "6,000 principal and interest, and Rs. 315 "costs, with further interest at Re .0-8 per "cent. per month, that is, from date of "decree to date of realization, be made in "favour of plaintiff against defendant. "Mauza Raseen, which is under attachment "by the Government in lieu of Rasadi debts "be made over to plaintiff after release "from attachment (mudai ko bad vaguzasht "supurd kia jawe)".

The decree-holder made applications for execution, from time to time, so as to keep alive the right of execution so far as it is effected by article 179, Schedule II, Limitation Act. It was contended that the present application made on the 6th Decemebr 1887 was barred under section 48, Civil Procedure Code, as a previous application for execution had been made and granted and that 12 years had elapsed from the date of the decree. It was also contended that the decree did not direct the delivery of property and that if it did, no certain date was fixed for delivery.

Held, that the decree was for delivery of property. Section 48 is not restricted to a delivery of the property to the decree-holder as his own property, and does not exclude a delivery of property as mortgaged property.

Held also, that a certain date had been fixed for delivery, as the date could be sufficiently ascertained by reference to a contingent event—i.e., the release from attachment. In certum est quod certum reddi potest. MUHAMMAD AKBAR KHAN v. DWARKA DAS. 159 P R 1889 regularly made at intervals of less than three years. On the 20th August 1878, the decree-holder applied for execution. Notice was issued to the judgment-debtor, who, on the 14th October 1878, proposed an arrangement for payment of the amount of the decree by instalments which was agreed to by the decree-holder and the case struck off. The decree-holder applied for execution under this arrangement on the 9th May 1881, 22nd April 1884, and finally on the 7th August 1886. On notice having been served on him of this last application, the judgment-debtor appeared and contended that the decree could no longer be executed being more than 12 years old, and one application having been made and granted in 1884. He further contended that the arrangement made in 1878 was null and void, having been made without jurisdiction, inasmuch as a provision similar to that contained in section 57 A. did not exist in Act X of 1877, and further that no decree could be altered by consent of parties except by the Court which passed the decree, and then only within six months of the date of the decree, which was not the case here.

Held, that the judgment-debtor could not be allowed to challenge the validity of an arrangement which was brought about by his own action in 1878. Where a Court has a general jurisdiction over the subject-matter of a claim, parties should be held to an agreement made by them that the questions between them should be heard and determined by proceedings contrary to the ordinary cursus curiae: and consequently the decree of 1869, as modified by consent of parties in 1878, was still capable of execution.

The decree in this case provided that Rs. 8,000 was due to the decree-holder; that Rs. 400 should be paid annually on account of interest on this sum, and that in case of default for 2 years, the decree-holder would be competent to recover Rs. 8,000 with interest.

Held, that the decree did not direct payment of Rs. 8,000 to be made at "a certain date," within the meaning of section 48 of the Civil Procedure Code. NIHAL CHAND v. SAFDAR HUSSAIN. 199 P R 1890

14. Execution of decree—Application by representative of deceased decree-holder—Absence of certificate under Act VII of 1889, section 4—Subsequent applications—Civil Procedure Code, 1908, order XXI, rule 10.

Held, that an application by the legal representative of a deceased decree-holder for execution of the decree is nonetheless an application " in accordance with law, " because when it was preferred the applicant had not obtained a certificate as required by Act VII of 1889, section 4, that section merely directing that a Court shall not " proceed " upon the application till the production of the certificate, but not preventing the reception of such application.

Certain subsequent applications held, not barred under section 48 of the Civil Procedure Code, as being applications, not to execute the decree, but to carry on the proceedings initiated by the first application. KUNDAN LAL v. MUSSAMMAT MAKHNI. 27 P R 1894

Held, that the enactment in section 48 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1908, limiting the period during which execution shall be granted of a decree once put in actual execution, is one made for the benefit of the judgment-debtor to protect him from being subject, without limit in point of time, to execution proceedings, and as the said section is in absolute and unqualified terms as regards persons, a minor decree-holder is not exempted from its operation by section 7 of the Limitation Act, 1877.

16. Executian of decree—Limitation—Civil Procedure Code, 1908, section 48, order XXI, rule 11—Limitation Act, 1877, 2*nd schedule, article* 179 (iv).

The decree, of which execution was sought, was passed on the 15th July 1880, and an application for execution by attachment and sale of movable property was made on the 27th October 1882, but as no movable property could be found, the proceedings were infructuous and terminated. Subsequently, on the 18th October 1883, on a fresh application for execution, the judgment-debtor was arrested and imprisoned, and a small sum of money was realised by sale of a document. On the 29th January 1884 an application was made for execution by attachment and sale of immovable property of the judgment-debtor. The executing Court dealt with this application as one for a farm of the property, but the error was amended by the Divisional Court on appeal, and proceedings were protracted until, on the 31st October 1891, the Commissioner of the Division refused to sanction sale of the property. On the 31st October 1892, the decree-holder filed an application, setting forth the refusal of the Commissioner to sanction the said sale and his own fruitless endeavours to realise his decree, and praying that the land be sold or a receiver appointed under order XL, rules 1—3 of the Civil Procedure Code. An order for the appointment of a receiver having been made, the judgment-debtor appealed to the Chief Court, and it was contended on his behalf that execution of the decree was barred under the provisions of section 48 of the Code, and article 179 (iv) of the 2nd Schedule to the Limitation Act, 1877. It was urged that the application of 1892 was "a subsequent application " within the meaning of the said section of the Code.

Held, that the said application was merely a petition to the Court, seized of, and already executing, the decree on the application of 1884, to take a step in aid of the execution on that application, and was, therefore, not barred under section 48 of the Code, which does not apply to applications or petitions asking the Court to give effect to previous petitions still pending.

Held further, that inasmuch as proceedings in execution had been pending ever since 1884, execution was not barred by reason of " steps in aid of execution " not having been taken every three years. BUDHE KHAN v. BIR BAL. 40 P R 1898

17. Civil Procedure Code, 1908, section 48—Execution of decree—Limitation—Execution of twelve years' old decree.

Held, that where an application to execute a decree for the payment of money or delivery of other property has been made within the period of limitation prescribed by section 48, Civil Procedure Code, and granted, and there has been no unreasonable delay in its prosecution by the decree-holder, the latter's right to continue execution will not be barred under the third paragraph of that section if the final completion of the proceedings initiated by such an application cannot be obtained within the period limited by that section.

Where an application for execution of a decree was made on the 11th May 1906 by attachment and sale of moveable property, which was fully attached and sold, but the money was not paid to the decree-holder owing to an appeal filed by the judgment-debtor, nor had the application ever been definitely struck off the file or consigned to the record-room, and other applications were made on the 10th March and 15th June 1908 for attachment and sale of houses not mentioned in the application of 11th May 1906.

Held, that the applications of 1908 were fresh substantive applications and not merely continuations of the former application.

Held also, that it is doubtfull whether it is open to the decree-holder to raise questions of fraud and claim the benefit of the last sentence of section 48, Civil Procedure Code, 1908, for the first time in appeal, and that the mere fact that the judgment-debtor filed an appeal in connection with the execution proceedings in 1906 did not constitute fraud. Section 52.

1. Section 52—Obligation of representative of party to contract—Assets—Liability of representative for waste or misapplication—Decree against representative—Section 37, Act IX of 1872.

By section 37 of Act IX of 1872, "promises bind the representatives of the promisors in case of the death of such promisors before performance, unless a contrary intention appears from the contract." And by section 203, Act VIII of 1859, corresponding to section 52 of the Code of 1908, if a "decree "be against a party as the representative of a "deceased person, and such decree be for "money to be made out of the property of the "deceased person, it may be executed by the "attachment and sale of any such property, "or if no such property can be found, and the "defendant fail to satisfy the Court that he "has duly applied such property of the "deceased as shall be proved to have come "into his possession, the decree may be "executed against the defendant to the extent "of the property not duly applied by him in the "same manner as if the decree had bee against "the defendant personally."

Held, that the legal representative of the deceased, whether the latter were a Hindu or not, was only liable to perform the promise or pay the debts of the deceased to the extent of the property of the deceased received by him.

Held also, that the existence of assets and receipt or possession thereof by the representative must be enquired into before decree, unless a prima facie case of receipt, or right to receive, not denied by the defendant, appeared; and that such case appeared on proof that the defendant was entitled to existing assets without proof that they had come into his actual possession.

Held also, that a decree against the representative, which did not specify that it should be payable out of the assets of the deceased, was an erroneous decree. Madho Dass v. Radha Mal. 65 P R 1874

Held, that a decree-holder is not entitled to execute his decree against the private property of the legal representative of a deceased person merely because the property of the deceased which came into the hands of such representative was not liable to be seized under the Punjab Alienation of Land Act, 1900. Ram Gopal v Harjas. 123 P R 1906

Section 54.

Decree for partition of estate—Partition referred to Collector—Power of Civil Courts to interfere.

Held, that when a decree to which section 54 of the Civil Procedure Code applies is made, and the partition referred to the Collector, the Civil Courts have no further concern with the orders passed by the Revenue Officer who takes up the partition, the proceedings of that officer being subject to appeal and revision under the Land Revenue Act, and the rules made thereunder by the superior Revenue Authorities to whom he is subordinate. 1. Surety, liability of, under section 55 (1), Civil Procedure Code, 1908—Application by judgment-debtor within one month to be declared insolvent—Application returned by Court as defective—Release of surety.

One R. D. having obtained a decree against B. S. and R. S. and having applied for the arrest and imprisonment of B. S. one T. S. offered security under section 55 (1) of the Civil Procedure Code, which was accepted, the condition of the bond being that B. S. should apply within one month under section 344 of the Code of 1882 (repealed) to be adjudicated an insolvent, otherwise the surety undertook to produce B. S. on any date fixed by the Court, or, if he failed to do so, to be responsible for payment of the decree with costs. Within one month B. S. put in an application under section 344 of the Code, but the application was returned by the Court for an alleged defect, and B. S. was ordered to file another application within one week. No further application having been filed and the case having been struck off, B. S. and T. S were summoned to appear on a certain date. T. S. alone appeared on the date fixed, and offered to produce B. S. on a specified date, but as he failed to do this, the Court ordered execution to issue against T. S.'s property. T. S. applied to the Chief Court for revision, and it was

Where a debtor, on being arrested and brought before a Court in execution of a decree expresses his intention to apply to be declared an insolvent, under section 55 (1) of the Civil Procedure Code, the Court must release him on his furnishing security to appear when called upon, and to apply within one month under section 47 of the Code.

Where, however, the debtor did not apply under section 55 (1) on being first brought before the Court, but made such application after proceedings under order XXI, rule 40, had terminated, and it did not appear that he had furnished the requisite security.

Held, that, without holding that an application under section 55 (1) cannot under any circumstances be made after proceedings under order XXI, rule 40, the Court in the present case was not bound to release the petitioner, and that his confinement in jail was not illegal by reason of such application.

Plaintiff obtained a decree against defendant to the effect that certain properties, including the house in dispute, belonged to a certain shrine and that he (plaintiff), as the eldest son of the late mahant, was entitled to succeed thereto, defendant's right of maintenance and residence in the house were never disputed in the suit and were expressly reserved by the decree, but in execution of the decree for costs, the house was attached and sold.

Held, that the defendant, merely as a dependent of the shrine, had no saleable interest in the house, which was waqf and attached to the shrine, and that his interest in the house, which was merely a right of residence and maintenance, personal to himself and inalienable by him, was therefore incapable of attachment.

Held further, that the defendant had sufficient interest in the institution to be able to object as against the mahant that the house as waqf property could not be sold, though the decree was against himself.

Section 60 of the Civil Procedure Code clearly requires as a preliminary condition to attachment that the property sought to be attached should be saleable or that over it, or its profits, the judgment-debtor should have a disposing power which he may exercise for his own benefit. Clause (c).

1. Execution of decree—Attachment of house mortgaged by agriculturist—Liability of such house to attachment.

A decree-holder in execution of his decree against the defendant, an agriculturist, which specified that a house which the defendant had mortgaged as security for the payment of the sum due to the decree-holder, was to be considered as hypothecated for payment of the decree, attached the house in question, which the lower Courts directed to be released as non attachable with reference to the provision of section 60 (c) of the Civil Procedure Code.

Held, that under the circumstances the above clause could not be correctly construed as controlling the operation of the decree. NARAIN DAS v. SHER KHAN 1 P R 1889

2. Attachment in execution—"Agriculturists."

The decree-holder, in execution of his decree for some Rs. 7,000, applied for attachment of certain houses belonging to the judgment-debtor, who, it appeared, was a large owner of land, deriving his income from rents paid by tenants, but not cultivating any land himself. Of the four houses belonging to the judgment-debtor, the largest, in which he himself resided, was exempted by the District Judge from attachment on the ground that the debtor was an agriculturist, but the three other houses were duly attached. Subsequently the debtor applied for their release under section 60 (c), Civil Procedure Code, alleging that house No. 2 was his bythak, in which his servants also lived; that house No. 3 was used for the purpose of stacking fodder and as a residence for his son's tutor; and that in house No. 4 his second wife resided. The District Judge, after enquiry, found these allegations proved, and held that the judgment-debtor as a landowner was an agriculturist within the meaning of the said clause, and that all the houses were entitled to the benefit of that provision of the law. He, therefore, accepted the application and released all the houses from attachment. The decree-holder appealed to the Chief Court.

Held, that the order of the District Judge must be set aside. Clause (c) of section 60 of the Code has the effect of conferring an exceptional exemption or privilege on certain classes of debtors, and of trenching on the ordinary rights of the creditor to realize his money from the property of his debtor, and must therefore receive a strict construction and not be extended to cases to which it does not in terms apply. The word "agriculturist" as therein used denotes a husbandman and a person who carries on and makes his living by tillage, and not a mere owner of land. BAWA. 3. Civil Procedure Code, 1908, section 60—Building site—Building site of houses occupied by agriculturists not liable to attachment and sale in execution of decree.

A having obtained a decree against the representatives of an agriculturist attached the site of their house and contended that under section 60 (c) the materials of houses and other buildings belonging to, and occupied by, agriculturists, are alone exempt from sale; that the judgment-debtors should be allowed to remove the materials, such as bricks, beams and doors, and that the site under the house be sold.

Held, that the house and its materials could not be attached, and that the attachment of the site could not affect the tenant's immunity from the attachment of the materials of the house which constitute the house as it stands.

4. Civil Procedure Code, 1908, section 60—Meaning of—Attachment of an unused khurli.

Held, that the words "belonging to" in section 60, Civil Procedure Code, are not synonymous with the words "occupied by"; the latter words are not a mere repetition, but they qualify the former words. "Occupied by" means "lived in by" or "used for agricultural purposes by," and therefore a khurli, in which the judgment-debtor does not live and which at the time of attachment, was not being used by him for any purpose whatewer, is liable to attachment. In 1862 Government granted a jagir of Rs. 10,000 in perpetuity to one N. Subsequently it was agreed that this amount should be paid by the land revenue of certain villages. On N.'s death the grant was continued to his son A. Money lying in the Government treasury as collections for a particular harvest was attached in execution of a decree against A. Held, having regard to the history and correspondence relating to the grant, that the jagir was a political pension within the meaning of section 11 of the Pensions Act, 1871, and money due on account thereof could not be attached in execution of decree under section 60 (g) of the Civil Procedure Code. The mere fact that the mode of payment was by mutual arrangement converted from cash into an assignment of land revenue did not alter the nature of the grant. Before a Court executing a decree makes an order for issue of process for the attachment of jagir income, it should require some evidence as to the nature of the jagir, as some jagir income may be liable to attachment while other such income may not.

On appeal to the Chief Court (both the lower Courts being of opinion that the pension being a political pension came within the purview of Pensions Act, section 11, and was not liable to attachment). Held, by the majority, that the executing Court could not refuse to attach the jagir income or pension, as the decree is the final adjudication on the liability of the property sought to be charged, and so long as that decree stands the decree-holder has a right to execution. Section 64—concld.

And order XXI, rule 89—Execution of decree, attachment and sale of immovable property in—Private alienation of property after attachment and sale, but prior to confirmation—Confirmation of sale—Title of alienee against the auction purchaser—Suit by the alienee to recover possession from the auction purchaser—Limitation—Limitation Act, 1877, Schedule II, article 12 (a).

In the course of certain execution proceedings the property in dispute was attached, and on the 4th December 1899 sold by auction to defendant subject to confirmation. On 7th March 1900, prior to the confirmation, the judgment-debtor paid into Court the amount of the decree and the sale was set aside and attachment withdrawn. Against that order the defendant (auction purchaser) filed an appeal, which, having been accepted, the sale was confirmed by the order of the appellate Court, dated 22nd May 1900. On 26th August 1901 the plaintiff brought a suit for possession of the property against the auction purchaser, alleging that he had purchased it from the judgment-debtor on 20th February 1900 and that out of the consideration-money paid by him the decree had been paid off. It appeared that no action was taken by the judgment-debtor under order XXI, rule 89, of the Code of Civil Procedure.

Held, that the private sale of the property to the plaintiff while it was under attachment and in fact had been sold subject to confirmation to the defendant, was void by virtue of the prohibition contained in section 64, Civil Procedure Code, as against the defendant, and further the suit having been brought more than one year after the confirmation of the sale was barred by article 12 (a), Schedule II of the Indian Limitation Act.

Benami transaction—Bar to suit against purchaser buying benami*—Suit against the assignee of the certified purchaser on the ground that the plaintiff was the real purchaser.*

Although no suit can be maintained under section 66, Civil Procedure Code, against a certified purchaser at an execution sale on the ground that he has purchased benami for any other person, the protection given by that section being strictly limited to the case of a certified purchaser does not preclude a suit against his assignee or representative ——Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), sections 67, 115—Validity of rules published with Punjab Government Notification No. 1297 S., dated 10*th September* 1885—Sale in execution without sanction required by rules—Such sale void ab initio—Chief Court's power to set aside void sale on revision.

Held, that the rules relating to sales of land in execution of decree, made in modification of former rules on the subject by the Local Government and published in the Local Gazette under Notification No. 1297 S., dated 10th September 1885, were within the competence of the Local Government to make, with the previous sanction of the Governor-General in Council, and must therefore be held to be intra vires of the provisions of section 67 of Act V of 1908.

Held further, that a sale in execution of decree of land paying revenue to Government, made and confirmed without the sanction required by the above rules having been previously obtained, is void ab initio, and may be set aside by the Chief Court under the powers conferred by section 115 of the Code of Civil Procedure. 2. Civil Procedure Code, 1882, sections 67, 68 and 72—Intervention of Collector—Absence of detailed scheme—Sanction of Civil Court—Appeal.

Held, that though it is open to either the decree-holder or the judgment-debtor to appeal to a superior Civil Court from the order of a Civil Court authorising or refusing to authorize the Collector to make an arrangement under section 72 (1) of the Civil Procedure Code, no appeal lies to the superior Civil Court from any order made by the Collector when acting under section 72 (1) of the Civil Procedure Code.

Held further, that there is nothing in section 72 (1) of the Civil Procedure Code or elsewhere in the Code, which requires the Collector to submit a detailed scheme when he makes a representation under that section in order to prevent a sale, and that the Civil Court is competent to give the Collector authority in general terms, as appears

4. Priority—Rateable distribution among rival decree-holders.

Property which a Court has accepted as security for a decree is not liable to attachment by, and to be divided rateably among, rival decree-holders. To hold otherwise would be to render the provisions of the law for stay of execution on giving security illusory; and it is immaterial whether the property in question is offered as security by the judgment-debtor himself, or by a third party. If the property is liable to attachment and distribution under section 73, Civil Procedure Code, in satisfaction of decrees against the judgment-debtor, it would be similarly liable when there were decrees against the surety as a third party.

It is the property, not the person offering it, which the Court accepts as security, and the acceptance thereof by the Court creates a charge on the property, by whomsoever offered, which must take precedence of all subsequent attachments or charges. KANWAR HIRA SINGH v. MASSON. 60 P R 1892

5. Mortgage—Suit for refund of sale-proceeds paid in accordance with order for distribution, under section 73, Civil Procedure Code, 1908—Suit by puisne mortgagee to enforce his lien—Limitation Act, 1877, schedule II, article 13—Doctrine of marshalling.

Defendant was the first mortgagee of two houses under a deed, dated 28th September 1888, for Rs. 195, while plaintiff was the puisne mortgagee of one of the houses for Rs. 150. Plaintiff sued on his deed and obtained a decree for Rs. 155 and costs, to be recovered from the hypothecated house which he got attached in execution. The defendant had a simple money-decree for Rs. 102, and had both houses sold—apparently free of his mortgage lien—by auction for Rs. 315 on the 7th January 1892. Plaintiff tried to assert his claim for part of the sale-proceeds on his mortgage but failed, and on the 9th April 1892, defendant realized the whole amount, crediting Rs. 195 to the mortgage-money due to him and the rest to his money-decree. On the 17th April 1893 plaintiff sued to recover this balance on the ground that his second mortgage gave him a better title to it. Defendant pleaded, inter alia, that the claim was barred under article 13 of the second schedule to the Limitation Act, 1877, inasmuch as the original order of the execution Court rejecting plaintiff's claim to share in the sale-proceeds of the two houses was one under section 73, Civil Procedure Code, and that the present suit was filed more than one year after the date of that order.

Held, that the present suit was not one to set aside an order under section 73 of the Code, but to recover money on the strength of plaintiff's superior title, and that, therefore, article 13 of the Limitation Act was not applicable.

Held further, that plaintiff was entitled, in accordance with the rule of marshalling of mortgages, to insist that defendant should first realize the amount due to him on his own mortgage from the house not mortgaged to plaintiff, and only the deficiency from that mortgaged to him, and that plaintiff's mortgage-deed took precedence as regards the balance over defendant's simple money-decree.

6. Execution of decree—"Assets realized by sale or otherwise in execution of a decree"—Money realized under an ultra vires attachment—Rateable distribution.

Held, that money paid by a judgment-debtor into a Court under an order of attachment which was ultra vires cannot be treated as assets realized by sale or otherwise in execution of a decree within the meaning of section 295, Civil Procedure Code. Such a payment, being a voluntary one made in order to avoid, execution or from a desire to pay a debt due, is not capable of rateable distribution.

Held, that a suit based on a bond executed by the father of the minor defendant, who at the time of the suit was a Ward of Court, is not one to which the provisions of section 80, Civil Procedure Code, are applicable, so as to render it necessary for a previous notice to be served on the Court of Wards, as a preliminary to the plaintiff's right to come into Court. The notice in question was given on the 7th November 1887 and the suit threatened therein instituted on the 10th March 1888. On the 18th June 1888 a decree was given in plaintiff's favour for a portion of his claim on the strength of an admission made by a person who appeared for the defendant. On the 1st October 1888 an application for review of judgment was made on the ground that the admission above referred to was made by an unauthorized person and also on the merits. It was granted and pleas recorded on the merits and issues framed by agreement of counsel on the 5th January 1889. The 22nd April 1889 was fixed for evidence. On this date exception was taken for the first time to the sufficiency of the notice contemplated by section 80 of the Code.

Held, that the objection had been taken too late and ought not to have been allowed after the defendant had pleaded on the merits. SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA v. MAHTAB SINGH.

3. Civil Procedure Code, section 424—Construction of the words " delivered to or left at "—Notice of suit.

Held, that there is nothing in the language of section 80, Civil Procedure Code, 1908, to prohibit the use of the post in delivering or leaving the notice of suit required by that section.

Held also, that the defendant had failed to show that the words "delivered or left" used in the section have acquired a technical meaning or are used in any but their ordinary and popular sense; and that he had similarly failed to show any ground for holding that the Legislature intended to exclude the use of the post.

Held further, that, assuming the plaintiffs case to be founded upon contract and not upon tort, the Collector of the Simla District was the Collector within the meaning of

4. Joint suit by alleged partners in respect of leases made in the names of certain individual members of the alleged partnership—Joint undivided Hindu family—Omission in plaint to specify grounds entitling plaintiffs to sue jointly in respect of such leases—Notice of action—Civil Procedure Code, 1908, section 80—Evidence Act (I of 1872), section 92.

Plaintiffs in their notice of action describe themselves as Toll Bar contractors, Dharmpur, and residents of Simla, and stated that they intended to sue the Secretary of State for India in Council for damages for breach of the terms of three several leases granted to them, and the plaint was in conformity with the said notice. The leases filed purported to be executed as follows :—(1) that for the first year by plaintiff III alone ; (2) that for the second year by plaintiffs I and II alone ; and (3) that for the third year also by plaintiffs I and II alone. The plaint contained no statement of the circumstances which entitled the three plaintiffs to sue jointly for damages in respect of each of the three leases, none of which purported to be granted to all of them but in answer to defendant's first plea that he had contracted, if at all, with plaintiff III alone in respect of the first lease, and with plaintiffs I and II alone in respect of the two other leases, plaintiffs replied that the contract was with all three and all were entitled to sue because "they were then, and still are, members of a trading partnership and also of an undivided Hindu family." Defendant having thereupon rejoined that the notice of action was insufficient, the lower Court framed, inter alia, two preliminary issues,—(i) whether the notice of action was sufficient, and (ii) whether the mere fact that plaintiffs are partners or members of a joint Hindu family suffices in law to include them all in the contract, if any, so as to enable them to sue jointly ?—and, deciding both issues in favour of defendant, dismissed plaintiffs' suit. The plaintiffs appealed to the Chief Court.

Held, that there was no substantial variance in respect of the statement of the cause of action between the notice of action given and the suit brought in pursuance of the notice given, that the notice of action given was sufficient, and that the suit was not liable to dismissal in consequence of such variance as there was.

Held, further that the fact that the lease for the first year was in the name of plaintiff III alone, and the two other leases in the names of plaintiffs I and II alone was not of itself conclusive proof that plaintiffs were not jointly interested therein, and that section 92 of the Evidence Act, 1872, would not debar plaintiffs I and II from proving that they were interested in the first lease, or plaintiff III from proving that he was interested in the two other leases.

CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE, 1908

Held, that, if after trial it should prove that there has been a misjoinder of plaintiffs, it would not by reason of order I, rules 1, 4 (a) of the Civil Procedure Code, be necessarily fatal to the suit. TANI MAHESHA v. SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA.

Held, that the Court of a Judicial Assistant constituted under the powers conferred by section 3 of Act XIV of 1875, and section 9 of Act XVII of 1877, is not subordinate to the Court of the Deputy Commissioner, within the meaning of section 86 Civil Procedure Code.

Held also, that where a certificate of the sanction of Government to a suit being brought against a Sovereign Prince has been granted under section 86 of the Code, the Court is not only at liberty, but bound to consider, when the question is raised, whether the conditions laid down by the section have been fulfilled, under which alone the Legislature has empowered Government to grant such certificate.

The question whether it can be held on certain facts which are undisputed, that a Prince trades within the local limits of the jurisdiction of a Court within the meaning of section 86 of the Code, is a question of construction not of fact, and can be considered by a Court sitting in second appeal.

Section 86—concld.

Held, that the exemption from being sued in the Civil Courts in British India without the sanction of the Governor-General in Council conferred on independent ruling chiefs by section 86, Civil Procedure Code, is a purely personal privilege capable of waiver and does create a defect of jurisdiction in the Courts, and that a defendant who is such a Chief but who does not take the objection at the proper time waives his privilege thereby and cannot raise it for the first time in further appeal in the Chief Court.

Held, that a bequest of money by a Muhammadan testator " bama sarif indulla, " i. e., to be expended on pious purposes at the discretion of the executor, is too vague and indefinite to be pronounced a bequest creating a " trust for public charitable purposes " within the meaning of the above section, upon any interpretation that could properly be put upon the language of that section. The fund bequeathed in the above terms might, according to the view of the Muhammadan lawyers, be legitimately expended upon a variety of purposes, which include, among others, pilgrimage to Mecca, almsgiving, fasting, prayer, purification, and the erection of masjids, the particular objects on which the expenditure is to be made lying within the discretion of the executor. A suit to recover a share of certain offerings which, according to the plaintiffs, was theirs by ancestral right, but which the defendants had appropriated to their own use, held, not to be based on a breach of any trust created for public charitable or religious purposes within the meaning of sections 92, 93 of the Civil Procedure Code. In a suit by a person claiming as the lawful mahant of a shrine for the recovery of possession thereof and of the lands attached thereto, defendant who had been elected Mahant by the worshippers of the shrine, pleaded, inter alia, that Sections 92, 93 of the Code barred the suit.

Held, that sections 92, 93 had no application to such a suit,— that section deals with two classes of cases—(i) where there is an alleged breach of any trust created for public charitable or religious purposes, and (ii) where the direction of the Court is necessary for the administration of any such trust.

On the facts of the case held, that the defendant on whom the onus lay had failed to prove (i) that by general or special custom the worshippers of a shrine were competent to remove a mahant and to appoint his successor ; and (ii) that the plaintiff had acquiesced in his removal. Held, that in this capacity they had a locus standi to challenge certain alienations of property alleged and found to be waqf and attached to the dharmsala, not as self constituted representatives of the body of worshippers, who should have obtained an order under order I, rule 8 (1), Civil Procedure Code, but as persons themselves interested in the preservation of the property

On appeal to the Chief Court, the plea was raised for the first time that the suit must fail by reason of absence of the consent of the Advocate-General under sections 92, 93, Civil Procedure Code.

8. Material irregularity—Revision—Appellate Court reversing decree on point not affecting merits.

It may be a material irregularity and ground for revision, that an Appellate Court, in contravention of the provisions of section 99, Civil Procedure Code, has reversed the decree of a subordinate Court merely by reason of an irregularity not affecting the merits of the case or the jurisdiction of the Court.

No appeal lies from an order granting a review of judgment except in the cases set forth in order XLVII, rules 7 and 9, Civil Procedure Code, 1908.

1. Application for leave to appeal to Privy Council—Order of remand under order XLI, rule 23, Civil Procedure Code—"Final decree."

Held, that an order of remand under order XLI, rule 23, Civil Procedure Code, made in consequence of a finding that a cause of action had been disclosed by the plaintiffs, and directing a trial of the case set up for the plaintiffs on its merits, is not a "final decree" within the meaning of section 109 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Held, where the Chief Court in appeal has confirmed the order of the lower Court, and has taken substantially the same view of the facts, and from the facts as found no substantial question of law arises, leave to appeal to the Privy Council should be refused. Held also, that an appeal may lie to the Privy Council in certain cases from an order passed unnder section 104 and order XLIII, rule 1. On an application for leave to appeal to the Privy Council whereupon question of fact the decision of the Chief Court was concurrent with that of the Court of first instance and upon the facts as found no substantial question of law was involved held, that under the last clause of section 110, Civil Procedure Code, the plaintiff was not entitled to appeal, and therefore leave to appeal should not be given.

1. Security for performance of decree—Execution against surety—Original and appellate decrees.

Held, that section 145 of the Civil Procedure Code is only applicable to cases in which security is given for the performance of a decree in an original suit, that is, of an original as distinguished from an appellate decree, so that the liability of a person who becomes surety for the performance of an appellate decree cannot be enforced summarily in execution of that decree. Held, that a surety who has given security for the due performance of an appellate decree under section 545, Civil Procedure Code, 1882, is not liable under the present law to be proceeded against summarily in execution proceedings by the decree-holder, the latter's remedy against the surety being by regular suit. But cf. SECTION 145 OF THE NEW CODE.

3. And section 55—Release of judgment-debtor on finding surety undertaking that he should apply to be declared an insolvent—Dismissal of application for want of prosecution—Execution of decree against surety—Appeal—Revision.

H. M. became surety under section 55 of the Code of Civil Procedure for a judgment-debtor, and undertook to produce him in Court when called upon, and that he should within one month file an application to be declared an insolvent. The judgment-debtor duly applied to be declared an insolvent, but his application was rejected in default of prosecution after one appearance. The decree-holder thereupon applied for the execution of his decree against the surety, which was refused by the District Judge on the ground that the obligation of the surety was discharged. The decree-holder preferred an appeal to the Chief Court.

Held, that an order refusing an application under section $\frac{145}{253}$ of the Code of Civil Procedure for recovery of the amount decreed from a surety is not appealable, the decree-holder's remedy being by application for revision. LILLO MAL v. HARJI MAL. 72 P R 1902

Civil Procedure Code, Act, V of 1908, section 151, order XXI, rule 29, and order XLI, rule 5—Stay of execution.

H. K. obtained a decree against B. K. in 1907, execution of which was stayed on appeal pending the decision of a counter-case brought by B. K. against H. K.—B. K.'s suit having been dismissed and an appeal preferred to the Chief Court, B. K. asked for stay of execution of H. K.'s decree of 1907, pending hearing of the appeal in her (B. K.'s) case. It was contended on the authority of 41 P. R. 1904 (Guest v. McGregor) that the Court had no power to accede to this prayer.

Held, that since the passing of the new Civil Procedure Code the dictum contained in 41 P. R. 1904 was no longer applicable, and that the order sought for could be made under section 151 of that Code.

Held also, that an Appellate Court has, generally speaking, as full powers as the Original Court and can do, while the appeal is pending, what the Original Court could have done while the suit was pending. SARDARNI BHAGWAN KUAR v. RANI HARNAM KAUR. 82 P R 1910

Section 152.

1. Amendment of decree—Variance between decree and judgment must be patent on the documents—Power of lower Court to amend decree confirmed on appeal by higher Court.

Held, that to justify the exercise of the power to amend a decree under section 152 of the Civil Procedure Code, the variance between the decree and the judgment which is relied upon must be a variance which is patent upon the face of the documents themselves, and does not need the introduction of extraneous evidence to establish it.

Semble :—The mere circumstance that the decree of the first Court has been appealed to a higher Court and confirmed by that Court, would not affect the jurisdiction of the former Court to amend the original decree. KARM BAKHSH v. HAIDAR BAKHSH. 94 P R 1888

2. Order XXI, rule 26—Duty of Court executing decree—Clerical error—Amendment of decree—Stay of execution.

It is not the business of a Court executing a decree to go behind its plain terms and substitute in it particulars, which it may suppose the Court which passed the decree intended to insert, but failed to insert, for the particulars actually inserted.

The proper course, where a decree is found to contain a clerical error, is for the executing Court to stay execution of the decree, under order XXI, rule 36 of the Civil Procedure Code pending an application by the judgment-debtor to the Court which passed the decree to amend it under section 152. CHARAT SINGH v. KHUSHAL SINGH. 78 P R 1889

3. Section 152, decree, amendment of—Decree of Appellate Court confirming decree of District Court—Jurisdiction of District Court to amend original decree.

The decree of a District Court in plaintiff's favour was, on appeal, confirmed by the Chief Court, and subsequently plaintiff applied to the District Court to amend its own decree, on the ground that it was not in accordance with the penultimate paragraphs of its own judgment. The District Judge declined jurisdiction on the ground that the only existing decree in the case was that of the Chief Court, which he was not competent to amend. Plaintiff applied to the Chief Court on the revision side, and contended that when the decree of an Appellate Court merely confirms the decree of the lower Court, that decree is still open to correction by the original Court Held, that the decree of the Appellate Court was the only decree capable of execution and therefore the only decree to be amended if amendment were necessary, and that the District Judge had rightly declined jurisdiction. MUSSAMMAT JOWALA DEVI v. KANWAR SEN. 32 P R 1896

4. Section 152 and order XX, rule 6 decree—Decree not in conformity with judgment—Application by decree-holder to amend decree rejected as time-barred—Duty of Court—Civil Procedure Code, 1908, section 152.

The law of limitation does not apply to applications made to a Court to do acts which it has no discretion to refuse to do. Inasmuch, therefore, as under Civil Procedure Code, the Court is bound of its own motion to amend a decree so as to bring it into conformity with its judgment or to correct errors of omission, it cannot reject as time-barred an application made to it for this purpose by the decree-holder, but it is bound to amend the decree, or if no decree exists, to draw one up in conformity with its judgment. DEVI DAS v. GURDATTA. 12 P R 1897

5. Amendment of decree—Decree not in conformity with judgment—Application by plaintiff to amend decree after it has been upheld by the Chief Court—Jurisdiction.

The District Judge passed a decree in favour of the plaintiff for amount claimed, and further directed that the decree should bear interest at six per cent. from its date up to realization. In the formal decretal order the provision as to future interest was omitted. The defendant appealed to the Chief Court from the decree as it stood which upheld and affirmed the findings of the District Judge. On the application of the plaintiff for amendment of the first Court's decree by the addition of the clause relating to future interest in the operative part of the judgment, held, that the application lies only to the Chief Court and not to the first Court, and that the amendment can only be made by Chief Court. Held, also, that the right to apply for amendment cannot be lost merely because the first Court's decree in its incorrect form had been upheld and confirmed by the Appellate Court. ABDUL KASIM v. PIARE LAL AND OTHERS.

2. Suit for land awarded at partition of whole culturable land of village—Parties—Duty of Appellate Court.

The plaintiff sued eleven defendants for possession of a small corner of gorah land which had been awarded to him at a partition of the whole culturable land of the village.

The Court of first instance impleaded the whole proprietary body as co-defendants.

In his appeal to the Divisional Court, the plaintiff again made the eleven original defendants-respondents.

The Divisional Judge rejected the appeal on the ground (inter alia) that the whole of the proprietary body had not been made respondents.

Held, that the Divisional Judge was not justified in rejecting the appeal for want of parties, there being no reason why the principle of order I, rule 9, Civil Procedure Code, should not be applied, so far as may be, by Appellate Courts. Two courses were open to the Court:

(1) to decide the appeal as between the parties before it, leaving with the plaintiff-appellant the risk of not having brought the other defendants before the Court; or

(2) to have used the power given it by order XLI, rule 20, Civil Procedure Code, if the Court considered it necessary, and to have directed that the other defendants be made respondents.

Held also, that the suit (which was instituted while the Punjab Land Revenue Act, 1871, was in force) was not excluded from the cognizance of the Civil Courts by the provisions of that Act. ALI MIR v. GULAB DIN. 5 P R 1892

3. Civil Procedure Code, 1908, Order I, Rule 9, and section 99—Misjoinder of causes of action—No ground for appeal—Power of Court to refuse to entertain pleas raised too late—Estoppel—Custom—Widow's alienation—Effect of consent of collaterals—Adoption of daughter's son.

Held, that though by strict Hindu Law a daughter's son cannot be adopted, this general rule may be varied by family custom, and often is so varied in the Punjab.

Held also, that the District Court was right in refusing to entertain a new plea challenging the validity of an adoption (the solution of which must be dependent upon evidence), when it was put forward at the very last stage of the hearing after all the evidence was closed.

Held also, that a widow cannot by deed provide for the descent of property (which she has inherited from her husband) after her death, in a line different from that prescribed by law either with or without the consent of reversioners.

CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE, 1908 —contd.

Order I, rule 9—concld.

Held also, that the plaintiffs claiming title from an adopted son are not estopped by reason of their father having signed a sale-deed, as a witness, made by the widow of the adopted son and the latter's mother, in which they claim title derived from the adoptive father and from the collaterals of the adoptive father and not from the adopted son.

Held also, that it is doubtful whether upon the strictest construction to be placed upon the Procedure Code, it can properly be said that there is a misjoinder of causes of action in a suit, when plaintiffs as reversioners sue for a declaration in one suit in regard to several alienations made by widows.

And further, that section 99 of the Code of Civil Procedure has the effect of preventing such a defect of misjoinder from being made a ground of appeal. RUP NARAIN v. MUSSAMMAT GOPAL DEVI. 93 P R 1909 P C

In mutation proceedings in 1903 plaintiffs were recorded as owning 16 shares and defendants 32 shares out of 480 shares in a joint khata. This khata was subsequently split up and a new khata No. 10 formed out of part of it, in which plaintiff was shown as owning one-sixth according to what had gone before. In 1905 plaintiffs themselves applied to the revenue authorities for partition of khata No. 10 without specifying their own shares and partition was duly made and was formally accepted by them, one-sixth share having been allotted to them. On a suit now brought by the plaintiffs in a Civil Court asking one-twelfth share more on the ground that the mutation of 1903 was wrong.

On 30th January 1877 (before the period of limitation had expired) plaintiff instituted his suit in the proper Court at Attari. The plaint was presented (without a power-of-attorney) by plaintiff's daughter-in-law, R., who stated that plaintiff came with her and became extremely ill, that he was lying outside the village and that as the period of limitation was expiring he had sent her on to file it. On the same date the Court directed the plaint to be kept in the office, and R., to bring the plaintiff in person or else a mukhtarnama from him. On 19th February 1877 (after the period of limitation had expired) plaintiff was taken to Court in a doolie and attested a mukhtarnama by which he appointed his nephew J. S. his mukhtar for the purpose of conducting the suit.

Order VII, rule 14.

—And order XI, rule 12—Suit for dissolution of marriage on the ground of wife's adultery—Power to order discovery of documents in the possession of the petitioner.

In a suit for dissolution of marriage on the ground of the wife's adultery, the co-respondent served the petitioner with an order under order VII, rule 14, of the Civil Procedure Code, to file a list of all documents relied upon by him in support of his suit. The petitioner objected to the application on the ground that until issues had been framed or until the defence had been filed he did not know what documents might be relevant.

Held, that the petitioner was bound under order VII, rule 14, of the Civil Procedure Code, to file a list of all letters and documents in his possession or power which he relied on, relating to the adultery charged. C. v. C. and B. 11 P R 1902

5. Set-off—Unascertained damages.

Held, that unascertained damages for breach of a contract may be set-off in answer to a claim for money due on that contract so far as it has been fulfilled, order VIII, rule 6, of the Civil Procedure Code, not being intended to be an exhaustive enactment on the law of set-off, or to take away any right of set-off, whether legal or equitable, which parties would have had independently of its provisions. The statutory provisions contained in Civil Procedure Code, Act V of 1908, order VIII, rule 6, are not exhaustive. Order VIII, rule 10.

And order VI, rules 2, 14 and 15—Striking out defence of defendant—Circumstances justifying such an order—Jurisdiction of Court of Political Agent, Bhopal—Jurisdiction of British Court to make decree affecting immovable property out of British India.

In a suit for partition and possession of a one-third share of property, movable and immovable, including cash and choses in action, the Court of first instance, being of opinion that issues could not be properly settled until defendants 1, 2 and 3 produced their books, which the Political Agent of Bhopal reported could not be spared, directed defendant 1 to file a written statement setting forth in detail the entire joint property, movable and immovable, and in the case of trading firms a balance sheet for each showing how they stood on the date of suit.

Defendant 1 failed to comply with this order, although the suit was adjourned from time to time to enable him to do so, and eventually the Court struck the three defendants' defence off the record and directed the plaintiff to produce ex-parte proof against them.

Plaintiff produced evidence accordingly and the Court gave him a decree for—

(a) possession by partition of one-third share of immovable property in the Karnal District, and of the immovable property situate at Sehore (Bhopal State);

(b) certain cash and outstandings; and

(c) rupees 1,95,487-9-5 to be paid by defendants 1, 2 and 3.

Held, that the order striking the defence off the record was not justified by law and that the suit must be remanded.

The statement required by the Court was not one of the nature prescribed by order VI, rule 2, Civil Procedure Code, which is as much as possible to be confined to a simple narrative of the facts, which the party by whom or on whose behalf the written statement is made believes to be material to the case, and which he either admits or believes he will be able to prove. Here, the defendants had put in their defence and the Court did not wish them to supplement it in any way by a further statement of facts which they might believe to be material to their case. Order VIII, rule 10, Civil Procedure Code, therefore, did not justify the order.

Nor was the order justified by order XI, rule 21, Civil Procedure Code. The document called for by the Court was neither in the possession nor in the power of the defendants and was not even in existence. Order XI, rule 14, refers to documents which are in esse and not to documents which the Court desires to be brought into existence. Further here is no power conferred by order XI, rule 21, or elsewhere, to strike out the defence of a defendant of its own motion, and in the absence of an application to that effect by the plaintiff. Cf. 80 P R 1889.

Observations as to the power of the Court to punish defendants for contumacious behaviour and to ensure the speedy disposal of suits.

Held also, that the Court of the Political Agent, Bhopal, whatever its jurisdiction may be, was not one of the nature referred to in section 10, Civil Procedure Code, not being established by the authority of the Governor-General in Council and Bhopal not forming part of British India.

It is essential for every Judicial Officer to acquaint the parties either by an order in Court given in his presence or by notice containing the date and place of hearing. Order IX, rule 4—Proceedings against defendant while a prisoner in jail.

Plaintiff's suit was dismissed under order IX, rule 4, of Act V of 1908, both parties being absent. On application of plaintiff, his suit was brought on the file again. In the meantime defendant had been put in jail; and his father petitioned the Court that proceedings might be stayed till his son's release. The Court ordered "a non-suit until defendant came out of jail," the plaintiff offering no objection to this order. On defendant's release, plaintiff applied to have his case brought on again. Held, that his course was to bring a fresh suit unless precluded by the rules of limitation, and that no deduction could be made from the period of limitation on account of defendant's imprisonment, there being nothing to prevent a prisoner in jail from being served with a summons in a suit against him. The dismissal of a suit in terms of order IX, rule 8, of the Civil Procedure Code, for the plaintiff's non-appearance does not operate in favour of the defendants as res judicata, though it precludes the plaintiff whose suit has been dismissed from bringing a fresh suit in respect of the same cause of action.

A. and B. who were agnates of K. sued K.'s widow for an injunction restraining her from alienating the property of K. in her possession, but the suit was dismissed under order IX, rule 8, of the Civil Procedure Code, on account of the non-appearance of the plaintiffs. The widow afterwards executed a deed of gift to P., who was a stranger to the succession of the fee of K.'s estate, and A. and B. with two other agnates of K. sued the widow and K. for a declaration that the deed of gift did not affect their reversionary rights.

4. Appeal from decree made under section 102—Dismissal for default—Scope of such appeal.

A plaintiff who appeals against a decree made under order IX, rule 8, of the Civil Procedure Code, can only appeal as in the case of a decree made in the presence of both parties, on the ground that the lower Court has erroneously decided some question of law or of fact, or that its procedure has been irregular and not in accordance with law. The plaintiff has no right to impeach such a decree merely on the ground that he had a good excuse for not being present on the date fixed in the lower Court, the proper and the only way in which a decree can be impugned on such ground being by a proceeding under order IX, rule 9, a proceeding under which rule imputes no error to the Court in making the decree, but alleges new matter as a ground why it should be set aside. Plaintiff's suit was dismissed by the first Court under Order IX, rule 8, Civil Procedure Code, and on the following day plaintiff applied for its re-admission, pointing out that he had been present in the Court premises all day, but had gone to the Bar-room to call his pleader, when his case was called on and dismissed for default. The first Court dismissed the application on the ground that no sufficient cause had been shown for the absence, and plaintiff appealed to the Divisional Judge, who, after an inquiry through the first Court, rejected the appeal on the ground that the case had been called on twice, first at 12 o'clock and again at 2 or 2-30 P. M., and plaintiff had only accounted for his absence on the second occasion. Plaintiff applied to the Chief Court for revision of the order of the Divisional Judge, and it was contended on behalf of defendant that an application for revision did not lie, inasmuch as the order dismissing the case for default was appealable to the Divisional Court, and thence to the Chief Court on a certificate. The questions referred to the Full Bench were, (i) whether an order of dismissal for default under Order IX, rule 8, Civil Procedure Code, is appealable as a decree; (ii) whether the word "case" in section 115 of the Code means the whole case in every instance, or whether a definite portion of a case for which a special remedy is provided in the Code, or specific orders in it for which a separate procedure is prescribed, can form the subject of revision under section 115; and (iii) whether plaintiff had shown sufficient cause for his absence.

Held, by the Full Bench, (i) that an order under Order IX, rule 8, of the Code is a decree within the meaning of section 2, and as such, is appealable under section 96 (1); (ii) that the word "case" in section 115 does not necessarily, in every instance, mean the whole case, but may mean a particular branch of a case for which an independent remedy, or a different procedure is provided in the Code, and may include an interlocutory order not falling under section 105 (1); and (iii) that the Divisional Judge committed a material irregularity in not accepting the plaintiff's appeal when he found that plaintiff's absence at the time when his case was dismissed in default had been accounted for, on the ground that plaintiff had not accounted for his absence when the case was first called on. PANDIT RAM KANT v. PANDIT RAJDEO.

7. Deciding case on tour without giving notice to plaintiff of place of hearing—Sufficient cause to restore such suit to the file.

The Collector dismissed the appeal holding that if he was ill he should have arranged to be represented and that the fact that the Court was on tour was no excuse.

Held, that the proceedings of the Collector must be set aside as it was incumbent on the Court to give proper notice of the place of hearing, which omission was sufficient to vitiate the whole subsequent proceedings. Revenue Officers should make programmes of their tour and adhere to them; and if they have to vary their tour they should take timely steps to give the parties fresh notice, and, in the absence of a clear note to this effect, it should be presumed that due notice has not been given.

In a suit instituted by petitioner, the defendant was summoned for and duly appeared on the 11th May 1894, but petitioner himself did not appear. As the claim was denied, petitioner's suit was dismissed by default, and on the 2nd July 1894, petitioner applied for review of judgment, without, however, being able to show that the order attacked was other than the only order which the Court could have passed under the circumstances.

Held, that article 163 of the Second Schedule to the Limitation Act, 1877, applied, and that the application was barred thereunder. NUR MUHAMMAD v. DINA. 15 P R 1897

3. And Order IX, rule 8—Suit dismissed for default—Appeal from order of dismissal.

An application under Order IX, rule 9, of the Civil Procedure Code must be made within thirty days of the date of the order dismissing the suit, and the Courts have no alternative to dismissing the application if not presented within that period, but this does not effect the appeal from the original order dismissing the suit, such an order having the force of a decree. 4. Execution of decree—Attachment—Objections to attachment dismissed for default—Power of Court to restore such application to the file.

reasons given were frivolous. The original case had been fixed for the 4th May at Rawalpindi but as it was thought that the presiding Judge was likely to be transferred about the beginning of June, the plaintiff, with a view to avoid by delay having his case decided by that Judge, sent a telegram to his Pindi Counsel with instructions to secure a postponement. The District Judge finding the plaintiff's absence deliberate dismissed the case under Order XVII, rule 2, Civil Procedure Code. On the 1st June the plaintiff applied under Order IX, rule 9, for restoration of the case, but the District Judge having found that the absence of the plaintiff and his Counsel on the 4th May was intentional, refused to restore the case.

Held, that under the circumstances the plaintiff was not entitled to have the suit restored. His absence was wilful and contumacious and amounted to a refusal to submit himself to the jurisdiction of the Court.

1. Suing defendant in wrong name.

A summons was erroneously addressed to the defendant under the name of Faddy instead of Free. The summons was served upon Free, but he did not appear to answer the suit, and an ex-parte decree was given against him. When execution was applied for, the error was detected.

Per Boulnois, J. (Roberts, J., concurring).—If Lieutenant Free had appeared to the summons and the suit had been decided against him, or the name and description of the defendant in the summons even without his appearance had been so close as to admit of no reasonable doubt, the plaintiff could proceed on this record notwithstanding the misnomer. All he would have to do would be to identify his defendant as the person whom he meant to sue, whom he did actually summon, and against whom in reality, with whatever error of name, the decree was made. But in this case, the name in the summons admits of a doubt as to whether Lieut. Free must have known himself to be the man intended to be summoned. It admits of this doubt apparently, and although such a doubt might be removed on enquiry, as, for instance, if it appeared that he had gone by this alias, yet the circumstances of this case render it likely that the plaintiff could not show that the defendant, although so miscalled, ought to have appeared on the summons. If there was no sufficient summons the proceedings fall to the ground, and no warrant can issue. It is not necessary for the defendant to come in and set aside the proceedings under Orders IX, rules 13, 14, of the Civil Procedure Code. That is a course which might be adopted by a person who appeared on the face of the summons to have been properly summoned, but in fact was not. There can be no doubt that the proper course for the plaintiff in this case is to sue again, as if nothing had been done. In fact, no proceedings, on this view have been taken against Lieut. Free, and no warrant can issue or be executed against him on this record. But care must be taken, in reference to cases like this, to avoid establishing a principle, that every man must necessarily be sued by his right name, for it is only so far as the error may have reasonably led to actual mistake that the proceedings are vitiated; and when the defendant has appeared to the summons, I do not believe that there is any occasion to sue again. was not served. Upon the defendant's non-appearance, the Assistant Commissioner issued the order to carry out execution of the decree. Subsequently, the plaintiff filed and attested a dakhlnama, upon which the proceedings were consigned to the record-room. About a year afterwards, the defendant applied under Order IX, rules 13 and 14, of Act V of 1908, to set aside the ex-parte decree, urging that he had no notice either of the suit or of the execution of decree, and that he was still in possession of the land. Held, that no process for enforcing the judgment had been executed, and consequently the application was not barred by time. On 28th April 1876, C. H. and W. obtained an ex-parte decree against J. K., in execution of which certain shops were attached on 29th June 1876. On 2nd August 1876, J. K. applied under Order XVII, rules 13 and 14, Act V o 1908, to have the ex-parte decree set aside. The process of execution issued under Order XXI, rule 54, Act V of 1908, was informal, because (a) no copy of the prohibitory order was attached to the door of the Court, or other conspicuous part of the Court-house, and (b) the order was not read aloud in any place on or adjacent to the shops sought to be attached.

Held, by Plowden and Elsmie, JJ., that no legal process of execution was executed under Order XXI, rule 54, within 30 days of the application made by J. K. on 2nd August 1876, and therefore, that his application was within time.

Per Pitzpartick and Plowden, JJ.—A Court has no discretion to set aside an ex-parte decree on application made more than 30 days after process for enforcing the decree has been executed, even though it appear that the defendant had, as a matter of fact, not known of the execution till within 30 days before he made his application.

A party insisting upon the provisions of a severe and stringent law, like that relating to ex-parte decisions, is bound to see that every formality is strictly complied with; where this is not done a Court is bound to hold for the purposes of Order IX, rules 13 and 14, Act V of 1908, that no process has been executed. An application was made to revise an order made under Order IX, rule 13, Civil Procedure Code, setting aside an ex-parte decree, such order being made nearly seven years after the date of the decree.

Held, following No. 114, P. R., 1883, that no application under section 115 of the Code would lie. The suit was one in which an appeal would lie, and by the word "case" the whole suit is meant. HASSAN ALI SHAH v. SALIG RAM. 125 P R 1892

8. "Ex-parte decree"—Defendant present at first, but absent at adjourned hearing—Order for case to proceed ex-parte—Application to set aside ex-parte decree—Rejection of such application—Appeal—Civil Procedure Code, 1908, Order IX, rules 5, and 13, Order X, rule 4, Order XI, rule 21, Order XVII, rules 2 and 3.

On the 6th October 1893, one M. L. sued one B. S., for Rs. 5,665-8-6, and on the 21st December defendant put in his pleas by a mukhtar, who appeared and was examined on his behalf. On the 5th January 1894, the Court drew issues and adjourned the hearing to the 18th January, on which date it was ordered that defendant should appear in person to answer certain questions. On the 18th plaintiff appeared with his witnesses, but neither the defendant nor his mukhtar put in an appearance; the Court thereupon ordered that the case should be heard ex-parte, recorded the evidence of plaintiff's witnesses and on the following day passed an ex-parte decree against defendant for the amount claimed. Defendant subsequently applied to the Court under Order IX, rule 13, Civil Procedure Code, to set aside the ex-parte decree, and on the rejection of his application appealed to the Chief Court. It was contended, on behalf of the respondent, that no appeal lay, inasmuch as the order of the 18th January, directing an ex-parte hearing, was made under either Order XVII, rule 3, or Order X, rule 4, or Order XI, rule 21, and that even if it was made under Order XVII, rule 2, the provisions of Order IX, rule 13, of the Code, were not applicable to a decree resulting from an order under that section that the case be disposed of in the manner prescribed by Order IX, rule 6. It was further urged that Order IX, rule 13, does not apply to a case where the defendant has appeared at the first hearing, but has failed to appear at the adjourned hearing.

Held, that inasmuch as the order of the Court directing an ex-parte hearing did not profess to have been passed on the ground of defendant's contumacy, but solely on the ground that he had failed to appear, the section applicable to such order was Order XVII, rule 2.

Held further, that as the Court was competent, under the provisions of Order XVII, rule 2, to proceed ex-parte, and had, as expressly stated, so proceeded, the decree was an ex-parte decree to which Order IX, rule 13, which applies to all cases in which a decree is passed ex-parte, was applicable.

Held, therefore, that the Court rightly entertained the application under Order IX, rule 13, and that an appeal lay from its order rejecting such application on the merits.

When a sum of money is paid into Court under Order IX, rule 13, Civil Procedure Code, in order to be delivered to plaintiffs, should the ex-parte decree be upheld, such sum becomes the decree-holder's money as soon as the ex-parte decree is upheld, and it is not necessary for him to apply for execution of the decree in order to obtain payment of the money.

Where, therefore, in such a case the decree-holder applied for payment of the deposit more than three years after the decree was passed.

which was appealed against to the Chief Court by the plaintiff.

In a suit where the plaintiff on obtaining an ex-parte decree for the major portion of his claim had unsuccessfully appealed to the Divisional Judge and the Chief Court as regards the portion disallowed, the District Judge, on the application of the defendant, after the decision of the Chief Court, re-opened the case under Order IX, rule 13, of the Code of Civil Procedure.

Held, that under Order IX, rule 13, of the Code the only Court which had jurisdiction at the time the application was made was the Chief Court, and that the action of the District Judge in setting aside decree which in point of law was no longer existent at the time was altogether ultra vires and void. 2. And Order XI, rule 21,—Order to produce document—Consequences of failure to obey order—Power of Court to strike out defence of its own motion—Procedure.

There is no power conferred on a Court by Order XI, rule 21, of the Civil Procedure Code, or elsewhere, to strike out the defence of a defendant of its own motion, if the defendant fails to comply with an order made under Order XI, rule 14, to produce a document. Upon such non-compliance a plaintiff may apply under the second clause of Order XI, rule 21, for an order striking out the defence, and on such an application the proper course is to call upon the defendant to show cause why the order prayed for should not be made when he would have an opportunity of explaining the reason for his non-compliance. If no such application is made, there is no power given to the Court to strike out the defence of its own motion, but the defenda t may be liable to a prosecution under section 188, Penal Code, by order of the Court. Plaintiff's plaint was filed in the District Court on the 23rd December 1895, and the 9th February 1896 was fixed for defendant's appearance. The latter appeared on the said date, but the case was put off to the 24th February, on which date defendant filed his defence. After several adjournments, issues were drawn and the parties examined on the 2nd April, and at close of the day's proceedings the District Judge recorded an order to the following effect: "Case for evidence on the 19th and 20th May. Defendant must file the documents he has in his possession and copy of his account-book by 5th April." On all the adjourned dates, except one, defendant was present in person in Court.

On the 2nd April plaintiff had a notice served on defendant for the production of his books and certain letters, and on the 9th April defendant gave plaintiff notice under Order XI, rule 17, of the Civil Procedure Code, offering inspection at a certain place on the 19th. On the 21st April, after inspection by the plaintiff, defendant applied for leave to remove his books to his shop, and on the following day the District Judge gave the required permission. Plaintiff called defendant as his witness for the 19th May, but the notice was returned unserved with the endorsement that defendant had gone away. Thereupon plaintiff's pleader complained that defendant had kept out of the way to evade service, and had not complied with the order of the 2nd April. The Court was, therefore, asked to proceed under Order XI, rule 21, of the Code, by striking out defendant's defence, and to decide the case ex-parte. The Court held that the said order was one under Order XI, rule 14, of the Code, struck out the defence under Order XI, rule 21, and after taking some evidence for the plaintiff, decreed the claim in full. The decree having been upheld by the Divisional Court on appeal, defendant appealed to the Chief Court.

Held, that the lower Courts had erred in treating the order of the 2nd April as one passed under Order XI, rule 14, of the Code, and that the District Court was not justified by defendant's non-compliance with the said order in striking out the defence and deciding the case ex-parte.

Order XI, rule 14, of the Code does not apply to a general direction, without any particular object in view, to a party to produce all documents in his possession by a certain date, and (semble) the order therein referred to is meant to be served on the party to whom it is given and not merely to be verbally announced, so that compliance would depend on his memory or his understanding of it.

Held further, that even if the order in question had been one under Order XI, rule 14, it could not be legally given in respect of the copy of defendant's accounts as they were not in existence, and therefore not in the possession or power of defendant, when it was passed.

Order XI, rule 21, of the Code requires to be worked with caution and should be made use of only as a last resort, and it is always proper to make the order a conditional one

Order XVI, rule 1, Summoning and attendance of witnesses—Discretion of Court.

In a suit for pre-emption where the only question to be decided was that of the price of the subject-matter of the sale, the plaintiff on the day fixed for the hearing applied for coercive process against one of the vendees who had been summoned as a witness for him, but had failed to attend, the Judge observed that as the vendee was the leading man in the district he should not be compelled to appear in Court, and that his evidence would be unnecessary and, after examining one of the vendors and hearing the arguments, recorded an order that the case was closed and that the judgment would be delivered on a certain day.

Held, that the omission to summon the vendee was a substantial error in procedure. Under the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure the plaintiff had the absolute right of summoning any witness he named to give evidence in the Court, and that the Judge had no power to fetter the plaintiff's discretion, and was therefore bound to take coercive measures against the vendee and to give every assistance to the plaintiff for securing the attendance of his witness. Plaintiff was directed by the Court of first instance to produce witnesses on a certain date. On that date both parties failed to appear, and the suit was dismissed under Order XVII, rule 3 of Act V of 1908. Two days afterwards plaintiff applied to have his case restored to the file on the ground that he had attended with his witnesses the day before, and had been prevented from bringing them on the proper date through illness. The Court refused the application. On appeal, the Commissioner omitted to decide the question whether plaintiff had been prevented by any sufficient cause from producing his witnesses on the date fixed. Held, that the Commissioner, by this omission, had erred in law; and held, also that the procedure of the first Court was injudicious and harsh. 2. Order XVII, rule 3. Plaintiff's case disposed of on record on default of defendant before valuation of suit was ascertained.

The property in dispute, ultimately valued at Rupees 1,50,000, was estimated in the plaint at the institution of the suit at Rupees

Order XVII, rules 2 and 3—contd.

90,000. Defendant took objection to this estimate, an issue was framed as to the value of the property, and the valuation was referred to the Executive Engineer under Schedule B, note b, para. 3 of Act XXVI of 1867. The plaintiff closed his case before the report of the Executive Engineer was made to the Court, and a day was fixed for the defendunt to produce her witnesses. On the day appointed the defendant failed to have her witnesses in attendance, and the Court proceeded to decide the case on the record, under Order XVII, rule 3 of Act V of 1908, the report of the Executive Engineer being still wanting. Held, that the record was not complete, as the value of the suit had not been ascertained, and that the Court had, therefore, no power to dispose of the case under Order XVII, rule, 3 reserving the question of the valuation of the suit for a supplementary order as to stamp and costs. MUSSAMMAT UTTUR KOUR v. ATMA SINGH. 20 P R 1870

3. Order XVII, rule 3. Non-attendance of either party—Procedure.

Where a case is partly heard and adjourned, if neither party appear on the day fixed for the adjourned hearing, the Court may order another adjournment to enable the parties to appear: but if the Court do not pass such an order, it must dismiss the suit, under Order IX, rule 3, and Order XVII, rule 2, Civil Procedure Code. It cannot decide the suit on the record, for Order XVII, rule 3, in that case does not apply. SAIN DAS v. MUSSAMMAT RAJJI. 32 P R 1875

4. Failure of plaintiff to appear on date fixed in ordinary course for evidence—Dismissal of suit under Order XVII, rule 3, altered to dismissal under Order XVII, rule 2.

On a date fixed after settlement of issues in a case for the parties to produce their evidence, the plaintiff failed to appear, though the defendant was present. The lower Court therefore dismissed the suit under Order XVII. rule 3 of the Civil Procedure Code, and subsequently rejected an application by plaintiff under Order IX, rule 9 of the Code to have the case restored to the file, on the ground that such application could not be made in respect of a suit dismissed under Order XVII, rule 3.

Held, that the suit should not have been dismissed under Order XVII, rule 3, but for default under Order XVII, rule 2 of the Code, thereby making Order IX, rule 9 applicable, as the case had not been adjourned in favour of either party for the production of evidence or to cause the attendance of witnesses, so that Order XVII, rule 3, had no application to the circumstances of the case. RAM NATH v. MUMRAJ. 139 P R 1884

5. Dismissal of suit under Order XVII, rue 3—Review—New and important matter.

Order XVII, rules 2 and 3—contd.

A suit having been dismissed under section 158, Civil Procedure Code, by reason of the plaintiff having failed to summon witnesses, any application for review was made by the plaintiff on the ground that he had not been allowed an opportunity of producing his evidence. This application was granted and a decree passed after the evidence had been recorded. On appeal the decree was set aside on the ground that the application for review should not have been granted, as no new and important matter or evidence had been discovered. Held, by the Chief Court that ordinarily the proper remedy for a person aggrieved by an order under Order XVII, rule 3 is by way of appeal.

Held further that under the circumstances of the case the first Court had not acted ultra vires in granting the review, inasmuch as the evidence which the plaintiff asked to be taken was new in the sense that it was not already on the record, and it was important. GHULAM JAN v. SHADI KHAN. 126 P R 1889

6. Order dismissing suit—Subsequent suit between same parties.

Res judicata.—On the date fixed for settlement of issues, defendant was not present and an ajournment was necessary under all circumstances as no evidence had been called for, and accordingly an adjournment was made, a date being fixed for the production by plaintiff of a certain deed and for the hearing of the evidence ex parte. On the date specified the deed called for was put in, and a further adjournment was asked for and granted. On the second date fixed for plaintiff to produce his evidence he was not present, but sent a pleader to ask for a further adjournment. This was refused and the suit dismissed. but it was not clearly recorded that the dismissal was under Order XVII, rule 3 of the Civil Procedure Code. A review of judgment having been applied for and refused, plaintiff subsequently instituted the present suit, which was dismissed as barred by reason of the former suit having been dismissed under Order XVII, rule 3 of the Code.

Held, that though it may not be necessary in order to take action under Order XVII, rule 3 of the Code to give specific warning to the party concerned that action under that section will be taken, there must be something on the record to show clearly that the adjournment is one which brings the case within the purview of that section, and also to make it plain that the order itself is one under that section and not under Order XVII, rule 2, and that this was not the case in the present instance.

Order XVII, rule 3 of the Code is a very stringent one, and is only to be applied when the facts do not admit of the application of any other. KALE SHAH v. SHAHABAL SHAH. 80 P R 1899

7. Default of defendant to give evidence—Discretion of Court to pass decree against him—Procedure—Civil Procedure Code, 1908, Order XVII, rule 3.

Held, that mere default by a defendant to attend Court in person, when required for the purpose of examination does not empower a Court to pass judgment against him under Order XVII, rule 3, of the Code of Civil Procedure.

The penal provisions of that section apply only to those cases where a party to a suit expressly obtains time to do certain specified acts and fails to do so. It does not refer to the case of a defendant where the adjournments were apparently being given not at his request but in the interest of the plaintiff.

2. Costs—Appeal—Discretion of Court.

The discretion allowed to the Court under order XX, rule 6 (2), (3), of the Civil Procedure Code, is one which must be judicially exercised.

Where, therefore, the first Court gave plaintiff a decree for the full amount claimed, but ordered payment to be made by instalments, whereupon plaintiff appealed to the Commissioner, who stated that he was of opinion that there was no reason for such instalments, but "under the circumstances of the case" the plaintiff should not be allowed the costs of his appeal, held, on a further appeal by plaintiff, that there was no reason for not allowing him the costs of his appeal to the Commissioner, who had not exercised his discretion judicially in the present case. In a suit to obtain a sum of money alleged to be due from the defendant to the plaintiff, the Court gave judgment for the plaintiff for Rs. 259-8-0, and directed that the amount should be paid in certain specified instal ments, but the decree was for the payment of the money only and was silent as to instalments. In execution of this decree, the decree-holder on an application filed before any instalment was due, obtained an ex-parte order for the sale of a house belonging to the judgment-debtor, and eventually the house was sold for Rs. 250, and the sale confirmed by the Court within the period of 30 days allowed for objections by article 166, schedule II of the Limitation Act. Thereupon the judgment-debtor gave a petition stating that a decree had been given against him payable by instalments, and that before any instalment was due, the decree-holder had caused execution to issue and sold his house, worth Rs. 1,000 for Rs. 250, to his own gomashta, and had committed a fraud upon the Court in executing the decree. He, therefore, prayed to have the sale set aside, the decree-holder applying on the same day for the purchase-money. Eventually the Court accepting the decree as an instalment decree, and admitting that the application for execution was premature, held that the judgment-debtor was not injured by this as he has not as a fact paid the first instalment in time. The Court therefore rejected the judgment-debtor's application to set aside the sale, and ordered the purchase-money to be paid out to the decree-holder.

On an appeal by the judgment-debtor from the last mentioned order, held, that the executing Court had no authority to go behind the decree, which was silent as to instalments, and treat it as an instalment decree, merely because the judgment intended that the decree should be an instalment decree: but that the proper order was for the Court to stay proceedings in the execution under Order XXI, rule 26, Civil Procedure Code, in Order to enable the judgment-debtor to apply to the Court to have the decree brought into conformity with the judgment under Order XX, rule 6, Civil Procedure Code.

Held also, that the Court having decided to treat the decree as an instalment decree and having found as a fact that there was no instalment due when the application for execution was made, should have taken no further step towards carrying on the proceedings without giving the judgment-debtor an opportunity of having these proceedings set aside by superior authority, or by itself setting aside an order which it had made ex-parte, and would not have made if it had been aware at the time that the decree was intended to be an instalment decree, and that the time for payment had not arrived.

Held further, that the Court had erred in not adjudicating upon the question of the fraud alleged, and coming to a finding upon the question of injury, and also in treating the judgment-debtor's application as one to set aside a sale which had been already duly confirmed, whereas in point of fact the confirmation was premature and unauthorized by law. 4. Decree too indefinite to be capable of execution—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), rder XX, Orule 6.

In a suit in which the contending parties were two adjoining villages, and in which the property in dispute was a quantity of land formed by alluvion in front of the north-west boundary of the villages, the Court passed a decree (which was confirmed on appeal) in the following terms:—"Decree "for fixing a boundary between the village A "and village B. concerning the land in dis-"pute, with reference to the frontage "('mahaz') which each village respectively "has. On the subsidence of the floods in the "course of execution of decree the boundary "line will be fixed with reference to the "respective frontage of each village."

Held, that the above decree was not legal in its terms or sufficiently definite to comply with Order XX, rule 6, of the Civil Procedure Code, and was incapable of execution, as no enquiry could be made or evidence taken to explain or make clear the decree in the course of execution proceedings. Appellant obtained a decree against the respondents on the 3rd Februrary 1888, and applied for execution thereof on the 25th October 1888. A warrant was directed to issue, but on the 27th November 1888, both parties put in a petition reciting that an arrangement had been made between them, by which the debt was to be paid by instalments and praying that the sanction of the Court might be given thereto. The proceedings were thereupon ordered to be filed, a separate order of even date being recorded in the proceedings that the property should remain under attachment but not be brought to sale. On the 8th April 1892, the appellant filed an application in which, after reciting the former arrangement, it was prayed that the respondents might be summoned with a view to recovery of the sum still remaining due, and on the 5th July 1892 the appellant again applied for execution by attachment of the judgment-debtor's property.

Held, that the order of the 27th November 1888 was not one falling under Order XX, rule 11, of the Civil Procedure Code, inasmuch as the application leading to that order did not purport to be under that section, nor was it presented within the period of 6 months prescribed by article 175 of the 2nd Schedule of the Limitation Act for the presentation of applications under that section.

Held further, that the said order was one sanctioning "an agreement to give time for satisfaction of the judgment-debt" within the meaning of section 257A. of the Civil Procedure Code, 1882 (repealed), and that as the mere sanction by the Court of an agreement under that section does not "alter" the decree, the decree to be executed was the decree dated the 3rd February 1888.

Held also, that inasmuch as the applications of the 8th April 1892 and of the 15th July 1892 were applications for "execution or to take some step in aid of execution," they were applications to which article 179, and not article 178, of the 2nd Schedule of the Limitation Act was applicable, and that consequently the decree of the 3rd February 1888 was time-barred.

Where in a suit for pre-emption the first Court passed a decree for possession of certain property on payment of Rs. 430, authorising the pre-emptor to deduct Rs. 5-14-0 as costs and it was so paid by the pre-emptor within the time fixed by the Court, but on appeal by the vendee the price was raised to Rs. 512, reversing the order as to costs, but no notice of the exact additional amount payable was given to the pre-emptor, who paid in Rs. 82 (the difference between Rs. 430 and Rs. 512), whereupon the vendee contended that the order of the appellate Court had not been complied with.

Held, following Balmokand v. Pancham [(1888) *I. L. 1. Adjustment of decree not certified—Adjustment not between decree-holder and judgment-debtor.

One B had a decree against Mussammat N in course of execution of which B died, whereupon one Mussammat S. his daughter-in-law, applied to the Court and was entered as decree-holder in his place in 1883. B's widow, Mussammat K, then sued Mussammat S regarding B's estate, and in 1886 succeeded in establishing her title to succession, whereupon she proceeded to claim execution of decree in continuation of the proceedings, which had terminated temporarily in 1883. In the meantime, viz., in 1884, Mussammat K had given to Mussammat N a writing in which she gave up the decree of B against Mussammant N., and on Mussammat K's application for execution in 1886, Mussammat N met her with this document.

Held, that whether or no the document of 1884 was within the terms of order XXI, rule 2, of the Civil Procedure Code as an "adjustment," the adjustment (assuming it to be one) was not between the decree-holder and the judgment-debtor within the meaning of that section, but between the judgment-debtor and a person claiming to be decree-holder, and therefore Order XXI, rule 2, Civil Procedure Code, was no obstacle to Mussammat N using the document to show that Mussammat K was not now entitled to execution of B's decree. A decree-holder died leaving a widow; she did not take out a certificate under the Succession Certificate Act, 1889, but made an assignment in writing of the decree to N. L.

N L. proceeded to attach property of the judgment-debtor, who objected that N. L. had no title to execute the decree on the ground that the widow had not obtained a certificate under the Act of 1889 to collect debts due to her husband.

Held, that the objection was well founded. Assuming that the widow was competent without a certificate to assign the debt, she could only assign effectually what right she herself had. She had not the right to execute the decree unless and until she had applied to the Court under Order XXI, rule 16, Civil Procedure Code, for execution of the decree under a transfer by operation of law from the deceased decree-holder. An application by the widow could not be granted unless she produced a certificate under the Act of 1889, section 4 of the Act prohibiting the Court from acting on an application of the kind without the production of a certificate. D. deposited the Rs. 170 into Court on the 3rd January 1887, but on the 6th July 1887 one J. in execution of a decree against A. D., attached and realized Rs. 103-9-0 out of the said Rs. 170. On the 26th

June 1888 the appeal, which the vendors had preferred to the Divisional Judge, was accepted, whereupon A. D. appealed to the Chief Court, which, after a remand for further inquiry, allowed the appeal and decreed the claim with costs throughout, in favour of A. D., by an order, dated 27th April 1891, and to the following effect: "It is ordered "that the decree of the Divisional Judge, "Sialkot, dated 25th April 1889, be set aside "and a decree be passed to the effect that if "plaintiff deposit Rs. 170, or that portion of "the money which has not already been de-"posited, within two months from this date "he can take possession by pre-emption of "house No. 81, situate in Mauza Ferozewala. "It is further ordered that defendants, vend-"ors, should pay the costs incurred by "plaintiff in all the Courts." It was admitted that A. D. paid nothing into Court subsequently to the said decree, but the judgment-debtors owed him Rs. 134-2-0 for his said costs, and the balance of Rs. 35-14 was more than covered by the sum of Rs. 83-6-6 which the judgment-debtors had recovered from A. D. on account of costs and which they had to refund. On the 28th August 1892, A. D., while reserving to himself the right to redeem the house from mortgage, sold his right to execute the said decree for present possession and costs awarded to one R. R., who thereafter applied for execution of the decree. This application having been refused by the Divisional Judge, on appeal, whose order was confirmed by the Chief Court, R. R., as transferee of the decree, subsequently instituted the present suit for possession of the said house and for a certain sum of money alleged to be due by way of costs. The first Court granted R. R. a decree as prayed for, but the Divisional Judge, on appeal varied the decree by one declaring that assignment of the decree of the Chief Court by A. D. in favour of R. R. was valid and gave R. R. a right to execute the said decree, notwithstanding the order of the execution Court disallowing the said assignment. J. S. and S. D. appealed to the Chief Court, and it was contended on their behalf that (1) the Divisional Judge should not have given plaintiffs the declaration contained in the decree (a) because it was not asked for, and (b) because the relief claimed by plaintiff had been already refused him by the execution Court under section 47 which order was a decree and could not be called in question in a subsequent suit; (2) even if the suit did lie, a decree should not have been passed that plaintiff was entitled to execute the decree of the Chief Court of 27th April 1891, the said decree having lapsed owing to the failure of plaintiff to pay Rs. 170 into Court within the allotted period; and (3) the right to execute the decree for pre-emption could not be assigned.

Held, as to the first contention, that the Divisional Judge, while refusing to give a decree for possession of the house and recovery of the costs incurred by A. D. in the pre-emption suit was entitled to declare that plaintiff had a right to execute the pre-emption decree and further, that inasmuch as R. R. was admittedly the assignee of A. D. the refusal of the execution Court, under Order XXI, rule 16 of the Code, to allow R. R. to execute the decree, was final, and gave R. R. a cause of action against the judgment-debtors which he could enforce by regular suit.

No. 75 P. R., 1890, F. B., cited and followed.

Held, as to the second contention, that, upon the facts as proved, A. D. had duly deposited the Rs. 170 before the 27th April 1889, and that upon that date there remained no portion of the said sum to be deposited.

Held, as to the third contention, that A. D. was entitled to sell his right to execute the decree for costs and present possession of the house, retaining his rights as owner and merely giving the vendor a right to present possession.

Semble: Even if A. D. had transferred the proprietary right in the property to R. R., the latter would have been entitled to execute the decree, such transfer operating a fresh sale of the property and conferring a fresh cause of action upon pre-emptors, which, however, could only be asserted in a regular suit and not in proceedings for execution of the decree so transferred. The decree-holder having, in execution of his decree, attached certain houses belonging to his jugdment-debtors, the latter objected that the attachment could not take place on the ground that they had already been adjudicated insolvents at Bombay, and a vesting order with respect to all their property passed in favour of the Official Assignee. It appeared that the Official Assignee took no steps to obtain possession of the houses before attachment, and that he made no application, either personally or by duly authorized pleader or agent, for their release from attachment. On the date of the application for attachment, however, the judgment-debtors produced, with their petition of objection, a letter from the said Official Assignee to the District Judge in which the latter was informed of the insolvency of the judgment-debtor and was requested to refuse attachment of their property at the instance of the decree-holder or other creditors. Subsequently the Official Assignee addressed another letter to the Judge to the effect that the claims of the Official Assignee under a vesting order were recognized by all Courts in the British Empire, and that in consequence of such order, the judgment-debtors had no salable interest in the property sought to be attached. The first Court, acting on this letter, released the property from attachment, and, on appeal, the Divisional Judge upheld the said order of release. The decree-holder appealed to the Chief Court, but the Official Assignee was no party to the appeal, nor had he been a party in the Divisional Court, where the appeal was lodged against and defended by the judgment-debtors, who alone conducted the objection proceedings in the first Court.

Held, that the order of release from attachment was wrong and must be set aside, the Chief Court having no discretion on an appeal to refuse to pass the order required by law.

When a decree-holder, in execution of his decree, moves the Court in accordance with law to attach property belonging to his judgment-debtor, the Court is ordinarily bound to issue process for attachment, and cannot properly refuse to do so except as provided in Order XXI, rule 24, Civil Procedure Code. The lower Court, therefore, could not refuse to attach merely on an informal letter from the Official Assignee, nor release the property from attachment without a formal application from him.

Held, further, that it was not competent to the judgment-debtors who, as long as the vesting order stood, had no interest whatever in the property, to themselves make the objection either under Order XXI, rule 58 or any other section of the Code or to prefer a claim or make an objection, under Order XXI, rule 58 in the interests of the Official Assignee. 3. And Order XXI, rule 31—Execution of decree—Decree for specific movables or their value—Construction.

The contention on behalf of the judgment-debtor in this case was that the decree was for specific movable property which had not been ascertained and was incapable of execution. The decree provided as follows:—"It is ordered that plaintiff obtain " possession as owner of jewels, clothes, " shawls, trappings, dishes of sorts, cattle " and other goods to the value of Rs. 30,000 " in accordance with his plaint."

Held, that on a proper construction of the decree, read with the judgment, it ordered the defendant to deliver to the plaintiff whatever movable property she had of the kind specified in the list attached to the plaint up to Rs. 30,000 in value, and on default to pay Rs. 30,000 or such portion thereof as should represent the value of the property not delivered ; and that the decree so construed was capable of execution under Order XXI, rule 32, Civil Procedure Code, if not under Order XXI, rule 31. Appellant purchased from one of four Hindu brothers, his share being one-fourth of a dwelling-house in the Civil Lines, Rawalpindi, which had for some years previously been rented for residential purposes by the Political Officer for the time being with Sardar Ayub Khan. It appeared that the appellant wished to occupy the whole house, and purchased the share of his vendor, but was unable to come to terms with the three other co-sharers. The respondent tenant of the house, originally from all the four co-sharers, and finally from three of them, having refused to vacate any part of it, appellant filed a suit against him and his three lessors for " joint possession of a one-" fourth share of the said house, Rs. 260

Order XXI, rule 35—concld.

" arrears of rent and costs," and on the 19th November 1897 obtained a decree against respondent " for possession of a joint quarter " share, and for Rs. 60 rent and for costs." Subsequently appellant applied for execution of the said decree, and prayed that " posses-" sion of a one fourth share of a house situate " in the Civil Lines in which the judgment-" debtor lives, be given." This application having been dismissed on the ground that an order for physical possession, if passed, could not be carried out having regard to the fact that the respondent was in possession as tenant of a majority of the co-sharers the decree-holder appealed to the Chief Court.

Held, that appellant having confined his application to physical possession of the house in suit and having refused to accept possession through receipt of rent, the application had been rightly rejected, on the ground that the house having been enjoyed by the co-sharers only through receipt of rent, it was not open to one co-sharer to transfer to his vendee the right to interfere with the rights of the other co-sharers in such a manner as to deprive them of the enjoyment of their shares in the joint property. Civil Procedure Code, 1908, Order XXI, rule 39 and section 36 of the Prisons Act, 1871—Correlation of—Subsistence allowance of Civil prisoner—Clothing, bedding and cooking utensils of prisoner.

A Civil Court executing a decree under the Civil Procedure Code, 1908 is not competent to require a decree-holder to supply anything but the judgment-debtor's subsistence allowance in money, which it is required to fix by order XXI, rule 39 (1). A Civil Court has obsolutely no concern with the bedding, clothing or cooking utensils, or any other article which may be declared by the Jail authorities necessary for the prisoner.

By section 36 of the Prisons Act, 1871, every Civil prisoner unable to provide himself with sufficient clothing and bedding shall be supplied by the Superintendent with such clothing and bedding as may be necessary, and the decree-holder is liable to pay to the Superintendent on demand the cost of the clothing and bedding so supplied to the prisoner when he has been committed to prisoner in execution of a decree in favour of a private person. In default of such payment, the prisoner is to be released.

The Code and the Prisons Act are both silent as to cooking utensils and the Court has no concern with the mode in which the judgment-debtor is to be supplied with food in the jail: it has only to require the decree-holder to make provision in money for the prisoner's subsistence. Order XXI, rule 46, Order XL, rules 1—3, Order XXI, rule 58—Suit by judgment creditor to recover debt due to judgment-debtor.

J. M. obtained a decree against R. D. and G. L. In execution he attached under order XXI, rule 46, Civil Procedure Code, a debt due from M. H. to R. D and G. L. The Court executing the decree directed J. M. to sue M. H. for the debt, as the latter denied that any such debt existed.

Held, (LINDSAY, J., dissenting), that the suit would not lie, as J. M. was not an assignee of the debt, neither was he appointed manager to sue under Order XL, rules 1—3 and Order XXI, rule 58 did not apply, as there could not be "possession" of a debt, such as was necessary to bring the case under that section. 2. Order XXI, rule 46, Order XL, rules 1—3—Irregularity in attachment of debt—Appointment of manager—Disputed debts.

The plaintiff sued to recover a debt, as manager appointed under Order XL, rule, 1—3, Act V of 1908. He was appointed manager prior to attachment of the debt under Order XXI, rule 46, by prohibitory order, and though defendants were subsequently served with prohibitory orders, no such order was served on the judgment-debtor. The debt was disputed.

Held, that plaintiff as manager appointed under Order XL, rules 1—3, Act V of 1908, was entitled to maintain the suit, notwithstanding that the debt was disputed.

Held further, that though the attachment did not precede the appointment of plaintiff as manager, the plaintiff was entitled to maintain the suit, it not being shown that defendants had been prejudiced by the irregularity.

The omission to serve the judgment-debtor with a prohibitory order was an irregularity which did not invalidate the attachment. NEBRAJ v. UTTAM CHAND. 67 P R 1877 of the judgment-debtor's immoveable property, and the report of the attaching officer was that attachment had been effected on the 22nd October 1888 by beat of drum on the spot and by affixing a notice, under Order XXI, rule 54 of the Civil Procedure Code, on the house of the judgment-debtor situate on the spot. It did not, however, appear from the report that a copy of the notice was affixed in the court-house or in the office of the Collector of the District, and no evidence was adduced on this point. The plaintiff purchased the land in dispute from the said judgment-debtor on the 18th March 1891, and it was contended on his behalf that, in order to render the sale to him invalid, the decree-holder was bound to prove that all the conditions of Order XXI, rule 54 had been duly complied with. It was proved that there had been litigation about the attachment before plaintiff's purchase, and that the latter's sale-deed was executed at Lahore, and not at Amritsar, where it would ordinarily have been executed.

Held, having regard to the circumstances of the case, that plaintiff had notice aliunde of the attachment, and that there was no reason to hold that the condition of order XXI, rule 54 had not been complied with, or, in any case, that the attachment was not valid as against plaintiff.

C's claim was disallowed, and, he thereupon, brought a regular suit against A to recover the property or its value. Held, that C's suit was cognizable by the Court of Small Causes, as it was a suit for personal property or its value : and that it was not barred on the ground that the decision of a Small Cause Court is final.

5. And order XXI, rule 58—Mortgage by Hindu widow—Attachment in execution of decree obtained on the mortgage—Claim by collateral to attached property—Order passed against claimant—Suit by claimant to establish his title—Limitation.

In 1888 B, a Hindu widow, mortgaged certain property to the defendant. In 1900 the defendant obtained a decree on the mortgage, and in execution attached the property. Plaintiff, a collateral, intervened under order XXI, rule 58, Civil Procedure Code. The Court overruled the objection on the ground that the objector had no present right to possession. Plaintiff instituted a suit, within one year of the date of the order disallowing his objections, for a declaration that the attachment of the property would not affect his rights after the death of the mortgagor. This suit was dismissed by the Divisional Judge as barred by article 125 of the Limitation Act.

Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to object under order XXI, rule 58 of the Civil Procedure Code in spite of 12 years having expired since the execution of the mortgage, and his suit to establish his right to the property attached was within limitation under article 11 of the Indian Limitation Act.

A collateral may well be content to await the death of a female mortgagor before suing for possession, but where the mortgagee takes steps to oust the mortgagor in execution of a decree obtained on the mortgage, and to effect the sale of the property mortgaged the collateral has a cause of action distinct from that afforded by the mortgage. *Devi Ditta v. In a suit brought by the plaintiff to recover possession of a dwelling house which had been sold at an auction sale in execution of a money decree against the plaintiff's brother more than a year before the institution of the suit, it appeared that in the course of the execution proceedings the plaintiff had intervened and applied to have the attachment removed on the ground that the property was his and not of his brother, but that owing to default of prosecution the plaintiff's claim was disallowed.

Held, that the order in the execution proceedings dismissing the plaintiff's objections to the attachment on account of default of prosecution was not a judicial investigation under order XXI, rule 61 of the Civil Procedure Code, and that therefore the suit was not barred under article 11 of the Limitation Act.

An order cannot be held to be an order under order XXI, rule 61, Civil Procedure Code, unless it is passed after an investigation into the facts of the case and an opinion expressed and judgment given on the merits.

N. M. in execution of his decree against T. D. attached the house in dispute on 20th June 1902. Mussammat J. and L. objected to attachment, an enquiry was made by the executing Court, and on 14th October 1903 in the absence of the decree-holder an ex parte order releasing the house was passed in the following words: "Aj digridar hazer nahin "hai, misl ijra ba adam pairvi dakhil dafter "hui hai, lihaza jaidad makruka waguzar "howe, misl dakhil dafter ho." The decree-holder again attached the house in the same decree on 4th June 1907, and the District Judge released the house on the ground that having once been released, it could not be attached again. Thereupon the decree-holder on 29th August 1908 brought the present suit. The First Court, holding the suit time-barred, dismissed it, and the Divisional Judge remanded the case for decision on the merits, being of opinion, that the order of 14th October 1903 was not one under section 280 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1882, inasmuch as it was ex parte and there being no adjudication on the merits. On appeal to the Chief Court, Held, that notwithstanding the wording of the order, dated 14th October 1903, it was an adjudication on the merits under section 280, Civil Procedure Code, 1882, inasmuch as the objector had actually produced his evidence, and the decree-holder after several hearings produced none and absented himself on the last hearing, and that consequently the suit was barred under article 11, Schedule II, of the Indian Limitation Act, 1877. 9. Attachment—Property liable to be attached—Cause of action—Form of plaint for declaration that a judgment-debtor had a mortgage on certain property—Plaint—Relief claimed—Specific Relief Act, 1877, section 42.

Plaintiffs in execution of a money decree against one Gurdit Singh, deceased, who had a mortgage on the land belonging to defendants, attached those rights, whereon the defendants objected that they had redeemed the land from mortgage, and that no representative of the deceased judgment-debtor had been placed on the record. The objections were disallowed by the first Court, but on appeal the District Judge reversed the decision and the attachment was removed on the ground that mutation had taken place and no person was recorded as a mortgagee. Plaintiffs then sued the defendants, the successful objectors, and asked for a declaration that the mortgage on the land had not been removed; they also asked for any other relief which under the circumstances alleged the Court might think them entitled to. The first Court found the redemption not proved and decreed the claim. The Divisional Judge was disposed to accept this finding on the merits, but dismissed the claim on the ground that the suit did not lie. He held that suit was not one under order XXI, rule 63 of the Code of Civil Procedure as the defendant's objections did not fall under order XXI, rule 58, and as plaintiffs were not claiming to establish a right to any property or a declaration that the mortgage rights were liable to attachment in execution of their decree, nor were the defendants contending that the mortgage rights if they existed were not liable to attachment for that purpose. He was also of opinion that section 42 of the Specific Relief Act was not applicable as there was no dispute as to plaintiff's title to any legal character or to their right to any property, and plaintiffs did not even allege that they had any right over the land owned by the defendants, and could not say who was vested with the alleged right, the original mortgagee being dead without any heirs. He considered that the dispute was not whether the plaintiffs were entitled to attach the mortgage rights, but whether, as a matter of fact, those rights exist and this could not give rise to a cause of action.

Held, that as the object of the present suit was to establish that there was no redemption, and that the property of the objectors was still under mortgage and was liable to attachment in execution of plaintiff's decree to the extent of the mortgage interest it must be treated as one falling under order XXI, rule 63 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and as the right of the (mortgagee) judgment-debtor in the land is an interest in the land and is property, and the plaintiffs assert their right to recover their decree from it, which defendants denied, plaintiffs are entitled to sue for a declaration under section 42 of the Specific Relief Act. Held also, that the actual form of the suit is of little consequence. The relief really claimed on the case set up by the plaintiffs is to be considered and as the Code of Civil Procedure does not deal with forms of suits, the substance and merits of the case should be kept in view and not merely the words in the plaint.

Held, that the omission to obtain the sanction of the Financial Commissioner to the sale of certain trees in execution of decree (such sanction being found to be necessary under the terms of Notification No. 1297 S., dated 10th September 1885, for the sale in question) is a reason for setting aside the sale on objection under order XXI, rule 90 of the Civil Procedure Code, the failure to obtain such sanction, when required, being a material irregularity in the publishing or conducting the sale within the meaning of that section, and that it may have resulted in material loss being clear from the fact that the Financial Commissioner might have refused his sanction altogether. Nirmal Das v. Muhammad Yar (No. 6 *P. While, therefore, the Court ought to cause notice to be issued to all interested at the expense of the applicant before it grants the application finally, there is nothing in the said section which requires that no application under it shall be received unless the name of the auction-purchaser is set out in it, and he is "made a party." CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE, 1908 —contd.

Appellants executed a mortgage of certain house property of which they were in possession in favour of respondent, whereupon certain alleged reversioners filed a suit for a declaration that the mortgage would not affect their reversionary interests. Pending this suit, the mortgagee obtained a decree for realization of the mortgage-money by sale of the mortgaged property, and in execution of his decree, obtained an order for sale of the property free from the mortgage. The property was thereupon put up for sale on the 9th, 12th, 13th, 14th, 15th, and 16th October 1897, and on the last day the mortgagee, to whom express permission to bid had been given bid Rs. 70,000.

Subsequently the property was again put up for auction, but as no advance on the mortgagee's bid was made, the Court fixed the 20th December for continuation of the sale. The mortgagors appealed from this order, but their appeal was dismissed whereupon the executing Court ordered the sale to be continued on the 25th March 1898 starting from the mortgagee's bid of Rs. 70,000. The latter objected to this order on the ground that starting at such a figure would spoil the sale but his objection was overruled. The sale was conducted on the spot by the bailiff of the Court, who deposed that he commenced the sale at 10 A.M., with the bid of Rs. 70,000, and remained on the spot till 11-30 A.M., when he returned to the Court leaving a Chaprassi and the usual drum-beater on the spot; that he came back at 3-30 P.M., and at 4 P.M., as no advance on the Rs. 70,000 had been made, he terminated the sale in favour of the mortgagee, obtained the signatures of the mortgagee's agent and of those present, including a servant of the mortgagors, and received from the mortgagee's agent Rs. 575, the ad valorem fee to cover sale expenses, calculated on the Rs. 70,000. The purchase-money almost exactly equalled the amount of the decree and was set off against it. The mortgagors objected to the confirmation of the sale under order XXI, rule 90 of the Civil Procedure Code, and on their objections being overruled, appealed to the Chief Court. It was urged on their behalf (1) that there was no sale on the 25th March, as there was no bid on that date; (2) that the sale proclamation did not state that the property was sold free from the mortgage or that a suit relating to it was pending; (3) that in the column of the proclamation devoted to specification of charges on the property was written koi deriaft nahin hua; (4) that the mortgagee had colluded with the reversioners to keep down the price of the property; (5) that the failure to deposit 25 per cent. of the purchase-money immediately after the sale, vitiated the latter; and (6) that the procedure adopted by the bailiff was irregular, and that there was consequently no sale, or in any case, that the interests of the mortgagors had been prejudiced.

Held, overruling the said contentions, (1) that the conduct of the mortgagee and his agent during the sale was incompatible with the contention that the bid of Rs. 70,000 had been withdrawn, or that the sale had not been duly completed; (2) that the sale proclamation could not be said to have caused substantial injury to the mortgagors, within the meaning of order XXI, rule 90 of the Code, by reason of the words koi deriaft nahin hua, or the omission to mention the mortgage or suit; (3) that it was unnecessary to specify in the sale proclamation a charge to which the property would not be subject in the hands of a purchaser after sale; (4) that as the purchase-money almost exactly equalled the amount of the decr.e and as the mortgage lien was transferred from the property to the purchase-money and was a first charge on the latter under section 73 of the Code the deposit made on account of fees satisfied the provisions of the law, the obligation to deposit the full 25 per cent. arising in such cases only in the event of the mortgage lien being less than the purchase-money; and (5) that in the absence of evidence to prove that a possible bidder was prevented by the absence of the bailiff from bidding, the procedure adopted by the bailiff could not be held to have vitiated the sale or prejudiced the interests of the mortgagors. 9. Sale in execution of decree—Material irregularity—Mistake in proclamation as to place of sale—Evidence—Court not limited to irregularities specifically mentioned in the application to set aside sale—Civil Procedure Code, 1908, order XXI, rule 66

Where property under attachment had been expressly ordered to be sold on the premises and the proclamation issued under the authority of order XXI, rule 66 of the Civil Procedure Code advertised the sale to take place at the Court-house, while as a fact it was actually conducted on the spot and was found to have been sold for an inadequate price.

Held, that the mistake in the sale proclamation as regards the place of sale was a material irregularity sufficient in itself to justify a Court to set aside the sale under order XXII, rule 9 of the Civil Procedure Code. Such an irregularity even in the absence of any direct evidence on the point might well be presumed to have caused substantial injury by keeping away the bidders, although there may not be direct evidence connecting the irregularity with the inadequacy of price obtained.

Held, also, that an error in sale proclamation might be considered even if it may not be specifically mentioned in the application provided that it is patent on the record and the other side have had an opportunity to rebut it if had wished to do so. DUNI CHAND v. ATMA SINGH. 132 P R 1906

Order XXI, rule 93, Civil Procedure Code, confers rights on purchasers against persons to whom their money has been paid, and in the absence of an express or an implied bar, such rights are enforceable in the ordinary way, i.e., by suit, as well as in the special manner indicated in the said section. An assignee of the auction-purchaser is entitled to recover the purchase-money in a similar manner, and his suit is not unmaintainable merely because at the date of its institution he had an application pending in the Chief Court for revision of the order dispossessing him of the property.

It is for a judgment-debtor, who has succeeded in getting the Court to set aside a sale under order XXI, rule 92 of the Code, to move the Court to restore his property to him, and if he fails to do so, there is nothing to prevent the decree-holder and the purchaser from retaining the former the sale-proceeds, the latter the property itself. It is only when the purchaser is deprived of his bargain and ejected therefrom at the instance of the judgment-debtor that he acquires a cause of action to sue for refund of his money, and it is doubtful whether there is failure of consideration until such ejectment takes place. 4. "Saleable interest of judgment-debtor."

One B. M. had a decree against K. B., and in execution thereof got two houses belonging to the latter attached and sold by auction. Of these two houses Ibrahim purchased one and obtained possession under the certificate of sale, whereupon one K. R., who was mortgagee of part of the property, sued for and obtained possession of the same. Ibrahim thereupon applied to the execution Court under order XXI, rule 93, Civil Procedure Code, for a refund of a proportionate share of the purchase-money from the decree-holder, who was ordered by the Court to refund the value of the portion recovered by K. R.

Held, that the action of the Court under order XXI, rule 93 of the Code was ultra vires, and could not be sustained, that section being applicable only to cases in which the auction sale has been set aside under order XXI, rules 89, 91 and 92, or if it is found that the judgment-debtor had no saleable interest in the property which purported to be sold, and the purchaser is, for that reason, deprived of it. In the present case only a portion of the property sold had passed out of the purchaser's hand, and in that the judgment-debtor had simply a mortgagor's right at the time of auction, which the auction-purchaser apparently still retained. *I. 6. Sale in execution of decree—Absence of certificate of sale—Suit by purchaser—Title against party to the suit or his representative in interest.

The plaintiff sued, alleging that he was the purchaser of a house at an execution sale following decree against B., defendant 2, on account of a debt due from B.'s deceased husband. The defendant 1 was B.'s second husband, and defendant 3 her son. The plaintiff could produce no certificate of sale.

Held, that the non-production of a certificate was not fatal to the plaintiff's claim.

When the plaintiff is suing to eject not a third party, but the very person who was a party to the suit which led to the execution sale, or persons whose interests are identical, with such party, the mere omission to produce a certificate of sale is not fatal to the success of the suit. A party to the suit, or his representative in interest, cannot, after the sale has been confirmed, dispute the purchaser's title at the order confirming the sale completes the title as against the parties to the suit. *I. when tendered in 1891, under clause (o) added to section 17 of the Registration Act, 1877, by Act VII of 1888, by virtue of the provision in section 65 of the amending Act.

Held, further, that an auction-purchaser (not a party to the original suit) who has taken no action under Order XXI, rule 95, Civil Procedure Code, to recover possession of the property sold to him from the judgment-debtor, is not thereby debarred from maintaining a regular suit for possession of the property, as the two remedies are concurrent.

4. Application under Order XXI, rule 95, Civil Procedure Code, for possession of house purchased at sale in execution of decree—Refusal of such application—Subsequent suit for possession—House sold privately by judgment-debtor before grant of certificate of sale—Irregularities in attachment and sale—Section 47 (1), Order XXI, rules 90, 94 and 95, Civil Procedure Code.

In 1884 the plaintiff purchased at an auction sale in execution of a decree against T. S. and M. S. the house now in dispute, and the sale was confirmed on 27th March of the same year; but the certificate of sale was not granted till the 9th April 1888. On the 19th May 1887, T. S. sold the house in question to the defendants, N. A. (since dead) and K. A. In 1890 the plaintiff applied under Order XXI, rule 95, Civil Procedure Code, to be put in possession of the purchased property, and on the 19th May of that year his application was refused as time-barred.

In a suit now brought by the plaintiff (auction-purchaser) against T. S. and his vendees for recovery of possession of the house in dispute, it was contended for the defendants:

(1) that prior to the grant of a certificate—and therefore before the plaintiff had acquired an absolute title—the house had been sold privately, and that such sale was valid;

(2) that no suit would lie as the plaintiff had failed to obtain possession under Order XXI, rule 95, Civil Procedure Code; and

(3) that the sale in plaintiff's favour was vitiated by irregularities.

Both the lower Courts dismissed the plaintiff's suit,—the first Court because of certain irregularities which it considered took place in attaching the property and publishing the sale: the Divisional Judge because he considered that the plaintiff's title not having become absolute till the grant of a certificate in 1888, T. S. was at liberty to sell in 1887, and also because the plaintiff had failed to obtain possession in a proceeding under Order XXI, rule 95, Civil Procedure Code:

Order XXI, rule 95—concld.

Held (1) that under the provisions of Order XXI, rules 92 and 94, Civil Procedure Code, the plaintiff's title must be taken to have vested in him on the 27th March 1884, which was the date of the confirmation of sale, and the delay in obtaining a certificate of sale till 1888 did not of itself render the sale by T. S. to the other defendants in 1887 a valid sale or a sufficient answer to the suit:

(2) that the failure of an auction-purchaser to obtain delivery of possession under Order XXI, rule 95, he not being a party to the suit, was not in itself a bar to a regular suit for possession.

(3) that the defendants had failed to establish any irregularities which could be held to vitiate the sale, even if they had been urged in a proceeding under Order XXI, rule 90, Civil Procedure Code, and not in answer to the present suit by the auction-purchaser. The Court allowed their objection on the 3rd December 1891. 1. Order XXII, rule 3—Death of sole appellant—Abatement of appeal—Legal representative—Right to sue.

Held, that the words "legal representative" in Order XXII, rule 3 of the Civil Procedure Code, must be read in connection with the "right to sue" which is involved in the case before the Court; and that unless the person applying to be considered the "legal representative" can show that he is the person to whom the "right to sue" involved in the case descends or survives by law, he is not qua that right the "legal representative" within the meaning of Order XXII, rule 3, Civil Procedure Code. 2. Death of sole appellant—Nullity of decree—Remedy.

F., the sole appellant before the Divisional Court, died while the appeal was still pending, but after the death of F. the sons of F. applied to have their names placed on the record in the room of their deceased father. This application was rejected by the Divisional Court for default. When the appeal was heard on the merits, no objection was raised by either party, and the appeal was decreed in the deceased appellant's favour.

Held, on the revision side, no appeal being competent, that the proper order to pass was one setting aside the decree of the Divisional judge as a nullity, leaving either party to make any application which he might be advised to make to that Court, with a view to re-opening the case. 3. Civil Procedure Code, Order XXII, rules 3 and 5, and section 107 (2)—Suit by widow with life-interest to recover from collaterals property of her deceased husband—Legal representative of such widow for the purpose of continuing the suit or appeal on widow's death—Dat Brahmins of Kanjrur, tahsil Shakargarh, Gurdaspur District.

The plaintiff, who was the widow of one H R., sued to recover from the defendants, collaterals of H. R., a portion of her husband's estate, of which it was alleged they had taken wrongful possession. During the pendency of her appeal in the Chief Court, the plaintiff died, and applications by the widows of other collaterals of H. R., who claimed to be brought upon the record and to continue the appeal as representatives of the deceased appellant, were resisted by the defendants on the ground that, as the deceased had only a life-interest in the property and practically left no heir—the succession going to the heirs of her deceased husband—the right to appeal did not survive, and that the appeal ought therefore to abate.

The deceased, H. R., was a Dat Brahmin of Kanjrur, tahsil Shakargarh, Gurdaspur District.

Held, that the right to appeal survived to the heirs, whoever they might be of the late H. R.

Held also, that as all the parties interested in the result of the present applications were parties to a new suit, brought in order to determine the question of the right to succeed to the property of H. R., the proper order to pass at the present stage was to direct under Order XXII, rule 5, Civil Procedure Code, that the appeal should be stayed until the fact as to who was the legal representative of Mussammat L. had been tried and determined in such suit. 4. Death of sole plaintiff after conclusion of case, but before delivery of judgment—Decree drawn up in favour of deceased plaintiff—Material irregularity—Civil Procedure Code, 1908, Order XXII, rule 3.

In a certain case after evidence had been taken and arguments heard on the 28th and 29th September 1897, the District Judge on the 2nd November 1897 gave the (sole) plaintiff a decree for the property claimed, and at the foot of his judgment recorded the following note:—

"It having been brought to my knowledge " that plaintiff has died in the interim, I " deliver judgment notwithstanding, being " guided by I. L. R. XXI Bom. 314, and the " authorities quoted therein, defendant's " counsel agreeing." Defendant applied to the Chief Court on the Revision Side to set aside the said decree.

Order XXII, rule 3—contd.

Held, that under the circumstances of the present case, there had been a disregard of the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code which had materially prejudiced the defendant, inasmuch as she could not appeal against a dead person, and had no right of appeal against his heirs who were not on the record, and was, moreover, deprived of the possibility of the suit being allowed to abate in consequence of no application under Order XXII, rule 3, Civil Procedure Code, being made within the time allowed by law.

Held therefore, that the decree of the District Court must be set aside and the case remanded for disposal in accordance with law with reference to Order XXII, rule 3 of the Code.

ROE, C. J.—A decree passed in favour of or against, a dead person is not ipso facto a nullity, and all that can be said in such a case is that there has been a disregard of the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code. Each case must be decided on its merits, and the decree should be set aside or maintained, as if the death occurred after decree, according as the disregard of procedure has or has not materially prejudiced the parties.

5. —Execution of decree—Death of decree-holder—Abatement of execution proceedings—Admission of application to set aside abatement after time—Sufficient cause—Limitation Act, 1877, section 5.

In an execution proceeding the decree-holder having died in September 1898, the judgment-debtor, on the 18th October 1899, obtained an order from the executing Court for the removal of the attachment on the ground that no application in accordance with the provisions of Order XXII, rule 3, Civil Procedure Code, had been made by the representatives of the deceased decree-holder within the prescribed period of limitation. The circumstances were that the decree-holder who was a Sikh Jat had died and left a will probate of which having been keenly contested by his heirs was not granted to the executors until April 1900. In May 1900 two out of the three executors filed an application for execution, but the judgment-debtor contended that by Order XXII, rule 3 of the Civil Procedure Code, the application was time-barred.

Held, that the word "suit" includes all proceedings in a suit including the proceedings in execution, and that the executors were bound to make and capable of making the application at the time of the death of the testator, but that, under the peculiar circumstances of the case, there was sufficient cause preventing them from continuing the execution proceedings originated by the testator within the meaning of Order XXII, rule 9, Civil Procedure Code, and that therefore under the provisions of Order XXII, rule 9, Civil Procedure Code, and of section 5 of the Limitation Act they were entitled to an extension of the time for making the application to set aside the abatement order.

6. Application to place legal representative of deceased defendant-respondent on the record—Sufficient cause for not applying within prescribed period—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908, Order XXII, rule 4.

Held, that the period for applying in the case of a deceased defendant-respondent to place his legal representative upon the record is 60 days under article 171 B. of the 2nd Schedule of the Limtation Act, Hafiz Ghulam Muhammad Khan v. Mohan Lal (No. 133 P. R., 1884) and Dasoundha Singh v. Kanhya Lal (No. 133 P. R., 1886) followed.

7. Death of respondent during pendency of appeal—Legal representative.

During the pendency of an appeal in the Chief Court in a pre-emption suit brought by the pre-emptor as appellant against the vendor and the vendee as respondents, the vendor respondent (who was a childless widow) died; whereupon an application was duly made by the appellant under order XXII, rule 4, Civil Procedure Code, to substitute as the legal representatives of the deceased respondent, certain persons who were the reversionary heirs of the husband of the said deceased. It was objected at the hearing on their behalf that they were not the legal representatives of the deceased respondent, as there was a sister and a sister's son of the deceased in existence.

Held, that the term "legal representative" as used in order XXII, rule 4 of the Code, clearly does not necessarily mean "legal heirs:" that it is not the intention of the section that an elaborate inquiry and decision should be given, in case of nice questions arising as to exactly who, under particular rules of law, is the legal representative and that looking in the present case to the obvious practical interest which the reversioners had in the property, and the great probability (to say the least) that they were as much the next heirs and representatives as a sister or a sister's son, the objection taken by the respondents must be disallowed. CHARANJIT MAL v. MUSSAMMAT MITHO. 29 P R 1(8

8. Application to implead the legal representative of a deceased respondent—"Sufficient cause" for not applying within the prescribed period—Ignorance of law.

In a suit in which there were numerous defendants, it appeared that after the plaintiff had filed his appeal in the Court of the Divisional Judge, one of the respondents died leaving minor sons, and (it was alleged) a widow, and also a brother who was also a respondent. At the hearing of the appeal, it was objected that plaintiff had not applied within 60 days of the death of the deceased respondent to have his sons made legal representatives, whereupon the plaintiff explained that he considered it unnecessary, as the deceased's brother was alive and a party to the suit. The Divisional Judge held that this was merely pleading ignorance of law and the excuse was not sufficient.

Held, that the explanation was sufficient, the plaintiff being an uneducated zamindar, who, it might easily be believed, would consider the adult surviving brother to be the proper representative of the deceased in preference either to his widow or his minor sons in a suit regarding immovable property.

It is not necessarily a ground for rejecting cause shown for omitting to apply for legal representatives to be brought on the record in place of a deceased party, that the cause shown involves a mistake of law. 9. And section 107 (2)—Appeal—Local representative of respondent.

In the case of the death of a respondent, the Court has no authority to inquire as to who is the legal representative of the deceased or to refuse to accept the person designated as such by the appellant. Order XXII, rule 4 leaves it to the appellant to apply that a certain person whom he alleges to be the legal representative be brought on the record. If he wilfully omits to bring the right person on the record he will bear the consequence, as the proceedings will not bind the true heir. KUTBA v. MUSSAMMAT UMRI.

10. Practice—Procedure—Parties—Death of respondent pending appeal—Application by appellant to have certain person brought on record as deceased's legal representative—Similar application by third party who alleges himself to be deceased's legal representative—Duty of Court—Civil Procedure Code, 1908, Order XXI, rule 4, and 5.

One of two respondents having died pending an appeal, the appellant applied to have one Mussammat T. D. brought on the record as the deceased's legal representative. Thereupon one H. N. applied under order XXII, rule 4 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1908, to be accepted as the legal representative of the deceased instead of Mussammat T. D. The Divisional Judge, without inquiring into the truth of the allegations held that he was bound to accept as the deceased's legal representative, the person indicated in the application of the appellant. H. N. having appealed to the Chief Court.

Held, that although order XXII, rule 4 of the Code does not make any express provision for the case of a dispute in such matters, it follows ex necessitate rei, that when a dispute does arise, the Court should have the power of deciding it by an interlocutory order for the purposes of proceeding with the case or appeal. *I. Plaintiff sued for recovery of Rs. 48,400, principal and interest, due on a mortgage-bond executed by a Muhammadan lady, widow of one R. A., on the 2nd June 1881. The said lady having died in 1883, the persons sued were the brother and nephews of R. A., they having succeeded to R. A.'s property on the death of the widow, and the claim was based on the grounds that the defendants were the heirs and representatives of the widow, and that in any event, as the debt was incurred for necessary purposes, it was recoverable from the estate of her husband in their hands. Defendants pleaded that the deed was fictitious and without consideration, and that it was not executed for necessary purposes, and did not therefore bind the estate of R. A.

The District Judge found necessity proved to the extent of Rs. 3,000 only, and gave plaintiff a decree for that amount, with interest at one per cent. up to date of suit, or Rs. 7,260 in all, with proportionate costs, against the property sought to be charged, and dismissed the rest of the suit with costs.

Plaintiff thereupon appealed to the Chief Court for the portion of his claim disallowed by the lower Court and defendants filed cross-objections under Order XLI, rule 22, Civil Procedure Code, in regard to the amount decreed against them.

When the appeal came on for hearing, respondents' counsel pointed out that one of the respondents had died more than six months previously, and that no application had been made to put his representatives on the record, and contended that the appeal had therefore abated under Order XXII, rule 4 and section 149, Civil Procedure Code. On behalf of appellant, it was admitted that the facts were as stated, but it was urged that appellant had nevertheless a right to proceed against the remaining respondents.

Held, that the appeal had abated as against the remaining respondents. Inasmuch as, under section 42 of the Contract Act, the obligation to perform the promise of the widow devolved on her death, on all her representatives jointly, and as on the death of one of her said representatives the heirs of the latter were not discharged, but took their place with reference to the liability, Order XXII, rule 4 was applicable to the suit though founded on contract, and no act on the part of plaintiff could take the case out of the operation of the said section.

Section 43 of the Contract Act, which gives a creditor a right to proceed against any one of his joint debtors, deals with substantive law, and the right so given must be exercised before the creditor institutes his suit. After the suit is filed the creditor is in the hands of the Court, and his option under section 43 of the Contract Act is subject to the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure. He cannot, therefore, defeat the provisions of Order XXII, rule 4 of the Code by resorting to his right under section 43 of the Contract Act after the limitation prescribed for putting the representative of his deceased debtor on the record has expired, and he has no explanation to offer for the delay.

Held, also, that even if appellants prayer to proceed against the remaining respondents could be regarded as tantamount to one to amend his appeal, the appeal having at the time abated, it was too late to ask for such amendment in the form proposed, whatever might have been the decision on such application, if it had been made within six months of the death of the deceased respondent.

Upon a charge of theft, brought by defendant in the Courts of the Kalsia State, plaintiff was arrested and kept in custody for about six weeks, but was subsequently discharged after full enquiry had been made into the truth of defendant's allegations. Thereafter plaintiff instituted a suit in the District Court, Umballa, within the jurisdiction of which defendant was resident, for Rs. 3,400 as damage for malicious prosecution. Defendant traversed the allegations in the plaint, and further pleaded that plaintiff could not sue in a British Court on a cause of action which had arisen in Kalsia State. The Court overruled this objection and awarded plaintiff Rs. 610 as damages, whereupon both parties appealed to the Chief Court. Pending the appeal, defendant died, and his son was brought on the record as his representative, and at the hearing it was contended on his behalf, (i) that plaintiff's appeal had abated on defendant's death ; (ii) that plaintiff had not proved that the alleged malicious prosecution amounted to a tortious act lege loci delicti commissi (i.e., of the Kalsia State) as well as lege fori (i.e., of British India) ; (iii) that the former proceedings had not resulted in the acquittal, but merely in the discharge, of the plaintiff ; and (iv) that, in any event, defendant had not acted without "reasonable and probable cause" in charging plaintiff with theft.

Held, as to (i), that plaintiff's appeal did not abate on the death of defendant as aforesaid ; as to (ii), that the plea not having been raised in the Lower Court in this form, could not be raised in the Chief Court on appeal ; and as to (iii), that a discharge after full inquiry is better proof of the innocence of an accused person than an acquittal.

But held, upon the facts of the case, that plaintiff's suit for damages must be dismissed, inasmuch as defendant had not acted without reasonable and probable cause in charging plaintiff with theft. BHAGWAN SINGH v. PANDIT JOTI.

1. Devolution of interest pending suit—Joinder of parties.

During the pendency of a suit for pre-emption by plaintiff against the vendor and vendees of certain property, three other persons obtained a decree for pre-emption against the same defendants in respect of the same sale, whereupon the Court before whom the suit was pending ordered the three decree-holders in the other suit to be added as co-defendants in the pending suit, and eventually gave the plaintiff in that suit a decree. This decree was reversed on appeal, the Appellate Court considering that the three plaintiffs in the earlier suit had been improperly joined as defendants.

Held, that inasmuch as the plaintiff's suit involved a claim for possession of the property sold as against the vendor, and pending this suit the vendor's interest devolved under the decree in the suit brought by the three persons above-mentioned upon those persons, they were therefore properly made parties to the present suit under the provisions of Order XXII, rule 10, of the Civil Procedure Code. The first Court decided in favour of the defendant's mortgage, but the Divisional Judge passed an unconditional decree in favour of plaintiff. Defendant appealed to the Chief Court. While the appeal was pending, the defendant sued the plaintiff for pre-emption of the same land and got a decree. At the hearing of the appeal, the plaintiff objected in limine to the appeal being heard, on the ground, that he had no longer any interest in it; that all his rights had passed to the defendant under the pre-emption decree, and that consequently nothing was left to decide. Held that this contention was not correct. ing the sale—Fresh suit by plaintiff for declaration of her title to the property sold —Right to maintain such suit—Fresh cause of action.

In a suit by plaintiff for a declaration of her proprietary right in a certain house, it appeared that the property in dispute had been attached and sold in execution of a decree obtained against the plaintiff's husband. The plaintiff then sued the decree-holder and judgment-debtor to establish her proprietary title to the house sold. After the institution of this suit, the Court in which the execution proceedings had been taken refused to confirm the sale, and ordered the house to be released from attachment. Plaintiff therefore withdrew from her suit, though without obtaining permission under Section 97 of Act VIII of 1859, which was then in force, (corresponding to Civil Procedure Code, 1908, order XXIII, rules 1 and 2) and the suit was accordingly struck off the file. Subsequently, the Appellate Court set aside the orders of the execution Court, and upheld the sale, whereupon the plaintiff brought the present suit against the decree-holder and auction purchasers for a decree declaratory of her title to the house.

Held, that such suit was not barred by the provisions of order XXIII, rule 1 of Act V of 1908.

Per Curiam. The plaintiff withdrew from the former suit because the cloud which had been cast on her title by the attachment and sale of the house had been removed by the cancellation of the sale and the withdrawal of the attachment. When, however, the proceedings against the house were re-opened by the appeal to the Commissioner's Court, and when the result of that appeal was to affirm the auction sale, a fresh attack was made upon the plaintiff's title and a fresh cause of action accrued to her, distinct from that which formed the basis of her former suit. 5. And order I, rule 1—Withdrawal from suit with liberty to bring fresh suit—Effect of permission to one of several plaintiffs to withdraw without consent of others—Power to challenge such permission in subsequent proceeding.

Held, that the effect of the third clause of order XXIII, rule 1 of the Civil Procedure Code is to constitute the consent of the remaining co-plaintiffs in a suit a condition of the valid exercise of the authority conferred in the first clause of the section in a case where there are several plaintiffs; but that the above clause must be read in conjunction with the provisions of the Code as to parties and the frame of the suit, and that the "several plaintiffs" contemplated in the clause are "plaintiffs in whom the right to any relief "claimed is alleged to exist whether jointly, "severally or in the alternative in respect "of the same cause of action" (order I, "rule 1.)

Where therefore an order is made under the first clause of order XXIII, rule 1 in contravention of the third clause, such order may be impeached as made without jurisdiction in a subsequent proceeding, where it is sought to be enforced against a party to the first proceeding.

The above principle held however not to be applicable to the present case as the plaintiffs in the former suit were not "several plaintiffs" within the meaning of order XXIII, rule 1 of the Code. Mussammat Ghasiti v Mussammat Banno Jan (No. 95 *P. 6. Withdrawal of suit without permission to sue again—Order of withdrawal ultra vires of section—Effect of such order—Power to challenge such order (though not appealed from) in subsequent suit.

In a suit by plaintiffs seeking to recover their share in the paternal estate, it appeared that a previous suit had been brought for the same purpose against the same parties, in which the plaintiffs had (before the case had come to a hearing) filed a document signed by them alone, which stated that they withdrew their case (and had no claim for costs) because they hoped that they would settle their case out of Court, and that private arbitrators would determine the matter. Thereupon the Court, without quoting any section of the Code, passed an order allowing the withdrawal of plaintiffs' suit without any permission to bring a new one.

Held that, assuming the above order to be one under order XXIII, rule 1 of the Civil Procedure Code, it was clearly ultra vires as regards that section, the document put in by the plaintiffs not constituting a "sufficient cause" for permitting the withdrawal, and was therefore no bar to the present suit.

Held further, that the said order could be objected to in the present suit, though it was not appealed against at the time. Jaggu v. Mussammat Nanni Jan (No. 93 P. R. 1887), followed. HOSHDAR ALI v. HASSAN ALI. 147 P R 1888

A decree made in accordance with a lawful agreement or compromise is final under order XXIII, rule 3, Civil Procedure Code.

No appeal lies from such a decree, escape from which on the ground of fraud can only be obtained by a regular suit or upon application for review of judgment.

The lawfulness of an agreement or compromise is distinct from the question of its legal validity, and it is sufficient for the purposes of order XXIII, rule 3, that there has been an agreement the objects of which are not unlawful.

case on the day when an order was made appointing him guardian under Act XL of 1858, but before a certificate was issued, held, that he acted as guardian ad litem in entering into the compromise.

A guardian ad litem has no power to compromise a suit without the sanction of the Court in which the suit is pending. Such sanction must be expressly given, after inquiry as to whether the proposed compromise would be beneficial to the minor.

9. Setting aside decree passed on a compromise—Minor—Guardian ad litem—Fraud in equity—Knowledge—order XXIII, rule 3 and order XXXII, rule 7, Civil Procedure Code.

Although there is no doubt authority for setting aside a decree passed on a compromise affecting the interests of a minor made with the leave of the Court (order XXIII, rule 3 and order XXII, rule 7, Civil Procedure Code) if it can be shown that the Court, when it granted leave, was not fully aware of the facts even though there was no fraudulent withholding of knowledge or concealment of facts; held, on the facts, that there was nothing approaching to a withholding of knowledge or even a negligent omission on the part of the guardian ad litem to obtain knowledge.

The Court, with the facts fully before it, considered the compromise for the benefit of the minor, and to hold that the guardian ad litem in entering into the compromise for reasons similar to those which led the Court to sanction it, was guilty of a "fraud in equity," appeared to be impossible. the compromise, and not to its binding character on the parties to it. A deed of agreement or compromise, therefore, that is lawful as between those who actually executed it, does not cease to be so because they, or some of them, had not authority to bind such among their co-suitors as were not present in Court, though the said suitors may not be bound by their act. 11. Decree in accordance with compromise—Agreement of parties—Power of Court to enquire whether compromise, denied in Court, had been assented to elsewhere.

Held, by the Full Bench, that it is not essential before a Court can pass a decree in accordance with a compromise that all the parties to it should assent to it before the Court, and that it is open to the Court, if any party to the compromise refuses to assent to it when it is brought before the Court to enquire whether an assent had been given elsewhere and if it finds this proved, to pass a decree in accordance with the compromise thus assented to. 12. Appeal—Civil Procedure Code, 1908, order XXIII, rule 3, section 115—Offer made by defendant pendente lite to settle case—"Compromise"—Decree based on plaintiff's acceptance of offer—Offer repudiated by defendant—Power of pleader to compromise suit.

Plaintiff's suit, which was filed on 7th May 1895, was in respect of one-third of the estate of one F. J., deceased, which plaintiff claimed as F. J.'s sister. On the 18th June the pleas of a co-defendant, who had taken part of the disputed property in mortgage from the real defendant, Mussammat W. B., deceased's widow, were filed, and the latter's advocate applied for, and obtained, an adjournment in order that a compromise might be come to. After another adjournment the case was fixed for the 15th October, on which date Mussammat W. B. was represented by a pleader who stated his oral pleas on her behalf and concluded with the words "If plaintiff is still "willing to receive Rs. 2,000 in satisfaction "of all claims, defendant No. 1 is willing to "pay. If not she cannot recognize any claim "of the plaintiff."

Thereupon the parties appear to have applied for a further postponement in order that the case might be settled out of Court, and the 23rd October was fixed for the next hearing. On that date nothing was said on either side about any compromise or defendant's offer, but defendant's pleader got additional pleas on the merits recorded. The case was then adjourned (for no special reason) to the following day, when plaintiff's recognized agent, acting on a fresh power-of-attorney, dated the day before and in super-session of a previous power in his favour, stated that plaintiff was willing to take Rs. 2,500 in full satisfaction of her claim and to forego costs. Defendant's pleader (who was other than the pleader through whom the offer of the 15th October had been made) replied that he had that day been instructed to say that his client did not agree to pay Rs. 2,500, and that if the Court gave a decree, it must be against the estate. To this plaintiff's pleader objected. The Court held that the offer of the 15th October was subject to no such qualification, and gave a decree in plaintiff's favour for Rs. 2,500 " on " the pleadings as they stand." This decree was at first modified by the Divisional Judge on appeal, but was subsequently restored by him on review. Defendant appealed to the Chief Court, and it was objected, on plaintiff's behalf, that the decree fell within the purview of order XXIII, rule 3, of the Civil Procedure Code, and was therefore final.

Held, that whether or not the decree in the present case fell under the said section, the procedure of the District Judge was sufficiently tainted with material irregularities to justify interference under section 115 of the Code.

Semble: Under the circumstances of the case an appeal was competent.

Held, that the material irregularities committed by the District Judge were (i) in stating that his decree was based on the pleadings, when in fact the said decree was not made with reference to any material allegation of fact or proposition of law relating to the subject-matter of the suit made or affirmed by one side and admitted by the other; (ii) even assuming that the Court had power to pass such a decree, in not enquiring, as it was bound to do, into the objections of defendant, whose pleaders should have been asked whether repudiation meant that the original offer had not been made with authority or merely that it was withdrawn and the acceptance too late; (iii) in not making any inquiry as to whether defendant's pleader had express authority to make the offer of the 15th October; (iv) in assuming that the said offer was still binding on the 24th October, and in proceeding to pass a decree in accordance with its terms without further inquiry.

Held therefore, that the decrees of the lower Courts must be set aside.

Irregularity in procedure—Estoppel of party acquiescing—Appeal.

In a suit for partition under order XXVI, rule 13, Civil Procedure Code, arbitrators were appointed and a decree made in terms of their award. Subsequently, the decree-holder applied in execution of his decree to be placed in separate possession by partition of his share of the property. A single commissioner was appointed by consent, and he submitted two alternative schemes for partition, of which one was approved and sanctioned by the District Judge, who directed it to be carried out. Thereupon, the defendant appealed to the Chief Court, objecting that the partition proposed was not a fair one; while on behalf of the respondent it was contended that the proceedings in the Court of first instance were irregular, and that as a consequence of the irregularity there was really no decree in existence and no appealable order, of which either the Chief Court or the Court below could take cognizance.

Held, that in a suit for partition of immovable property not paying revenue to Government, the Code of Civil Procedure contemplates an order ascertaining the property to be divided, the parties interested and their several rights therein; and provides for the issue, thereafter, of a commission to make partition, a report under the commission, and a decree based thereupon.

The distinction which exists between suits of the above class and suits for partition of land paying revenue to Government, administration suits, suits for an account, or for dissolution of partnership, in which the legislature has provided that the preliminary order adjudicating on the rights of the parties shall be deemed to be a decree within the meaning of section 2 of the Civil Procedure Code, and therefore appealable, pointed out and discussed.

Held also, that where the Court below, following an erroneous practice, has prepared what purports to be a former judgment and decree without ascertaining the specific properties to be partitioned, the decree thus prepared is nonetheless a decree because it ought to have been a preliminary adjudication and order and it is open to appeal and liable to be set aside upon the ground that it is a premature and defective decree; but where, as in the present case, the parties have acquiesced in the irregular proceedings, they are estopped by their own conduct from excepting to such proceedings after their conclusion, merely on the ground of their irregularity.

Held further, that the word "persons" in the first clause of section 396 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882, means "more persons than one" and not "one or more persons," and a Court has no power under that section to issue a commission to a single person except with consent of parties.

3. Order fixing plaintiff's share in suit for partition and directing partition—"Decree"—Appeal.

In a suit for partition of immovable property, the Court, after making a full inquiry, wrote an order, which was headed as a judgment, deciding that plaintiff was entitled to a one-third share in certain specified property. No decree was framed, but the Court directed the parties to appear on a certain date and to suggest the names of persons whom they wished to be appointed as commissioners for partition and on their failing to agree about this, allowed them further time in order to inform him how they valued the properties held liable to partition, so that he might allot them to the highest bidder among them.

Held, by the Chief Court, on revision, that the order of the Court, fixing plaintiff's share and directing partition, was not a decree within the meaning of section 2 of the Civil Procedure Code, and that no appeal lay therefrom.

being a Corporation within the meaning of order XXIX, rule 1 of the Civil Procedure Code, the plaint might under that section be subscribed and verified on behalf of the Corporation by B as Secretary to the Corporation. NORTHERN INDIA TRADES ASSOCIATION v. LAWRIE. 43 P R 1885

One of the Articles of Association provided that a member must on resigning his membership, pay up all sums due by him to the end of the current month in which he resigned.

Held, that a member of the Association desiring to withdraw from it must do so in the manner prescribed by the article, and until the conditions therein prescribed were complied with, he did not cease to be a member. NORTHERN INDIA TRADES ASSOCIATION v. MATTHEWS. 58 P R 1886

Held, on defendants' appeal to the Chief Court, that under the provisions of order XXXII, rule 1, of the Code of Civil Procedure it was clearly the duty of the Court, when it saw reason to revoke the permission previously granted to B., to proceed in the manner prescribed by order XXXII, rule 10 (1), that the appointment of one of the minors to conduct the suit was quite contrary to the provisions of order XXXII, rule 4 (1) and must for the purposes of the suit be treated as a nullity, and therefore the plaintiffs were not from the stage when B. ceased to act for them properly represented. Held further, that though the defendants might have immediately applied to the first Court for the plaint to be taken off the file, or for the Court to proceed as directed in order XXXII, rule 10 (1), their omission to do so at the time did not prevent them from pressing the objection in second appeal, nor could it have the effect of giving validity to proceedings which the law did not permit to be taken. The mere omission to pass a formal order granting the permission contemplated by section 3 of Act XL of 1858 is not a fatal defect justifying the dismissal by the appellate Court of a suit which has proceeded to judgment in the first Court without objection by the defendant. Such omission is a mere irregularity covered by section 99, Civil Procedure Code. Section 3 of Act XL of 1858 contains no express provision as to the mode in which the necessary permission should be recorded. It may be implied from the action of the Court in tacitly accepting the plaint and allowing the case to proceed.

2. And order XXXII, rule 4—11 (2)—Guardian ad litem, duration of authority of—Application for review.

Held, that a guardian ad litem duly appointed in a suit against a minor is not functus officio on a decree being passed in the suit in which he was appointed and that he holds office until removed by death, or the act of the Court (sections 458 and 459 of the Civil Procedure Code). Held, that the agreement, to be bound by an oath, was an agreement on behalf of the minor with reference to the suit of the nature contemplated by order XXXII, rule 7, Civil Procedure Code, and that the next friend was not competent to enter into it without the leave of the Court. Held also, that the agreement not having been made with the express sanction of Court accorded after inquiry as to whether it would be for the minor's benefit was not binding on the minor. 6. Suit for custody of wife—Minors—Reference to arbitrators—Sanction of Court—Civil Procedure Code, 1908, order XXXII, rule 7, Schedule II, p. 16—Appeal—Material irregularity.

Plaintiff, a minor, through his father as next friend, sued for the custody of his minor wife whose mother was appointed her guardian ad litem. The first Court framed only one issue, viz., whether plaintiff's marriage with his wife was legal and valid, and allowed the matter in dispute to be referred by the respective guardians to two arbitrators, an umpire being appointed by itself in case of a difference of opinion. The arbitrators on the 13th November 1894 filed an award finding the marriage proved whereupon the Court after allowing the usual time for objections decreed plaintiff's claim. This decree having been confirmed on appeal by the Divisional Judge, defendants preferred a further appeal to the Chief Court.

Held, that though it was doubtful whether an appeal could be said to lie the defects that were apparent in the proceedings of the first Court were such as to amount to "material irregularity," inasmuch as (a) the Court failed to record an order under order XXXII, rule 7 of the Civil Procedure Code, before allowing the case to be referred to arbitrators by the guardian of the minor defendant, and (b) it was not competent to the Court to delegate to arbitrators the question, whether or not a claim for custody of a wife should be decreed, such question especially when either party is a minor being entirely one for the discretion of the Court. HIRA v. DINA. 37 P R 1895

7. Minor Compromise of suit—Sanction of Court—Civil Procedure Code, 1908, order XXXII, rule 7—Statement of minor at mutation proceedings—Estoppel.

In March 1893, one G. R. sued for foreclosure of a mortgage by way of conditional sale, the defendants impleaded being M. S., S. S., and Mit Singh, the present plaintiff, who was at the time a minor and represented by S. S. his uncle, who however had not been appointed guardian ad litem by the Court. M. S. and S. S. (the latter for himself and Mit Singh) confessed judgment and a decree was passed in favour of G. R. for foreclosure unless the amount due under the mortgage were paid by a specified time. This amount was not paid and the decree became absolute. Thereupon one B. S. sued all the above-mentioned parties, claiming pre-emption, Mit Singh being again represented by S. S. In this suit also a compromise was filed, and on the back of it the Court endorsed an order in English accepting it and decreeing in accordance with its terms, it being also recorded in this order that Mit Singh was a minor and that S. S. had been appointed his guardian ad litem. B. S. subsequently sold part of the land and mortgaged the rest. The present suit was instituted by plaintiff, Mit Singh, for the whole of the land, and the first issue framed was whether the foreclosure decree and the decree in the pre-emption suit were void and not binding on plaintiff. The first Court held that the irregularities in the foreclosure proceedings were sufficient to vitiate the former decree as against plaintiff, but held that this could not affect the pre-emption decree (No. 56 P. R., 1896). It further held that plaintiff's admission at mutation in 1895 of both transactions acted as an estoppel. The Divisional Judge, on appeal, held that as no guardian ad litem had been appointed in the foreclosure proceedings and as the express sanction of the Court had not been obtained to the compromise in those proceedings or to that in the pre-emption suit, the decrees in neither case were binding on the plaintiff. He further held that No. 56 P. R., 1896 was distinguishable, and that plaintiff's statement at mutation could not act as an estoppel. The appeal was therefore accepted and the case remanded under order XLI, rule 23 of the Civil Procedure Code.

Held, that as there was a good defence in the foreclosure proceedings on account of the irregularities and as it could not be held that the compromise agreed to by S. S. was to the benefit of the minor to whom no guardian ad litem had been appointed, while the requirements of order XXXII, rule 7 of the Civil Procedure Code, had not been complied with, the decree in the foreclosure proceedings was not binding on plaintiff.

Held further, as regards the decree in the pre-emption suit, that as there was nothing to show that the Court satisfied itself after due inquiry that the compromise was one such as in the interests of the minor ought to be accepted and as the compromise had not been expressly sanctioned by the Court as required by order XXXII, rule 7 of the Code, the decree in that suit also was not binding on the plaintiff.

Held also, that B. S., though he was a bona fide purchaser under the pre-emption decree, could not obtain a good title under a decree which was in itself a bad decree as against plaintiff, and from a person, G. R., whose title under the foreclosure decree was bad as against plaintiff.

Held finally, that plaintiff's admission at mutation, even if made by plaintiff individually, was at most an admission of facts which were not denied, and as it was not necessary that plaintiff should on that occasion have asserted his rights such statement, made with a view to the correction of the revenue papers, could not affect plaintiff's rights by estoppel or otherwise. A suit was instituted in the names of B. R., a lunatic, and K. R., his minor son, by one T. R., as next friend, and the plaint was accompanied by an application by T. R. asking for permission to represent both plaintiffs, on the ground that one was insane and the other a minor, B. R. had never been adjudged insane by any competent authority.

Held, that the suit could not proceed at the instance of T. R., inasmuch as under order XXXII, rule 15 of the Civil Procedure Code, it is not open to a Court to permit a suit to be brought in the name of an alleged lunatic through a next friend, unless and until the said plaintiff has been formally adjudged to be of unsound mind under Act XXXV of 1858 or some other law for the time being in force.

Held further, that in any event, the minor K. R. was not a necessary or proper party to the suit in addition to his father B. R., who, even if insane, had not therefore become civilly dead or divested of his rights of property. KANWAL RAM v. BHAWANI RAM.

—Application for leave to sue in formà pauperis—Court taking into consideration property in plaintiff's possession forming part of the subject-matter of the suit.

In a suit for partition of the ancestral property of the parties, the lower Court dismissed an application by plaintiff for leave to sue as a pauper on the ground that he was in possession of sufficient property to enable him to pay the Court-fee. The plaintiff applied for revision of this order on the ground that the property referred to by the Court as being in his possession formed part of the ancestral property for partition of which the suit was brought, and being part of the subject-matter of the suit should not, with reference to the explanation to order XXXIII, rule 1 of the Civil Procedure Code, have been taken into account.

Held, that if it was shown that the property in the plaintiff's possession formed part of the ancestral property for the division of which the suit was brought, it should be excluded from consideration, and only such property in plaintiff's possession as did not form part of the subject-matter of the suit should be taken into account in determining whether

On the death of one K., childless and without leaving any reversioners, a suit for the whole of his property was instituted on behalf of his widow, Mussammat J., a congenital idiot, by Kanhya, who had been appointed, under Act XXXV, of 1858, manager of Mussammat J's estate. The persons impleaded as defendants were—(1) Mussammat B., who had lived with K. as his mistress, and (2) Kanshi, who was no relation of deceased, but in whose favour deceased had apparently made a will, which, however, it was alleged on plaintiff's behalf, was invalid. The defendants took a so-called "preliminary plea" to the effect that plaintiff, being a congenital idiot was not entitled to succeed, and in reply thereto it was contended on plaintiff's behalf that by custom an idiot widow was not disqualified from inheriting. The Court, without considering the question as to the validity of the will, dismissed the suit on the ground that no such custom as alleged had been proved, and that the rule of decision must be taken from Hindu Law, under which plaintiff as a congenital idiot must be considered as incapable of inheriting. The suit was dismissed on the 28th July 1898, and on the 17th October the first day on which the Court was open after the vacation, Kanhya filed an application on behalf of plaintiff for leave to appeal in forma pauperis, without, however, filing a list of the pauper's property. The application was accordingly returned on the 6th November in order that such a list might be filed, which was done on the 11th November. For respondents it was contended, (i) that the application was incomplete without the schedule of property, and could not therefore be held to have been filed till the 11th November, by which date appeal was barred by limitation, and (ii) that the appeal was not properly presented (order XXXIII, rule 3 and order XLIV, rule 1, Civil Procedure Code).

Held, overruling the said contentions (i) that the application being accompanied by copies of the judgment and decrees of the lower Court, was in time, the date of presentation being the 17th October, and (ii) that the application which had been filed by the person who had been appointed, under Act XXXV of 1858, manager of plaintiff's estate, had been duly presented under order XXXII, rules 5, 15 of the Civil Procedure Code.

1. Application to sue in forma pauperis —Order giving permission to sue for part of claim only.

Where the Court, to whom an application was made for leave to sue in forma pauperis, found as a fact that the applicant was unable to pay the Court-Fees upon his claim as laid in his plaint, but, considering that he would probably only succeed as to part of that claim, gave him permission to sue as a pauper for such amount only, and refused to give him permission to sue as a pauper for the remainder, the Chief Court, on the revision side, set aside the lower Court's order, holding that the said Court was bound to give the applicant permission to sue as a pauper for the whole amount claimed. 5. Application for leave to sue in forma pauperis—Grounds for rejecting such application—Allegations showing "right to sue" in Court where application is made.

It is not intended by any of the provisions of Chapter XXVI of the Civil Procedure Code, 1882, that the Court should be at liberty to reject an application to be allowed to sue as a pauper, merely because in the opinion of the Court, the suit is not one which is likely to end successfully for the plaintiff. The points in regard to which the Court has to be satisfied are those mentioned in order XXXIII, rule 5; clause (c) of that section merely requires that the allegations in the plaint should at least show a right to sue in the Court to which the application is presented. MUSSAMMAT DAYA KOUR v. THAKAR SINGH. 155 P R 1888

6. Application to sue in forma pauperis—Court issuing notice to defendant without preliminary inquiry—Material irregularity—"Right to sue in such Court"—Civil Procedure Code, 1908, order XXXIII, rules 4, 5, 6, 7 and 15.

Plaintiff having applied to the District Judge for leave to sue as a pauper, the District Judge, without making any inquiry under order XXXIII, rule 4 and order XXXIII, rule 5 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1908, issued notice to defendant, fixing a date for the parties to give evidence. On the date so fixed, the Court on an objection by defendant that plaintiff was subject to prohibition (c) of order XXXIII, rule 5 inasmuch as his suit was barred by limitation, rejected the application for leave to sue in forma pauperis but without specifying the section under which he acted.

Held, that the irregularity committed by the District Judge in omitting to proceed under order XXXIII, rules 4 and 5 before issuing notice to defendant was a "material irregularity" inasmuch as the rejection of an application under order XXXIII, rule 5 does not debar the applicant from making another similar application, whereas an order under order XXXIII, rule 7 is under order XXXIII, rule 15, a bar to a fresh application under that order of the Code in respect of the same cause of action.

Order XXXIII, rule 5—concld.

Held further, that the expression "right to sue in such Court" in clause (c) of order XXXIII, rule 5 was not intended to refer only to want of jurisdiction in the particular Court in which the application is made, but extends to a case where the right to sue is barred by the law of limitation.

Application for attachment before judgment—Suit by former defendant for compensation on ground that such application was made maliciously and without reasonable cause—Burden of proof.

On the 2nd June D. C. sued A. K. to recover a sum alleged to be due on a hundi, and on the same day applied under order XXXVIII, rule 5, Civil Procedure Code, for an attachment before judgment on the grounds that A. K. had closed his shop, removed therefrom property of considerable value, and intended on the following day to sell by auction certain house property, from which applicant inferred that A. K. had some evil intention and would waste all his property by degrees. The Court thereupon passed a conditional order for attachment, subject to security not being furnished, and the attaching officer went to A. K.'s shop to attach his property, but the actual attachment was averted by the necessary security being given. D. C.'s suit on the hundi was dismissed in the first Court, but decreed, on appeal, by the Divisional Judge, but previously to the latter decree, A. K. sued D. C. for Rs. 3,000 as damages for the injury said to have been caused by the attachment which was alleged to have been unnecessarily and maliciously applied for.

Held, that proceedings taken for the arrest of a defendant, or the attachment of his property, are of a kind which form an exception to the general rule, that it is not an actionable wrong to institute civil proceedings without reasonable and probable cause; and that therefore, the suit by A. K. was maintainable, and none the less so, because an actual attachment was averted by security being offered and accepted.

Held, further, that the principles governing the present action were, mutatis mutandis, the same as those in an action for malicious prosecution, and that it was necessary for plaintiff to prove: (1) that defendant had been actuated by malice; (2) that his proceedings were without reasonable and probable cause, malice, however, being properly inferred on proof that there were no sufficient grounds for the applications; and (3) that plaintiff had sustained some substantial injury.

Held, by BOULNOIS AND MELVILL, JJ., (LINDSAY, J., dissenting), that a Civil Court executing a decree can appoint a manager under Section 148 of Act VIII of 1859, only for the property that has been actually attached upon the judgment-creditor's application, and not for other property of the judgment-debtor; as the Code merely contemplates attachment, seizure and sale, and

2. And order XL, rules 1 and 3—Jurisdiction of Divisional Court to appoint a Receiver—Enquiry to be made under section 503.

Held, that the direction contained in section 505 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1882, that the powers conferred by Chapter XXXVI should be "exercised only by High Courts and by District Courts," does not preclude a Court superior to the District Court, and hearing an appeal from the decree of that Court, from appointing a Receiver under order XL, rules 1 and 3 by virtue of the powers obtained under section 107 of the Code and that the word "only" in section 505 must be regarded as intended to exclude Courts subordinate to a District Court, but not superior Courts of appeal.

The question whether the appointment of a receiver is necessary for any of the purposes stated in order XL, rules 1 and 3 of the Code is one to be determined judicially, and if the necessity of the appointment is in dispute between the parties, the question can only be determined after enquiry with reference to the evidence. BUDH PARKASH v. SANT RAM. 102 P R 1885

3. Order XL, rules 1 and 5—Appointment of receiver—Power to cancel appointment—Jurisdiction of District Judge.

Held, that there is no authority in the Civil Procedure Code for a District Judge, either upon an application to himself, or upon a reference by a subordinate Judge to cancel an order appointing a receiver under order XL, rule 1, in a suit which is not pending in the Court of the District Judge.

Quære, whether such order of appointment, once made can be cancelled by the Court or Judge who made it or by his successor in office before whom the suit is pending. SEVA DAS v. PURAN DAS. 74 P R 1889

4. Appointment of receiver.

A very strong case should be made out before the power conferred by order XL, rule 1, relating to the appointment of receiver, can be exercised. That such an appointment would, under the circumstances, be expedient is not enough. It should be established that it is necessary to attain the object mentioned in that section. BHAI BHAGA SINGH v. HARNAM SINGH. 136 P R 1890

5. Appointment of receiver—Duty of Court—Order XL, rule 1, Civil Procedure Code, 1908.

The duty imposed upon a Court in appointing a receiver under the Civil Procedure Code, 1908, examined and discussed.

It does not necessarily follow from the provision in order XL, rule 1, of the Code that a Court appointing a receiver may, if need be, remove the person in whose possession or custody the property in suit may be, from the possession or custody thereof, and commit the same to the custody or management of the receiver; or from the provision that the Court may grant to the receiver all such powers as are therein described, that the Court can authorise a receiver to enter upon immovable property in the possession of another person, without his consent, in order to take an inventory of all such property as the plaintiff may indicate as the property in dispute. KAFUR CHAND v. NARINJAN LAL. 107 P R 1895

7. Appointment of Receiver—In what cases appointment necessary—Discretion.

Held, that the appointment of a Receiver is a matter of discretion to be governed by all the circumstances of each particular case, one of these being the probability of the plaintiff being ultimately entitled to a decree, that a case of necessity for such appointment for the realization, preservation, better custody or management of the property, the subject of suit, has to be established before the Court can exercise its power under order XL, rules 1 and 3, Civil Procedure Code, and that no such order should be given unless strong grounds are made out. A contracted to sell a house to B. On his failure to convey, B sued A for specific performance. A pleaded that at the time of sale he was not owner of the property, having previously gifted it to C and D. The first Court made C and D parties to the suit, and finding that the gift to them was invalid, decreed as against all defendants. C and D alone appealed, and the lower appellate Court holding that the gift was valid, dismissed the suit in toto.

Held, on appeal to the Chief Court, that C and D should not have been made parties to the suit as they relied on a title anterior to the sale to plaintiff, and that the lower appellate Court was wrong in dismissing the suit as against A as the original Court's decree did not proceed on grounds common to all the defendants. 2. Appeal—Appeal by one of several defendants—"Any ground common to all the defendants"—Civil Procedure Code, 1908, order XLI, rule 4—Procedure.

Plaintiff sued on a bond executed by one S. K., since deceased, and made the father, the brother, the son and the widow of S. K., joint defendants, alleging that the bond, though given by S. K., in his own name, was really executed by him in his capacity of manager of the joint-family, and that the money had been spent on family purposes. The plaint proceeded to describe the defendants as the representatives (kaim makam) of S. K., and as in possession of property as members of a joint-family. The widow of S. K. and his son did not appear and proceedings against them were ex parte. The father and brother pleaded that they and S. K. were never joint; that S. K. had no power to bind them, and they had no assets of S. K. in their possession. The first Court held that the family was a joint one and gave a decree against all the defendants. From his decree the brother alone appealed to the Divisional Judge, who set aside the decree so far as the appellant's own personal liability was concerned, but reserved the rights of his co-defendants to claim contribution of his share for payment of the decree. The brother thereupon preferred a further appeal to the Chief Court and urged, inter alia, that the Divisional Court should have discharged the other defendants also on his appeal which was against the whole decree of the first Court based on "a ground common to them all."

Order XLI, rule 4—concld.

Held, that though the decree of the first Court proceeded against all the defendants upon the common ground that they, as members of a joint-family, were bound by the acts of their manager, S. K., there was also a special ground in support of it which affected only the representative of S. K.,—viz., that S. K. was the person who executed the bond and his representative was therefore liable in any event—and that order XLI, rule 4 of the Civil Procedure Code had no application to a decree of this description, it being necessary for the legitimate exercise of the power given by that section that "the common ground" therein referred to should be the only basis of the decree under appeal.

Semble: The use of the power given by order XLI, rule 4 of the Code to Courts of Appeal is discretionary with the latter and not imperative, though the discretion must be exercised in a logical and reasonable manner.

Security for costs—Recoverg of costs from surety in execution or by separate suit—Liability of surety if decree against principal debtor is barred by limitation.

A. J. was plaintiff-appellant in an appeal pending in the High Court at Allahabad and was required under order XLI, rule 10, Civil Procedure Code, to give security for the costs of the appeal. Pursuant to that order, A. J. tendered a security bond dated 8th September 1881, by which A. S. (defendant in the present suit) agreed to be responsible to the extent of Rs. 1,400, hypothecating a haveli situate at Sujanpur in the Gurdaspur District to secure the said sum.

On 5th April 1882, A. J.'s appeal to the High Court was dismissed with costs; and on 23rd June 1890 the defendant-respondent in that appeal filed a suit against A. S. for recovery of Rs 1,400 on the instrument of 8th September 1881, execution of the High Court decree for costs against A. J., the principal debtor, having meanwhile become barred by limitation.

Held, following No. 109 *P. 1. Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), order XLI, rules 11, 12 and 35—Dismissal of appeal on merits, day of which notice has not been given to appellant—Appellant entitled to notice though at time of filing appeal he says he does not intend to appear at the preliminary hearing—Necessity for drawing up decree when appellate Court dismisses appeal at preliminary hearing—Necessity for Judge to sign decrees himself.

An appellate Court is bound under order XLI, rules 11 and 12 of the Civil Procedure Code to fix a date for hearing the appellant or his pleader; and the mere fact that an appellant on the date of filing an appeal may say that he does not intend to appear at the preliminary hearing cannot set aside the clear provision of the law, or justify an appellate Court, who has not fixed a day for hearing the appeal, in disposing of it on the merits on a day of which notice has not been given to the appellant.

There is nothing in order XLI, rule 35 of the Civil Procedure Code which shows that a decree is unnecessary when an appellate Court confirms the order of an original Court at a preliminary hearing.

Under order XX, rule 7 and order XLI, rule 35 of the Code, a Judge is clearly bound to sign decrees himself, after he has satisfied himself that they have been drawn up in accordance with the judgment: he has no authority to delegate the signing of decrees to a subordinate ministerial officer. 2. Appeal—Non-appearance of appellant —Dismissal for default.

If on the day fixed in that behalf for the hearing of an appeal, the appellant does not attend in person or by his pleader, the appeal shall be dismissed for default (section 551, Civil Procedure Code, and section 88,

3. Appeal dismissed for default—Notice to appellant of time and place for hearing.

In the matter of fixing dates and places for hearing suits and appeals, Revenue Courts are bound by the same rules as Civil Courts.

Held therefore, that where the Collector disposed of an appeal in camp, no notice of the place for hearing being given by him—an application under order XLI, rule 19, Civil Procedure Code, to restore the appeal being rejected by the Collector, which order was upheld by the Commissioner on appeal—the proceedings of both the lower Appellate Courts must be set aside with a direction to the Collector to re-hear the appeal, after fixing a date and place for this purpose and giving notice thereof to the parties.

The defendant filed an appeal in the Commissioner's Court. The practice of the Court was to permit appellants to deposit their appeal in a box.

The appellant's appeal was taken up several days after being so deposited, but the appellant, to whom notice had not been given, not appearing, it was dismissed in default.

Held, that as required by order XLI, rule 11, Civil Procedure Code, the Commissioner should have fixed a day for hearing the appellant or his pleader, and that the appeal must be remanded to him for rehearing. GURDIT SINGH v. SARDAR JAWALA SINGH.

5. Decree of first Court reversed by Divisional Court—Further appeal dismissed without summoning respondent—Civil Procedure Code, 1908, order XLI, rule 11—"Decree"—Application for execution—Costs—Procedure

Plaintiff's suit was dismissed by the first Court, but on appeal his claim was decreed by the Divisional Court, the decree sheet of the latter Court expressly stating that plaintiff's costs of the original suit were to be paid by defendant. A further appeal by the defendant to the Chief Court was dismissed without summoning the respondent. Plaintiff applied for execution of the decree for costs, but was only awarded costs of the Appellate Court, those of the first Court not being allowed as the original decree of that Court had been against plaintiff and no fresh decree had been drawn up. Plaintiff was directed to apply for amendment of the decree, but when he did so, he was informed that the Court had no power to amend as the final decree was that of the Divisional Court. The plaintiff thereupon applied to the Divisional Judge, who on the same principles referred him to the Chief Court.

CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE, 1908 —contd.

Order XLI, rule 11—concld.

Held, that the only subsisting decree in the case was that of the Divisional Court, confirmed by the Chief Court, and that no amendment of the decree of the first Court was necessary for the purposes of execution, all that was needed being to tax the costs of the first Court by calculating the costs in the original suit from the record.

Where an Appellate Court rejects an appeal without summoning the respondent, a decree should be drawn up in accordance with the judgment in the usual manner. There is, however, no rule about this, and in most instances it is not necessary for any practical purposes. SHERA v. RAMMAN SHAH.

1. Dismissal of appeal for default in absence of all the appellants—Application for re-admission by one appellant on plea of illness—Sufficient cause for re-admission of appeal.

Held, that where an appeal is dismissed for default owing to the absence of all three appellants, and subsequently one of the three applies to have it revived on the ground of his absence being due to illness, this is not a sufficient cause for re-admitting the appeal in the sense of order XLI, rule 19, Civil Procedure Code. 2. Refusal to re-admit appeal dismissed in default—"Sufficient cause."

Notice of the date fixed for the adjourned hearing of an appeal, under order XLI, rule 11 of the Code, had in this case been duly given to an appellant. He left the station and his pleader having cases elsewhere left the Court on the day fixed, though he was told the case would be heard. It was called on within business hours and dismissed in default. An application for re-admission was rejected on the ground that sufficient cause had not been shown. On appeal to the Chief Court, stress was laid on the Court's Circular IV of 1887.

Held, that although under order XLI, rule 11 of the Code, a day and not a particular hour is to be fixed for the hearing, yet when the appeal is dismissed for default, the appellant is required by order XLI, rule 19 to show cause for non-attendance at the time when the appeal was called on for hearing.

sion by one appellant—No reason given for absence of co-appellant—Meaning of term "the appellant."

M. D. and S. B., defendants in a pre-emption suit, appealed from a decree passed against them to the District Judge, but, as they did not attend either in person or by pleader on the day fixed for the hearing, the appeal was dismissed for default. On the same day S. B. applied under order XLI, rule 19 of the Civil Procedure Code for re-admission of the appeal, giving reasons for his non-appearance but none for that of M. D. On the day fixed for the hearing of the application M. D.'s pleader appeared with S. B. and contended that the application should be considered as having been made by M. D. as well as by S. B. The District Judge overruled this contention and, relying on No. 33 P. R. 1888, held the term "the appellant" in order XLI, rule 19 meant the appellants, jointly and severally, and that the incapacity of one appellant from appearing was no proof that "the appellant" was prevented from appearing. The appeal being dismissed, the appellants applied to the Chief Court.

Held, that the application by S. B., giving reasons for his non-appearance and making no reference to M. D., was not an application by or on behalf of M. D.

Held further, that the term "the appellant" as used in order XLI, rules 17 and 19 of the Code includes a sole appellant, or a group of appellants or one or more members of a group of appellants.

Joinder of respondents on appeal—"Interested in the result of appeal"—Meaning of.

A., B., C. and D. filed a suit for the recovery of certain moneys from the defendant. The first Court dismissed their suit in toto. From that decision all the plaintiffs appealed, but the Divisional Judge only accepted A.'s appeal, and rejected that of B., C. and D. The defendant filed a further appeal against the decree of the Divisional Judge. On the day of the hearing an application was filed on behalf of B., C. and D. that they might be joined as respondents under order XLI, rule 20 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

Held, that the petitioners were not "interested in the result of the appeal" within the meaning of order XLI, rule 20 of the Code of Civil Procedure, as their claim had been disallowed by both the lower Courts, and they had not appealed and could not be granted a

1. Order XLI, rules 22, 25, 26—What objection (verbal or written) under former section is required—Power of Court under order XLI, rules 25, 26 to decide a question in absence of any objection under order XLI, rule 22.

Plaintiff sued for possession of certain land which he alleged he had purchased from defendant. He stamped his plaint as for a claim valued at Rs. 150. The original Court gave plaintiff a decree for Rs. 300, the amount of the purchase-money said to have been paid, on the ground that defendant had no legal power to sell the land. Plaintiff appealed to the Deputy Commissioner, asking for possession of the land instead of a refund of the purchase-money: the appeal was dismissed, and the Deputy Commissioner also set aside the money decree for Rs. 300, (believing that plaintiff had not paid the defendant) without any written objection taken by defendant under order XLI, rule 22, Civil Procedure Code.

Held per LINDSAY, J., that as defendant had not taken proper objection under order XLI, rule 22, the Deputy Commissioner had no jurisdiction to reverse the money decree of the original Court, which would accordingly be affirmed.

Held, per CAMPBELL, J., that as plaintiff had not sued for a refund of the purchase-money, and as the stamp on his plaint was not sufficient to cover the amount, and moreover as plaintiff himself appealed from the decree awarding him Rs. :00 instead of possession, the Deputy Commissioner was competent to reverse the decree without giving the plaintiff other relief. Held also, that a verbal objection under order XLI, rule 22 is sufficient.

Held, per CUNNINGHAM, J., that the Deputy Commissioner was justified in reversing the order of the first Court, as under order XLI, rules 25, 26 the Appellate Court may raise and decide any question of fact essential to

2. Notice of objection—Respondent raising plea of res judicata decided against him in lower Court.

A preliminary question having been raised for the defendant-respondents at the hearing of an appeal, that the plaintiffs' suit was barred as a res judicata, which objection had been overruled in the Court below, it was objected on behalf of the appellants that no notice of objection had been given under order XLI, rule 22, Civil Procedure Code.

Held, that no notice was necessary, as the defendants were not objecting to the decree which was in their favour, but desired to support the decree on a ground decided against them in the Court below. DHARM SINGH v. ATTAR SINGH. 59 P R 1886

3. Right of one co-respondent to take an objection to the decree as against another co-respondent in the appeal—Separate appeal.

Held, that the language of order XLI, rule 22 of the Civil Procedure Code is not wide enough to permit a plaintiff-respondent, on the appeal of one defendant, to take any objection which the plaintiff could have taken by way of appeal against another defendant who is respondent in the appeal. The true interpretation of the section is that which interprets respondent as limited to a respondent in relation to the appellant, and on this interpretation the section does not permit one co-respondent to take an objection to the decree as against another co-respondent in the appeal.

The proper mode of proceeding in order to raise a question as between the plaintiff and a defendant in an original suit, who are co-respondents in an appeal by another defendant, is by a separate appeal by the plaintiff against the non-appealing defendant: and when the objection as between such co-respondents is taken within the period of limitation for an appeal by the objector against the co-respondent, and is otherwise not open to exception, the defect is only one of form, and might be overlooked, the objection being treated as an appeal, which in substance it is. But where the objection is taken after the period for an appeal has expired, it cannot be entertained as an appeal until the delay has been satisfactorily accounted for. 4. Right of respondent to support decree upon ground decided against him in lower Court—Written notice of objection, when necessary.

Order XLI, rule 22 of the Code of Civil Procedure draws a clear distinction between a respondent supporting a decree upon grounds decided against him in the Court below, and his taking an objection to the decree, which he might have taken by way of appeal. In the former case the respondent may support the decree in the manner indicated at the hearing, although he may not have filed any written notice of his intention to do so. But where the respondent means to object to the decree itself, in that case the section requires that a notice of such an objection in form of a memorandum, complying with the provisions of order XLI, rule 22, shall be filed not less than seven days before the date fixed for the hearing of the appeal. Dharm Singh v. Attar Singh (No. 59 *P. 6. Alienation by widow—Necessity—Suit by collaterals dismissed on appeal without notice being issued to respondents—Further appeal—Right of respondents, who had filed no cross-objections, to support decree by objection, going to the root of decree—Civil Procedure Code, 1908, order XLI, rules 11 and 22.

In a suit by plaintiffs, as collateral of one M. B., to have it declared that a sale by his widow should not affect their reversionary rights, defendants pleaded that plaintiffs were not the collaterals of, or co-sharers with, M. B., or residents of the village where the land in dispute was situate, and, further, that the sale was for necessary purposes. The first Court found that plaintiffs were the collaterals of M. B., but that necessity had been proved in respect of the whole of the consideration and gave a decree in favour of plaintiffs on payment of this amount. Plaintiffs alone appealed, and their appeal was dismissed by the Divisional Judge under order XLI, rule 11, Civil Procedure Code. Plaintiffs having preferred a further appeal to the Chief Court, respondents, who had neither appealed from the finding of the first Court as to plaintiffs being the collaterals of M. B., nor filed any cross-objections, endeavoured to support the decrees of the lower Courts on the ground that plaintiffs had no locus standi.

Held, that it was not open to respondents to seek to maintain so much of the decrees as found the whole consideration to be for necessity, by shewing that the suit should have been dismissed in limine on the ground that plaintiffs had no locus standi.

The first and second paragraphs of order XLI, rule 22, Civil Procedure Code, are not on the same footing, and a decree cannot be supported by an objection going to the root of that decree. RULDA KHAN v. MUSSAMMAT KANDI. 25 P R 1897

7. Specific performance of contract—Specific Relief Act, 1877, sections 12, 20, 22—Discretion of Court—Decree of lower Court reversed on respondents' cross-objections—Civil Procedure Code, section 561—Appeal from part only of decree.

One D. D. having alienated his rights in a certain shop to one T. R., defendant was about to sue the latter for pre-emption when it was agreed between them that T. R. should sell his rights to defendants for Rs 2,000. Thereupon defendant entered into an agreement with plaintiffs to the following effect:—That defendant should pay Rs. 350, and plaintiffs the balance of the said Rs. 2,000 through defendant, to T. R.; that plaintiffs should bear all incidental expenses; that thereafter plaintiffs should be put into possession of three-fourths of the shop, one-fourth remaining with defendant, and that in the event of any breach of the said agreement, the party in default should pay the other party Rs. 500. A question having arisen subsequently as to what sum should be entered in the sale deed as consideration for the three-fourths part of the shop, the deed of sale was not executed, and the parties separated. Plaintiffs thereupon instituted the present suit, and alleged that defendant had given them possession of three-fourths of the shop, and had subsequently dispossessed them. They prayed that they might be restored to possession, and that defendant might be ordered to execute a conveyance in their favour, the latter portion of the prayer being inserted in the heading of the plaint, and not (presumably by an oversight) at the end of it. The first Court gave plaintiffs a decree in the terms of their prayer, but the Divisional Judge, on appeal, though finding all the facts in plaintiffs' favour, modified the decree of the first Court by granting them a decree merely for the Rs. 500, on the ground that there had been no complete constructive possession of the shop by plaintiffs, and because the suit was not one for specific performance. From this decree defendant appealed to the Chief Court and plaintiff filed cross-objections under order XLI, rule 22, Civil Procedure Code. For defendant it was contended that the said cross-objections were not maintainable on the ground that defendant had appealed only against a portion of the decree of the lower Appellate Court.

Held, overruling the objection, that the cross-objections were maintainable under order XLI, rule 22 of the Code.

Held, further, without considering defendant's appeal that plaintiffs' cross-objections must be allowed, on the ground that the suit as laid was for specific performance of a contract which, under the circumstances, was a proper contract to be specifically enforced, and none the less so, because a sum was named in it as the amount to be paid in case of its breach by the party in default, the fact that in this case the party in default was not willing to pay such sum being an additional reason for specifically enforcing the said contract.

According to section 22 of the Specific Relief Act, jurisdiction to decree specific performance is discretionary, but the discretion of Court is not arbitrary, but sound and reasonable, guided by judicial principles and capable of correction by a Court of Appeal. the merits of the preliminary point—Suit decreed exparte against one defendant and dismissed against another defendant—Liability of defendant against whom suit was dismissed to be again impleaded after the setting aside of the exparte decree—Finality of order passed by Munsif in case withdrawn from Small Cause Court and transferred to him under section 24, Civil Procedure Code—Validity of proceedings following order of remand passed on an appeal heard without jurisdiction.

Plaintiff having sued two defendants, S. and T., in the Cantonment Small Cause Court for Rs. 90, the Judge dismissed the suit as against T., and decreed Rs. 81 exparte against S. on May 14th, 1885. The same day S. applied for the exparte decree to be set aside, which was done after notice had been given to the plaintiff and T., and the case was adjourned to a further date. Meanwhile the Judge of the Court quitted his office, and was succeeded by a Judge whose power was limited to cases not exceeding Rs. 50 in value. Thereupon, on a reference by the Judge to the District Court, an order was passed transferring the case to the Court of the Munsif, and both defendants were summoned. The Munsif, referring to the decree of the 14th May, ordered that T. be considered released from the suit, and having tried the suit, eventually dismissed it as against S. on the merits. Plaintiff then appealed to the District Judge as against S. only, not urging in the grounds of appeal that T. was responsible, but the District Judge after adding T. as a respondent held, (1) that an appeal lay; (2) that T. must be made a party to the suit and the case be heard on its merits, and he remanded the case under section 562, Civil Procedure Code, to the Munsif to be retried as against both defendants.

On an appeal to the Chief Court by T. from the above order of remand, held that it was competent to T. to contend in such appeal that the decision of the District Judge was wrong upon the preliminary point urged in the District Court, viz., whether any appeal lay to that Court, and also to contend that the decision of the District Judge was wrong upon the question whether the Munsif could entertain the suit against T., even if the contention that the remand ought not to have been made under Order XLI, rule 23 was not maintainable.

Held further, that the appellant was entitled to succeed upon both the above points, first, because the decree of May 14th had terminated the suit as between the plaintiff and T. before the transfer of the suit from the Small Cause Court to the Munsif, such decree never having been set aside as between the plaintiff and T., and secondly, because the decree of the Munsif was, by reason of the last clause of section 24, Civil Procedure Code, not open to appeal.

It appeared in the above case that the order of remand made by the District Judge under Order XLI, rule 23 of the Code had been carried out, and an exparte decree been made by the Munsif against T.

Held, that the validity of such subsequent proceedings in the present case depended upon the validity of the order of remand: that the defendant T., who had not since appeared in the Munsif's Court or accepted the order of remand as valid, would be entitled to have the proceedings set aside even if they had been made in pursuance of the order of a competent Court, and that a fortiori he was so entitled when the order was made on an appeal heard without jurisdiction. TARA SINGH v. GURDITTA.

3. Appeal from order of remand—Completion of proceedings under remand order pending the hearing of the appeal—Appellant refusing to recognize the jurisdiction of the Court acting under the remand—Reversal of order of remand.

On an appeal from an order of remand under order XLI, rule 23, Civil Procedure Code, which was admittedly wrong in so far as it ought to have been made under Order XLI, rule 25 of the Code, it appeared that, while the appeal was pending, the remand order had been carried out and a new decision passed in favour of the present respondent. It further appeared that though the lower Court had declined to stay proceedings merely on the ground that an appeal had been filed, the appellant had declined to produce evidence, or to recognize the jurisdiction of the Court acting under the remand, which had accordingly proceeded to judgment under Order XVII, rule 3, of the Code.

Held that, under the above circumstances the appellant was entitled to an order accepting his appeal, and modifying the order of the lower Court under Order XLI, rule 23 so as to convert it into one under Order XLI, rule 25, Civil Procedure Code under which section the lower Court must re-decide the case itself. Ali Bahadar Khan v. Raja Aladad Khan (No. 129 *P. 4. And section 107—Dismissal of appeal by lower Appellate Court on preliminary ground—Reversal of decision on preliminary point by Court of second appeal—Remand to lower Court for decision on merits.

Where the lower Appeallate Court refused to hear an appeal on the ground that the appellant had no locus standi to appeal without even looking into the merits, which decision was reversed on second appeal on the ground that the said appellant was competent to appeal, held that the proper course under the above circumstances was to remit the appeal under Order XLI, rule 23 (read with section 107 of the Code) to the Court which was by law authorized and required to hear it, as a Court of second appeal is not expected, much less bound by law, to perform functions which the Court of first appeal ought to have performed and has not entered upon at all. RAM DITTA v. ALLAYAR.

5. Scope of appeal from order of remand—Preliminary point.

Held that, when in a case appealable to the Chief Court there is an order of remand under Order XLI, rule 23 of the Civil Procedure Code, the appeal against the decision on the preliminary point lies to that Court in regard to the merits of the decision on that point, as well as in regard to the form of the order, as not being warranted by the terms of Order XLI, rule 23 KHALAS v. KALYAN SINGH.

Section 104, Civil Procedure Code, 1908, gives a person aggrieved by an order passed under Order XLI, rule 23 of the said Code an unqualified right of appeal from an order remanding a case, and the mere fact that the party has submitted to the proceedings resulting from such order of remand, or that such remand order has been carried out by the lower Court, does not in any way operate to restrict or justify the Appellate Court in declining to hear the appeal.

9. Arbitration—Consent of all the parties to the suit—Schedule II, P. 1, Civil Procedure Code, 1908—Appellate Court remanding an appeal under Order XLI, rule 23 as regards defendant and dismissing the appeal as regards the other defendants—More than one decree in same suit.

J. sued D. B., the mother of the girl, and the girl's three uncles, for Rs. 1,000 damages for an alleged breach of a betrothal contract. After settlement of issues, the plaintiff and the three male defendants agreed to refer the matters in dispute to arbitration under the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code. D. B., the mother, did not sign the agreement, but K. M., one of the uncles, stated that he was representing her, and that he joined her in the reference to arbitration with her full knowledge and consent.

An award was given in favour of the plaintiff, upon which judgment and decree followed against all four defendants.

Upon appeal by the defendants, the Divisional Judge held that the award was inoperative as regards D. B., unless it could be shown that she had ratified the submission to arbitration, but that the award was good as regards the parties who had consented to the reference. The Divisional Judge accordingly remanded the case under Order XLI, rule 23, Civil Procedure Code, for decision as regards D. B., and dismissed the appeal as regards the three male defendants.

Held, on further appeal that the decree of the Divisional Judge was bad in law. He could not legally dispose of the appeal finally as regards the three male defendants and re-open the case by a remand as regards the fourth,—the almost inevitable result of such procedure being that, eventually, there would be more than one and possibly conflicting decrees, in the one suit.

Observations on the question whether D. B. was a party to the reference to arbitration, No. 4 P. R., 1882, (F. B.), and No. 170 P. R., 1883, referred to. KHAN MUHAMMD v. JALAL-UD-DIN. 3 P R 1892

10. Remand order made under Order XLI, rule 23, Civil Procedure Code—Duty of Appellate Court hearing appeal from such order under section 104.

An Appellate Court hearing an appeal preferred under section 104, Civil Procedure Code, 1908, from an order of remand passed under Order XLI, rule 23 by a subordinate Appellate Court is not necessarily confined to considering the question, whether the order of remand impugned is justified by the terms of the section, but may, when a preliminary point is found to exist, enter into and decide upon the merits of such preliminary point. But as soon as it is held that the remand order appealed from is not warranted by the terms of Order XLI, rule 23 inasmuch as the case has not been disposed of by the

Held by the Full Bench, that it is open to the Chief Court when hearing an appeal, under section 104 of the Civil Procedure Code, from an order under Order XLI, rule 23 of the Code, remanding a case, when the order is that of a District Judge exercising appellate jurisdiction and the case is a small cause under Rs. 500 in value, in which the District Judge's decree would be final to decide upon the merits of the preliminary point upon which the first Court disposed of the suit, and that its attention is not confined to the question whether the right procedure has been followed in ordering the remand under Order XLI, rule 23, Civil Procedure Code.

12. Civil Procedure Code, 1908, Order XVIII, rules 5 and 8 and Order XLI, rule 23—Evidence improperly recorded by first Court—Power of Appellate Court to remand cause on such ground—Procedure.

An Appellate Court remanded a cause under Order XLI, rule 23 of the Civil Procedure Code, for re-decision, on the ground that the evidence had been entirely recorded by a Muharrir, and that the provisions of Order XVIII, rules 5 and 8, regarding the mode in which evidence should be recorded, had not been observed. It appeared, however, from the record that while the evidence had been fully recorded by the Muharrir under Order XVIII, rule 5, a memorandum of the evidence of each witness had been made by the Judge of the first Court in his own handwriting under Order XVIII, rule 8, though there appeared to be reason to believe that such memorandum was written all at one time after the whole of the evidence had been taken.

Held, that the order of remand was improper, even on the facts as stated by the Appellate Court, and that the irregularity in the procedure of the first Court, even if committed, was no reason for setting aside the whole procedure. BHAGWAN DAS v. JIWAN. 45 P R 1896

Appeal—Civil Procedure Code, 1908, Order VI, rule 17, Order XLI, rule 23.

Plaintiff in execution of a decree against one D. having attached certain land belonging to the latter, the defendant in the present suit became surety for D. for the payment of Rs. 50 a year. The Tahsildar in forwarding the security to the execution Court recommended that should there be any default by the surety in paying the annual sum, the decree-holder should obtain possession of the land. The execution Court, apparently considering the security sufficient, filed the proceedings and made no orders on the Tahsildar's recommendation. The surety made default in paying the Rs. 50 due for Sambat 1952, and plaintiff sued him in respect thereof. The first Court held that D. should have been made a co-defendant and that plaintiff should also have sued for the possession of the land attached by him as aforesaid. It, therefore, returned the plaint for amendment. Plaintiff appealed to the District Judge, who remanded the case under Order XLI, rule 23, for decision on the merits.

Held, that as no decree has been passed by the first Court, and the appeal to the District Judge was under section 104, of the Civil Procedure Code, the District Judge erred in quoting Order XLI, rule 23 of the Code, in his order, which should simply have set aside that of the first Court and directed it to decide the case on the plaint as it stood.

But held that, the order of the first Court in returning the plaint being wrong, the error in the order of the District Judge was immaterial. JAHAN KHAN v. CHANDA SINGH. 59 P R 1896

14. Order of remand under Order XLI, rule 23, Civil Procedure Code 1908,—Erroneous order—Powers and duties of Chief Court when hearing appeal from such order.

Held, that when a certain fact is the basis of a suit, and there is no suggestion that the inquiry into that fact by the first Court has been insufficient or imperfect, and the lower Appellate Court, differing from the Court of first instance as to the existence of that fact, has remanded the suit under Order XLI, rule 23 of the Code of Civil Procedure, the Chief Court, when hearing an appeal from the order of remand, is entitled, when it finds that the order of remand should not have been made under that section, to itself consider and decide upon the truth of such fact, and is not bound to return the appeal to the lower Appellate Court for decision thereon. SANT RAM v. MUSSAMMAT MOHAN DEVI. 56 P R 1898

15. Appeal and cross-objection—Power of appellant to defeat cross-objections by withdrawing from appeal—Case remanded to lower Appellate Court under Order XLI, rule 23, Civil Procedure Code—Default of appellant—Proper order for lower Appellate Courts to pass.

The first Court having decreed plaintiff's suit for pre-emption at Rs. 492, plaintiff appealed to the Divisional Court as to the price, and defendant cross-objected that plaintiff's suit had not been filed by a duly qualified agent. The Divisional Court dismissed the suit on the latter ground, whereupon plaintiff appealed to the Chief Court, which remanded the case to the lower Appellate Court, under Order XLI, rule 23 of the Civil Procedure Code, for decision as to whether plaintiff's alleged agent had been duly authorised to institute the suit, and for disposal of the appeal if the suit were found to be within limitation. At the date fixed for hearing on the remand, plaintiff failed to appear, whereupon the lower Appellate Court passed an order to the effect that the appeal must be dismissed for plaintiffs' default, and that, therefore, defendants' cross-objection failed, and could not be entertained.

Held, that inasmuch as the case had been remanded by the Chief Court merely in order to give plaintiff an opportunity of proving that his alleged agent was duly authorized to institute the suit, the lower Appellate Court should have held, on plaintiff's default, that the previous order of the Divisional Court stood.

Held further, that when once an appeal has come to a hearing, the Court is seized of the appeal, and an appellant cannot in such a case defeat a cross-objection by withdrawing from the appeal. MUHAMMAD HUSSAIN v. ABDUL RAHMAN. 86 P R 1898

16. Preliminary issue as to whether defendant was a minor at time of suit—Issue decided against defendant by first Court, but suit dismissed on the merits—Finding by lower Appellate Court that defendant was a minor—Case remanded for trial after appointment of guardian ad litem—Procedure—Civil Procedure Code, 1908, Order XXXII, rules 3, 4, 5, Order XLI, rule 23, section 107.

On the objection by the mother of the defendant that the latter was a minor, and that a guardian ad litem should be appointed for him, the Court of first instance framed a preliminary issue as to defendant's age, and, finding that he was not a minor, framed other issues on the merits and eventually dismissed the suit. Plaintiff appealed to the Divisional Court, and the defendant filed cross-objections, based on the ground that he was a minor at the date of suit. The Divisional Court found that defendant was a minor as alleged, and remanded the case, under Order XLI, rule 23 of the Civil Procedure Code, for trial, after appointment of a guardian ad litem. From this order plaintiff appealed to the Chief Court, and it was contended on his behalf that as the suit had not been decided on a preliminary point the order of remand under Order XLI, rule 23 was illegal.

Held, that Order XLI, rule 23 of the Code was not a bar to the exercise by an Appellate Court of the jurisdiction conferred by Order XXXII, rules 3, 4, 5, section 107 under which the proper course to be adopted in the present case was to set aside all the proceedings subsequent to the filing of the plaint, inasmuch as, on the finding of the lower Appellate Court, that defendant was a minor at date of suit, they were void as being coram non judice. The Court so far modified the order of the Divisionol Court as to substitute Order XXXII, rules 3, 4, 5, section 107 for Order XLI, rule 23. AHMAD MIRZA KHAN v. HIRA LAL. 23 P R 1899

17. And section 104—Appeal from order of remand—Scope of such appeal.

Held, that under section 104, Civil Procedure Code, no appeal lies from an order of remand where the party does not seek either to traverse the remand order passed by the Appellate Court or its finding upon the preliminary point as to which it has differed from the first Court, but seeks to traverse the decision as to a preliminary point in which both the Courts have concurred and in regard to which no reference has been made under Order XLI, rule 23. SAYAD MUHAMMAD ISHAQ v. MOHRU MAL. 28 P R 1902

18. And section 104—Appeal from order of remand—Completion of proceedings under remand order.

Held, that under section 104, Civil Procedure Code an appeal lies from an order of remand under Order XLI, rule 23, and the mere fact that such an order has been carried out by the lower Court does not bar the jurisdiction of the Chief Court to entertain the appeal. JAG LAL v. SHIB LAL. 37 P R 1902

19. Remand—Preliminary point.

Where a Munsif had decided a suit on the main issues and had not decided it upon a preliminary point and on appeal the Appellate Court had not reversed the decision of the first Court upon such points but had remanded the case for decision upon the preliminary point under Order XLI, rule 23, Civil Procedure Code, the remand order was illegal as the suit had not been disposed of upon a preliminary point within the meaning of that order. 20. And section 104—Appeal from order of an Appellate Court—Preliminary point Court not bound by findings of fact of Court below—Document operating to declare rights to immovable property—Registration Act, 1877, section 17.

Plaintiff sued for possession of certain land mortgaged to him by defendant No. 1, and joined defendants Nos. 2 and 3 as subsequent mortgagees in possession. Defendant No. 1 pleaded relinquishment by plaintiff and produced a receipt; defendants 2 and 3 pleaded ignorance of plaintiff's mortgage. The first Court without entering into the pleas of defendants 2 and 3 dismissed the suit on the ground that the plaintiff had relinquished the land in suit. The Divisional Judge reversed his decree as he considered that the receipt produced by defendant No. 1, ought to have been registered and remanded the case under Order XLI, rule 23, Civil Procedure Code.

Held, that as the suit had been disposed of upon a preliminary point the remand under Order XLI, rule 23, was right.

Held also, following the Full Bench ruling in Bhai Wazira v. Chuhar Mal, that the Chief Court when hearing an appeal under section 104, Civil Procedure Code, is not bound to accept the finding of the lower Appellate Court.

Held, on the merits, that the receipt in question required to be registered as it purported to be an acknowledgment that the mortgage had been redeemed. Khalas v. Kalyan Singh, (109 *P. 21. And section 104—Appeal from order of remand in an unclassed suit under Rupees 200 in value—Power of Chief Court to go into the merits on appeal from a remand order.

Held, by the Full Bench, that in hearing an appeal under section 104, Civil Procedure Code, the Chief Court is not confined to the mere question of procedure: it can and should go into the merits of that preliminary point upon which the Lower Appellate Court has remanded the case under Order XLI, rule 23; and where in the preliminary point questions of law or custom are involved it can and should discuss those questions.

This application was granted, and a decree passed after the evidence had been recorded. On appeal the decree was set aside on the ground that the application for review should not have been granted, as no new and important matter or evidence had been discovered. Held, by the Chief Court that ordinarily the proper remedy for a person aggrieved by an order under section 158 is by way of appeal.

One Phusa, a Jain Jat, died childless leaving immovable property which in default of heirs reverted to the proprietary body of the village. 'A,' also a Jain Jat of the same village, claimed to be a collateral of the deceased and brought a suit against all the khewatdars of the village for recovery of possession. The suit was decreed. Among the defendants four alone applied for a review of judgment on the ground that they have discovered the pedigree table of the Settlement of 1863, which conclusively proves that the plaintiff was not a collateral of the deceased proprietor. The other defendants were neither impleaded in the review proceedings nor did they take any steps to become parties to it. After enquiry the Court granted the review and reversed the decree as to the petitioners without disturbing decree as to those defendants who were not parties to the review proceedings. Thereupon the remainder of the khewatdars appealed to the Divisional Judge urging that the claim of the plaintiff should have been dismissed not only as regards the share of the four petitioners but as regards all the defendants. The Divisional Judge accepted this view and dismissed the whole claim.

Held, that the Divisional Judge had no jurisdiction to reverse the decree of the first Court against the appellants, who being no party to the application for review, nor to the subsequent proceedings, had no locus standi to appeal to the Divisional Judge.

Order XLI, rule 4, Civil Procedure Code, has no application to applications for review; that section applies only to appeals and cannot be applied to reviews by analogy, for there is in effect no analogy between the two.

1. Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), order XLVII, rule 2—Application to whom "made" within the section.

The Divisional Bench having dismissed plaintiff's claim, he put in an application for review, which was heard by one of the Judges who constituted the Bench, who directed that the files should be sent for and the petitioner heard on a given date. Before that date the Divisional Bench was broken up, and the application was sent to the Judge who had succeeded the Bench to be heard by him, but he refused to hear the application.

Held, that as the application had been "made" within the meaning of order XLVII, rule 2 of the Civil Procedure Code, to one of the Judges who constituted the Bench which had decided the case, there was no reason why his successor should not take over the application for disposal. Aziz-ud-din v. Badar-ud-din (No. 134 *P. When an application, on specified grounds, for review of an interlocutory order is presented to the Judge who has passed the order sought to be reviewed and he thereupon passes an order for notice to issue to the opposite party to oppose the application, the application is "made" to that Judge within the meaning of order XLVII, rules 2 and 4 of the Civil Procedure Code, although the application be finally argued before, and be granted by, the successor of that Judge.

Order XLVII, rule 2 of the Code deals merely with matters of procedure, and the merits of an order granted under that section cannot be questioned in an appeal under order XLVII, rule 7.

Semble.—The fact that an appellant's written grounds of appeal do not show any ground for an appeal under order XLVII, rule 7 of the Code is not necessarily fatal if he can show aliunde that any such ground as is specified in that section exists upon the record of the lower Court.

1. Review of review—Competency of.

The language of order XLVII, rule 7, Civil Procedure Code, 1908, that "No application to review an order passed on review or on an application for a review shall be entertained" forbids any application for review of an order admitting or rejecting an application for review or of the judgment arrived at after re-hearing of the case under order XLVII, rule 8, whether that judgment affirms or varies the previous judgment, and though, in either case, it is followed by a new decree: in other words a review of a review is not competent.

The word "order" in the clause referred to is apparently not used in a technical sense as opposed to a decree, but as a comprehensive term to express the final adjudication of the Court after the application for review has been admitted and the case re-heard and includes both the judgment and the decree. CLUB—PERSONAL LIABILITY OF SECRETARY OF.

Plaintiff sued the defendant for the rent of house at Simla, known as the "Blessington Estate," for two-and-a-half years, viz., for half of 1885, and for 1886 and 1887, at Rs. 1,000 per annum, or in all Rs. 2,500. The plaintiff alleged that the estate had been demised by an Indenture of lease, dated October 1879, and made between plaintiff's predecessor in title and Henderson "for and on behalf of the governing body of the Agri-Horticultural Society of Simla" for a term of five years, from 1st January 1880, at a rent of Rs. 1,000 per annum: that Henderson held possession until 2nd March 1882, when he made over possession to Anderson, who continued to hold until the spring of 1884, when he made over possession to the defendant: and that defendant had used and occupied the house from the spring of 1884 to 31st December 1887, but had only paid rent to 1st June 1885. The defendant contended, in effect, that he had not used or occupied "Blessington" in any other capacity than that of Honorary Secretary of the Society or Blessington Lawn Tennis Club—which name had been adopted in lieu of that of the Agri-Horticultural Society of Simla—and that he had derived no personal profit from the income or profits of the estate. The Society or Club was an unincorporated body.

Both the lower Courts concurred in holding that the defendant was not personally liable and dismissed plaintiff's suit.

In appeal, it was contended that defendant was liable.

(1) As the owner of a proprietary Club, and having in that capacity used and occupied the house.

(2) As an agent of an informal Society incapable of being sued within the meaning of section 230, clause (3) of the Indian Contract Act.

(3) As one of the members of the Blessington Lawn Tennis Club, Held, that these contentions failed, because as to

(1) It assumed a state of facts which the evidence on the record directly contradicted.

(2) Among other reasons, assuming that the relationship of principal and agent existed between the Society and defendant, the Society could not correctly be described as a principal not liable to be sued, the true doctrine being, not that an unincorporated body like a Club or Society cannot be sued, but that it cannot be sued except in the names of all the individuals composing it.

(3) The liability of an individual member of a Club for debts incurred by the Club depends upon whether he has in any way pledged his personal credit and the evidence in the present case showed that the defendant did what he could to make it generally known that he was not undertaking any personal responsibility, and that he declined to incur any personal obligation. S., and no deduction being made of the fraction of the whole estate in regard to which P. S.'s suit was dismissed. It was found that plaintiffs' right to succeed as heirs of the last full owner was superior to that of the defendants, and that the defendants had not acquired by adverse possession or otherwise an absolute title to the estate. The claim was also held to be res judicata as regards two of the plaintiffs, the sons of P. S., but the question remained as to whether the remaining plaintiffs were entitled to a decree for the whole of the land or only for their respective shares, the shares of the two plaintiffs, whose father P. S sued before, being deducted.

Held, per Brandreth and Barkley, JJ., (Plowden J., dissenting), that P. S.'s share must be excluded from the decree, as the right of each plaintiff to a decree depended upon his own title and upon that title alone, and the defendants could successfully set up against any claim to P. S.'s share the plea, that on the plaintiffs' own showing P. S.'s sons were alone entitled to that share, and that the circumstance that the plaintiffs were co-heirs did not affect the case, as the share of each was ascertainable.

Held, per Plowden, J., that the plaintiffs other than the sons of P. S. were entitled to ignore altogether the proceedings taken by P. S. in respect of his share of the inheritance, and that the mere circumstance that the sons of P. S. had joined as co-plaintiffs did not preclude the other plaintiffs from recovering all that they claimed, even if that would have the effect of giving to these plaintiffs some of the land unsuccessfully claimed by P. S., and that the circumstance that the share of these plaintiffs could be ascertained did not affect their right to recover the whole. The fact that P. S. sued for a share and his suit was heard without objection, did not affect the other plaintiffs. A suit by one only of several co-heirs for his share is a suit which is open to objection by the defendant on the ground that one co-heir cannot sue without making the other co-heirs parties, and also on the ground that he ought to sue for the whole estate. If these objections are not taken, the suit may proceed and a decree may be made in it. But this cannot be held to oblige other co-heirs to sue for their shares in the estate instead of the whole when the whole remains in the possession of the defendants, nor can it affect their right to recover the whole. If the defendants have to undergo the trouble of contesting two suits instead of one, it is due to their not having objected in the proper manner and at the proper time to the maintenance of the suit brought by P. S. KESAR SINGH v. GANGA SINGH. 2 P R 1882

2. Suit for share in inheritance—Defendant claiming liquidation of plaintiffs' share of debt to him by deceased—Obligation of plaintiffs to submit to partition of charges against the estate—Separate suit—Unsecured debt.

Plaintiffs, who were co-heirs with the defendants in equal shares of the inheritance of one N., deceased, sued for recovery of their shares of the portion of the property of the said N. which had not been divided. One of the defendants contended that the plaintiffs, claiming to be co-heirs, were bound as such to liquidate their shares of a debt due by N. to him.

Held, that the plaintiffs could not be permitted by framing their suit so as merely to demand a partition of the property of the estate to evade their obligation to submit at the instance of the other co-heirs to a partition of the charges against the estate, their substantive right being only to a partition of the inheritance which comprised the charges as well as the property left by the deceased: nor could they insist that the co-heirs should be turned round to a separate suit to recover from them as co-heirs their share of a debt due by the deceased to the defendants, merely because that debt was not secured upon some specific portion of the estate. 22. Ejectment by others than the full proprietary body.

The user of shamilat land is very different from the occupation of a plot of private property. The owner of private lands may be taken conclusively to part with the property which another occupies without leave or license for seventeen years, but there are circumstances in the case of common land belonging to a village, to rebut any such presumption. A suit was brought by a lambardar, backed by the majority of the proprietors, who were then proceeding to partition, to eject an occupier of 17 years' standing. Thirty-eight proprietors were in favor of ejectment; and fourteen for the defendant's remaining. Held, that these fourteen should be joined as defendants; and on that being done, a decree might be passed to eject the occupier on giving compensation. 25. Hereditary cultivator.

Under the general system of property established in this province, a hereditary cultivator is not entitled to a share in the shamilat or common land of the village. 30. Sub-Proprietors' right.

In certain cases sub-proprietors may receive a proportionate share in the shamilat. Both parties were Gukkurs, the dominant tribe in the village. Appellants had been out of proprietary possession for 20 years and were recorded as malik qabzas; on this ground the lower Courts would not allow appellant a share in the shamilat. Held, that as the Settlement Officer had intermediately recognized a distinction between malik qabzas, who were Gukkurs, and malik qabzas who belonged to other castes, the rule which excluded sub-proprietors from a share in common land might be relaxed, and that appellants should receive a share in the shamilat proportionate to their khewat holding or actual possession. 36. Co-parceners—Allotment on breaking up.

The wajib-ul-arz gave to the lambardar the right of allocating shamilat land to the cultivators, and reserved the prior right to a coparcener to break up land bordering on his cultivated field; but it was not clear from the wajibul-arz whether sanction of a lambardar was required for breaking up shamilat land not situated on the borders of his field. The land in dispute did not border upon the cultivated fields of the plaintiff, who was a lambardar, nor of defendants, whose eldest brother was also a lambardar. The land was first broken up by lambardar, but plaintiff objected to this from the first, and never assented to defendants' possession. Held, that until application was made to divide the shamilat, the defendants' possession must be maintained, but not so as to necessitate allotment to them of the land in dispute on a partition of the shamilat, and that if the land should be allotted to another co-parcener, defendants must surrender possession. KURM v. HUSSUN ALI. 34 P R 1869

37. Transfer—Consent of joint proprietors.

With regard to village affairs, a temporary alienation of a portion of joint-property without the consent of the joint-owners may be valid. The allotment of a portion of shamilat land to a head lambardar is not a transfer which requires the consent of all the shareholders. JUGGUT SINGH v. BAGH SINGH. 4 P R 1870 Rev.

38. Gift of share in divided land—Right of donee to shamilat.

Defendants held certain shares in the divided land of the village by gift from the original proprietors. Held, that the defendants were entitled in virtue of their separate holdings to share in the common land according to the usual division of the profits of the common land among the proprietary body. MAHOMED SADIK v. ABDULLA. 52 P R 1871

39. Appropriation of part of shamilat—Assent of majority of proprietors disregarded.

The contention between the parties was as to whether a piece of shamilat land should be used for the site of a serai. Inasmuch as it appeared that the dispute had arisen out of the attempts of certain individual members of the proprietary body to get possession of a piece of shamilat ground for themselves, and that the object for which the ground was to be used was only colourable, the Chief Court held that, whatever might be the rights of disputing parties in a village community where a bonâ fide dispute had arisen as to the use of the common land, it could not allow the assent of the majority of the proprietors of the thoke to which the shamilat belonged, to outweigh in this case the declared wish of the minority. HIDAYAT ALI v. AKBAR ALI. 76 P R 1873

40. The proprietary body of mauza Chatera, Zillah Rohtak, gave a portion of the shamilat as dhol (or rent free) to a faqir. The proprietors of Pana Begwan, objecting to the conduct of the faqir, sued to oust him, the proprietors of Pana Chaja wishing to retain the grantee in possession. Held, that the suit of the proprietors of Pana Begwan would not lie; that their proper course was to apply for partition. RATU DAS v. INDRAJ. 40 P R 1875

41. Grazing—Rights of common pasture.

The wajib-ul-arz of village B was as follows: "The cattle of the entire village, without distinction of proprietors and non-proprietors, shall continue to graze in future in the same manner as they have grazed from old times; no grazing dues shall be collected." The plaintiffs resided elsewhere, and resorted to village B merely for the purposes of cultivation. Held, that their right to depasture cattle free of charge in village B was limited to such cattle as they bonâ fide used for cultivating the lands held by them in that village, and did not extend to all the cattle they might possess; but that the right extended to all parts of the waste of village B on which the proprietors grazed their cattle. A claim asserted by the proprietors of one village to common pasture in another, must be supported by the very fullest and clearest evidence when the wajib-ul-arz is silent on the point. BHUP SINGH v. SARDHA SINGH. 108 P R 1876

42. User by Kamins—Right to continue the user.

Where certain paper-makers had by the consent of the proprietary body erected trade-buildings on the common land a few years previously, and a partition had followed, held, that the purchaser from the proprietor to whom fell that portion on which the buildings stood could not eject the paper-makers. DASONDHI v. GHULAM ALI. 3 P R 1877

43. The plaintiffs, weavers, claimed the right to have and use holes or pits in the abadi for the purpose of their trade, the defendant, a proprietor, to whom that portion of the abadi had been allotted on partition, resisting the claim. The plaintiffs had used the holes for many years, and the lower Courts found that by custom they were entitled to use them.

Per BOULNOIS, J.—It is open to the proprietary body to allow persons to occupy part of the common land for their use and benefit in such a way as to acquire a right of user; and under some circumstances, especially after a long lapse of time, it is not open to the proprietary body, or individuals claiming under it, after a partition, to oust the occupants. It is not a question whether there has been occupation for 12 years or not.

Per BOULNOIS AND CAMPBELL, JJ.—The custom having been satisfactorily found by the lower Courts, the plaintiffs' claim must be admitted.

Per LINDSAY, J.—The custom had not been satisfactorily found, and in the absence of proof of custom, plaintiffs should establish an easement. DEWA SINGH v. BILLA. 4 P R 1877

44. Held, that a non-proprietor (tenant) can by long use and prescription obtain a right to use part of the common land for the purpose of his agricultural employment, i.e., by erecting a bara or cattle-trough on the common land.

Held further, that such a user will survive partition of the common land, so long as the non-proprietor (tenant) continues in the occupation of his cultivating land, and so long as he uses the bara as a tenant properly should. GHOUSA v. ABADAN. 34 P R 1877

45. Appropriation of shamilat for specific object—Dissent of minority of proprietors.

Held that, in the absence of any custom, the will of the majority of a village community cannot prevail against that of the minority when the question is one as to the disposal of the common property in such a way as to preclude all use of it by the owners. 46. Abadi—Village site—Sale of vacant site occupied by proprietor for many years—Consent of Co-sharers—Custom.

Where the abadi was recorded in the wajib-ul-arz as the common property of the village proprietors, held (no special custom being proved), that the fact of one of the proprietors having held a vacant site in the abadi gave him no right to sell it to one who was not a member of the village community, without the consent of the co-sharers. 48. Lease against wishes of proprietary body—lambardars, powers of, in respect of common land.

The Lambardars of the village of Rurki in the Rohtak district, gave a contract to K. for the manufacture of saltpetre out of certain lands which were the undivided common property of the village proprietors, 261 in number.

Four proprietors brought a suit against K. and the lambardars, to restrain K., the contractor, from manufacturing saltpetre, on the ground that they had not consented to the contract and objected to the manufacture. On taking the votes of the proprietary body, it was found that 162 objected and 102 were in favour of the manufacture being permitted.

Held, as the majority of the village proprietors were opposed to the grant of a lease for the manufacture of saltpetre from the common land of the village, as no custom was shown to exist in the locality under which lambardars had the power to grant such a lease in opposition to the wishes of the proprietary body, and as the lambardars had no such power in virtue of their office, that the plaintiffs were entitled to the relief claimed. 49. Malik Kabza—Right to share of common lands—Onus of proof.

The status of Malik Khudkasht or Malik Kabza does not ordinarily confer a right to share in the common lands of a village. Where, therefore, plaintiffs occupying that status sued for a declaration of their right to such share, held, that the burden of proving that they were entitled to it, lay upon them.

The fact that a Malik Khudkasht or Malik Kabza has been allowed to break up and cultivate portions of the common lands, without being called upon to pay anything more than the revenue and cesses assessed on such land, is not ordinarily sufficient to show that he holds the land as of right in virtue of his status as such Malik Khudkasht or Malik Kabza. 50. Right of one proprietor to sue for share of produce of portion of common land.

The plaintiff, who had established his right to a fourth share in the common land of the village, but had failed to obtain partition from the revenue authorities, sued the defendants, co-proprietors of the village, for the value of his share of the produce of a portion of the common land which they cultivated.

Held, that as the defendants did not cultivate as tenants of the plaintiff, and, were not liable to be ejected or have their rent enhanced in a suit brought by him alone, and as, moreover, they were rightly in possession of the land under a well defined and recognized title, the suit was not maintainable. 51. Sale of mango grove by majority of proprietors—Dissent of minority—Suit by purchasers to compel partition of trees.

Where a majority of the proprietary body sold to the plaintiffs the trees standing in a mango grove, which was joint undivided property of all the proprietors, whereupon the plaintiffs brought a suit to compel the dissentient proprietors to partition off their share in the trees.

Held, that the sale passed no interest whatever in the trees of the grove: that the plaintiffs could stand in no better position as against the defendants (the dissentient proprietors) who were no parties to the sale, than their own vendors. That these vendors could not before partition claim any particular trees as their own; and could not have claimed partition of the trees as distinct from the soil on which they stood; and that therefore plaintiffs' suit failed. 56. Acquiescence—Suit for cattle-enclosure—Long possession by plaintiff—Power of village proprietors to evict where possession has not lasted for 12 years—Customary right of occupant to retain possession.

Plaintiff sued to recover possession of a piece of land adjacent to and enjoyed with his house as a cattle-enclosure, on the ground of his long possession and recent dispossession by defendants. Defendants pleaded that the land was shamilat of the village, was not the plaintiff's cattle-yard, and had never been in his possession. The lower Courts found that plaintiff had held the cattle-enclosure for a long time, and accordingly held that his possession could not be disturbed by the defendants.

Held, that the judgments of the lower Courts could be supported on the simple ground that the occupation of the land adjacent to the plaintiff's residence as a cattle-enclosure had long been acquiesced in by the defendants, the village proprietors, and that such occupation by general custom was not liable to be determined at the mere will of the proprietors at any time if it had not lasted for 12 years, such acquiescence implying a tacit consent to the occupation of the enclosure as annexed to the residence, and that consent not being liable to be revoked merely at the caprice of those who gave it. Dasondhi v. Ghulam Ali (No. 3 of 1877, Civil), Dewa Singh v. Billa (No. 4 of 1877, Civil) and Ghousa v. Abadan (No. 34 of 1877, Civil) referred to. It is not competent to one or two co-sharers alone, and without the consent of the proprietary body, to take possession of a portion of the common land of the village and to alter its character in such a manner as to exclude permanently the remaining co-sharers from the possession or use of it.

Where therefore the defendants (who were three of the co-sharers of the village) erected a chabutra in front of their houses on a portion of the common land of the village which was used as a lane, thus narrowing the lane to the material inconvenience of the persons using it, held, that the plaintiffs (the remainder of the proprietary body) were entitled to a decree to the effect that the defendants must remove the chabutra, and restore the site to the condition in which it was before the erection of the chabutra. 58. Mauza Bagha Purana, Moga tahsil—Right of non-propietors to sell their dwelling-houses with the sites—General custom—Proof of special custom.

The general rule, applicable to agricultural villages in the Punjab, is that a non-proprietary resident in such village cannot, unless there be a well established custom to the contrary, sell his dwelling-house with its site to a stranger without the permission of the proprietors of the village.

Found, that no well-established custom exists in the village of Bagha Purana in the Moga tahsil of the Ferozepur district, opposed to the general custom, allowing non-proprietary residents to sell their sites without the consent of the proprietors.

To prove a local custom that the owners of the houses are also full owners of their sites, and can dispose of them without permission, it is not enough to show that some sales of sites have taken place which were not objected to and that in a particular case some of the proprietors objected without success. Proof of particular sales having taken place without objection would be very good evidence of the title of the purchaser to the lands actually sold; but while such sales would give a good title to individuals in particular portions of the village site, they would not prove that the rights of the proprietary body over the remainder of the site had been extinguished, and that possession whether by proprietors or non-propietors had come to be the only measure of right. Mya Das v. Fatteh Din (No. 25 of 1875, Civil), Bika Singh v. Lakhu (No. 92 of 1880, Civil), Sahiba v. Prema (No. 93 of 1880, Civil), Ramji Das v. Hamir Chand (No. 9 of 1882, Civil), and Bishen Chand v. Jawanda Mal (C. 59. Lease of common land by some co-sharers without consent of rest—Validity and effect of such disposition.

In a suit brought to enforce specific performance of a lease executed by some of the proprietors of the village, whereby they transferred to the plaintiff all their rights and interests in the shamilat land of the village, the defendants who contested the case pleaded inter alia that the lease of joint property like shamilat land by only some of the co-sharers without the consent of the rest was invalid.

Held, that the fact of some of the proprietors not having joined in the lease did not, in the absence of a contrary custom (which was not alleged to exist in the present case), render the contract void and inoperative.

Although in certain villages a local custom may exist whereby a co-sharer may be restrained from alienating even for temporary purposes his own share except under specified conditions, there is nothing on general legal grounds to prevent a co-sharer from validly disposing of his own share in common property, and thereby substituting the purchaser or alienee in his own stead as a tenant in common with the rest of the proprietary body, so long as such a disposition does not interfere improperly with the enjoyment by the latter of the property in the usual manner. Anderson v. Taylor (No. 70 of 1866, Civil), and Gujar v. Sahab Singh (No. 109 of 1879, Civil), referred to. 60. Suit by proprietors to oust occupancy tenants from baras—Tenant's right to retain possession.

In a suit by the proprietors of the village to oust the defendants, who were occupancy tenants, from certain baras or enclosures situated near the village site and occupied by defendants, it was found that the defendants had been in possession of the baras for a long time and had been using them for the storage of bhusa and for agricultural purposes.

Held, that the defendants' occupation of the baras should not be disturbed so long as they remained hereditary tenants in the village, and used the baras for purposes connected with the tenancy of their lands. Ghousa v. Abadan (No. 34 of 1877, Civil) followed. In a suit for possession of a house in mauza Bhirwal, tahsil Chunian, Lahore district, on the ground of purchase from a non-proprietary resident in that village, held, that the plaintiff had failed to establish any custom, contrary to the generally prevailing custom in the Punjab, whereby a non-proprietary resident could dispose of the site as well as the materials of his house; the evidence establishing that while the materials might be sold, the site was the property of the proprietors of the village and could not be transferred by sale without their consent. NANDA v. PUNJU SINGH. 193 P R 1882

62. User by kamin—Presumption from long user—Bara.

Plaintiff, who was a kamin and a non-proprietor, claimed a bara or enclosure situated in the common land, from which he alleged the defendants, the proprietors, had ejected him. It was found that plaintiff had had possession of the bara for about 25 years, but there was no proof that the plaintiff had received actual permission from the proprietors to occupy the land.

Held, that, considering the plaintiff's long possession, it was fair to infer that he obtained such permission, from the owners, and that he had acquired a right of user in the enclosure. Dewa Singh v. Billa (No. 4 of 1877, Civil, F. B.) cited. LALA v. PARMESARYA. 73 P R 1883

63. Suit by one proprietor to eject occupant of common land—Joinder of proprietary body—Right to sue—Decree for ejectment.

Plaintiff, one of the proprietors of the village, sued to eject defendant from a plot of land in the village abadi upon which the defendant had constructed a hut, alleging that the building interfered with the discharge of water from his roof, which was accustomed to flow on to the land now built upon. The lower Appellate Court, after impleading the remainder of the proprietary body as defendants, gave a decree to the effect that the defendant was to be ejected from the land in suit, which decree purported to be in favour of the plaintiff and 38 co-proprietors, who when joined as co-defendants, agreed with the plaintiff in demanding the defendant's ejectment from a portion of the common land.

Held, that a decree in the above form could not be sustained in the present case; that the plaintiff as a mere member of the proprietary body was not entitled eo-nomine to maintain the suit, unless he could show that by long possession of the site in question he had acquired a title which, against a trespasser, was entitled to protection; and if the proprietary body as such, or a majority of them, claimed to eject the defendant as a mere trespasser, they must bring a suit for that purpose, the present suit not being of that character. In a suit for cancellation of a sale made by a non-proprietor of a house situated in mauza Parawala, tahsil Phalian, in the Gujrat district, held, that the defendant had failed to prove that a custom had grown up allowing sales by non-proprietary residents of the village in general. There is no rule of law prohibiting the mortgage by an owner of his share in shamilat and before it has been divided.

In such a case when the mortgagee has taken up a certain definite share at the time of the mortgage, and that share has subsequently fallen to the mortgagor at division, and has been held since by the mortgagee, held, that the said mortgagee is entitled to hold such share as mortgagee in preference to a subsequent alienee of the mortgagor. Found, that a non-proprietary resident at mauza Somryal in the Daska tahsil of the Sialkot district, who is the owner of the building in which he has resided, can by custom sell the house as it stands, including the right to occupy the site, but that such sale merely gives the purchaser the same right of occupancy in the site which his vendor had, he being liable to the payment of the same dues to which the vendor would have been liable. Mya Das v. Fatteh Din (No. 25 of 1875, Civil), Alla Ditta v. Dina

70. Non-proprietary resident claiming proprietary right in site which he occupies—Burden of proof.

In cases where a non-proprietary resident claims to have a proprietary right in the site occupied by him, the main issue is whether he has such right, and the burden of proof rests on him in the first instance to show that he has it, and not on the proprietary body to show that he has not. The latter may rely in the first instance on the facts that they are the proprietary body, and that the proprietary body is as a rule owner of the habitable site, and therefore anybody controverting their general title has to establish his proposition affirmatively. Alla Ditta v. Dina (No. 125 of 1879, Civil), and Kharak Singh v. Alladitta (No. 85 of 1882, Civil), cited. Where the Wajib-ul-arz of the village provided that if a non-proprietor had built a house the materials of which were worth more than Rs. 30, he could sell the materials of the house with the right of residence therein, held, that such right of residence could not be taken to include the right of residence on the bare site after the house had been removed from it, or to render the bare site alienable at the pleasure of non-proprietors after they had taken away their materials. Where a suit is brought to restrain the permanent alienation of the common land, i.e., an alienation calculated to prevent any part of the common land from being hereafter divisible among the owners, there is no reason why a minority of the village proprietors should not sue: but where the alienation is not permanent, but the rights of the alienee, whatever they may be, are subject to the future division of the shamilat, then the will of the majority will prevail. Hidayat Ali v. Akbar Ali (No. 76 of 1873, Civil), Soheil Singh v. Abdulla (No. 78 of 1877, Civil) and Kashinath v. Lekhram (No. 30 of 1879, Civil), cited. 73. Suit by proprietors to oust occupancy tenant—Tenant's right of occupation—Tenant using the site for purpose other than that for which it was given—Custom.

Held, that by custom, a hereditary cultivator who occupies a portion of the shamilat land with the consent or acquiescence of the proprietor for storing manure for agricultural purposes cannot be disturbed in his possession so long as he remains a tenant in the village and uses the site for the purposes for which it was given; but if he diverts the site to other purposes, as for instance to build upon, and disclaiming the title of the proprietors sets up an adverse title himself, he forfeits his right of user and is liable to ejectment at the suit of the proprietors. Narain Singh v. Hamir Singh (No. 36 of 1882, Civil), and Sheoji Ram v. Paukar (No. 152 of 1882, Civil), cited and followed. 74. Suit for removal of cattle-trough erected by a co-sharer without the consent of the proprietary body—Altering character of common land in such a way as to prevent other proprietors from using it in the way they intended it should be used.

Twenty-nine of the proprietary body of the village brought a suit against the remaining proprietors (14 in number) for the demolition of a cattle-trough erected by one of them on common land, alleging that the trough had been erected seven months before suit and that it caused inconvenience to the people of the village. Defendants replied that the trough had been erected eighteen years previously on joint land in possession of one of their number, and that it caused no inconvenience. The first Court gave a decree for demolition of the trough, but, on appeal, the Judicial Assistant Commissioner held that the plaintiffs had not a cause of action cognizable by the Civil Courts and dismissed the suit. On appeal, the Commissioner reversed the Judicial Assistant's order, holding that the suit would lie.

Held, that the plaintiffs could maintain the suit, not simply on the ground that the cattle-trough caused obstruction to a public road, but on the ground that one of the proprietary body had taken possession of joint land and had altered its character in such a way as to prevent the remaining proprietors from using it in the way they intended that it should be used. Ghan Singh v. Sadda Singh (No. 73 of 1882, Civil), cited. 75. Suit for removal of wall and dahliz —Co-sharers have no right to exclusive possession of joint property or to alter the condition of any portion thereof without the consent of the proprietary body—Acquiescence in wrongful act.

In a suit for a mandatory injunction to compel defendants to remove certain obstructions erected by them on common land, the lower Courts dismissed the suit on the ground that the plaintiffs' conduct in allowing nearly a year to elapse before suing, amounted to acquiescence in the wrongful act committed by the defendants and barred them from claiming an injunction.

Held following Ghan Singh v. Sadda Singh (No. 73 of 1882, Civil), that co-sharers have no right to take exclusive possession and alter the conditions of any portion of joint property without the consent of the other co-sharers, and that, as the defendants in the present instance took advantage of the temporary absence of the plaintiffs to hurriedly run up the obstructions complained of, and plaintiffs, on their return to the village, at once objected to the acts of the defendants and continued so to object, the fact that they allowed almost a year to elapse before bringing their suit could not disentitle them to the relief claimed, as mere delay in enforcing a right does not constitute acquiescence.

To constitute a bar by acquiescence the conduct of the party entitled to offer opposition to the act of the other must be such as to give rise to a reasonable belief of his consent, and the other must have been induced thereby to do something from which he might otherwise have abstained. Gouhar v. Fazla (No. 53 of 1878, Civil) and Tronson v. Official Liquidator, Punjab Bank (No. 38 of 1881, Civil) cited. 77. User by kamins—Erection of kothas without permission of proprietors—Suit for ejectment—Right of minority of proprietors to maintain suit—Forfeiture of rights of user—Custom.

A suit brought for the demolition of certain buildings erected by the defendants on common land without the consent of the proprietary body, held, to be maintainable by a minority of the proprietary body, the act complained of amounting to an infringement of their rights as co-owners, which alone was sufficient to sustain the action.

Where it appeared that the defendants who were weavers, and who had been permitted to erect their looms on a portion of the common land, subsequently built kothas on the land without the consent of the proprietors, whereupon the plaintiffs, a portion of the proprietary body, sued to eject them from the land, held, that though so long as the defendants used the land for carrying on their trade, they could not under a well-recognized custom be ejected, when they diverted the site to another purpose not warranted by the grant and built upon it, they forfeited their rights of user and were liable to ejectment. Har Sarup v. Hanwanta (No. 7 of 1885, Civil), and the earlier cases therein relied upon, cited. remote collateral of last occupant of house on village site—Custom—Onus probandi.

Plaintiff, a non-proprietor of the village of Badli in the Hoshiarpur tahsil, claimed to succeed to the house of a deceased non-proprietor to whom he was only remotely related. The proprietors resisted the claim on the ground that the right of succession by non-proprietors to the sites in the village was limited to direct descendants (son, grandson, etc.) and collaterals as near as nephews only.

Held that, under the circumstances of the case, it lay upon the plaintiff to show that collaterals more distantly related than a nephew were by custom entitled to succeed, and that he had failed to discharge the onus cast upon him in the present case. ATTRA v. MODA. 37 P R 1887

80. Appropriation by one proprietor of houses built for common purposes—Suit for ouster of such proprietor—Joinder of proprietary body—Will of majority.

Plaintiffs, who were some of the proprietary body of the village, sued on the allegation that one of the defendant proprietors had set up an exclusive title to certain houses, which had been built on common land for common purposes by the whole proprietary body. The lower Appellate Court dismissed the suit on the ground that a proprietor holding common property could only be ousted by a clear majority of the proprietors, holding that such a majority did not exist against the defendant in the present case.

Held (reversing the above order), that in a case like the present, even a single proprietor would have a right to protect himself by a suit in Court against such an infringement of his rights. NAZAR SINGH v. HIRA SINGH. 74 P R 1888

Held, that no well-established custom was shown to exist in the village of Kanet Khalil in the Gujar Khan tahsil (contrary to the general prevailing custom of agricultural villages in the Punjab) by which a non-proprietary resident could sell his house and site without the permission of the proprietor of the site, nor was it even proved that he could sell the materials. Mya Das v. Fatteh Din (No. 25 *P. In a suit for possession of a plot of shamilat land, it was alleged that the plaintiffs had reclaimed the land and had long been in possession, but that the defendants had recently ousted them. Both parties were co-sharers in shamilat. The Divisional Judge dismissed the suit on the ground that plaintiffs could not sue for exclusive possession of joint property. Held, that one co-sharer may, under certain circumstances, take and keep exclusive possession of a portion of shamilat land for his own use until partition, and that another joint owner is not by reason of the land being shamilat necessarily entitled to disturb his possession.

Held, also, that it was not necessary to make all the co-sharers parties to the suit, as there was no dispute as to the land being shamilat. WAZIR SINGH v. MAHTAB SINGH. 108 P R 1889

89. Grazing rights—Common land—Occupancy tenants—Proprietor's right to partition and cultivate.

In a suit by occupancy tenants against proprietors for a declaration of right to graze their cattle on the original common land, the lower Appellate Court held that the plaintiff's right was conditional on the land continuing shamilat, and that as the land had been partitioned in 1871, the right ceased. The plaintiffs based their claim on the Wajib-ul-arz prepared previous to partition, which provided that all the village cattle were to graze in future upon the common land of the village, without distinction of proprietors or non-proprietors. Held, that this provision did not mean either that the grazing right extended over the shamilat as it was constituted at the time of settlement, or that the right extended over the shamilat as constituted for the time being. The provision could not exclude absolutely the liability of a shamilat-i-deh to be partitioned at the will of the proprietors collectively. At the same time the partition could not of itself, by converting the property divided from joint into several, extinguish the right of grazing over it. The right of grazing over what was shamilat at the time of settlement and the proprietary right therein, may and do co-exist side by side, both before and after partition. Neither right overrides the other so as to extinguish it, but each right limits and is limited by the other. The proprietary rights of the proprietors whether collectively before, or individually after, partition may be fully exercised, so long as this exercise leaves a sufficient area to graze the cattle of the non-proprietors. But the mere act of partitioning the shamilat does not entitle the non-proprietors to sue the proprietors to have a portion of the original shamilat sufficient to graze their cattle demarcated and reserved by a Civil Court. When, however, a large portion of the original shamilat has after partition been enclosed or reduced to cultivation and the non-proprietors' grazing rights are seriously threatened they may jointly sue the proprietors to prevent any further interference with what remained open of the original shamilat, or possibly to have some portion of the enclosed or cultivated land thrown open, so as to secure to them the proper enjoyment of the grazing right. 90. Partition—Pattis—Village site—Common land.

Each of two pattis in a village claimed exclusive proprietary right in a plot of land. It appeared that the village site was not divided into blocks belonging to several parties, but that the land belonging to them was her mer or scattered over the village site. It was also found that in Sambat 1920, defendants' patti sold some portion of the land in dispute to persons who were still in possession. Held, that considering how the land was distributed among the pattis, this did not prove that the defendants were entitled to the rent. Where adjoining pattis own common land, the general rule is that their rights in it are measured by the extent of land they hold in the village. MASTAN SINGH v. DEWA SINGH. 151 P R 1889

A., one of the proprietors in a village erected a belna or sugar-press and a kotha in the goradeh. B., another proprietor sued for a declaration that A. had no right to erect the buildings complained of and for their removal. Held that the erection caused no injury or inconvenience to the plaintiff who could protect his rights by applying for partition of his share in the shamilat. Plaintiff could succeed only on proof that the act was intended as an assertion of individual right, which if unchecked might deprive the proprietors of a portion of the common land altogether and prevent its being hereafter divisible among the co-sharers, or that the user by defendant materially interfered with plaintiff's own right of user. 92. Alienation—Powers of chief headmen and headmen of village to alienate portions of common land—Suit by other co-sharers to set aside sale and for possession—Previous sales by headmen of shamilat plots without objection by co-sharers—Estoppel.

The chief headmen and headmen of a village sold a portion of the shamilat land, not as agents and on behalf of the proprietary body, but as principals. Other co-sharers sued to set aside the sale and for possession. The purchaser pleaded that the vendors represented the proprietary body and had as such sold plots of shamilat land previously without objection by the rest of the proprietors, whereby he had been induced to believe that the sale of common land was within the scope of the authority of the vendors.

Held that the vendors had no authority to sell common land. They were agents of the proprietary body for certain purposes only, i. e., for management of common land. Held also that it had not been shown that the plaintiffs had ratified the previous sales. Found, that in the village of Kot Mahmud Khan, in the Tarn Taran tahsil of the Amritsar District, (which, apparently, was not historically speaking, a mere village homestead, but had been the seat of Nawab Mahmud Khan, a Governor under the Mughal Emperor, and had been founded by him), the proprietors were not competent to object to a mortgage of a kutcha house which had recently belonged to a non-proprietor, a Khatri ekka-driver, possession of which had been taken by his father's sister's son and mortgaged to one of the village proprietors and a goldsmith.

96. Joint owners—Erection of building by one on common land—Absence of special damage to others.

The defendant, who was a proprietor in Gohana (Rohtak district), erected a pakka building upon a portion of the abadi—208 yards in extent—or common property of the village. The building was commenced within a very few months before suit, and was immediately objected to by at least one of the plaintiffs. It was completed in spite of the plaintiffs' protests and appeal to the Revenue authorities, at or about the date when the present suit was launched. The defendant spent Rs. 1,000 or thereabouts upon the building, which was adjacent to, if not built on to his own house. No acquiescence on the plaintiffs' part was established.

The plaintiffs, sixteen proprietors of Gohana, sued to have the building demolished. They did not succeed in proving any substantial damage from the building, over and above the fact that defendant had probably monopolized a larger share of this particular portion of the common land than would fall to him at a division.

Held, that the plaintiffs' appeal must be dismissed upon the ground that, it not being satisfactorily established that any substantial mischief had accrued to the plaintiffs from the completed building erected at considerable expense, the lower Court had exercised a wise discretion in refusing to order its demolition. 99. Shamilat land—Suit by khewatdar to obtain share in village common land—Wajib-ul-arz.

Plaintiff, who was a khewatdar in the village, although not an original proprietor, sued for a declaration that he was entitled to a share of the common land of village Pindi Maddu in proportion to his holding. In the Wajib-ul-arz of the village it is laid down that the common lands are to be partitioned proportionately to the khewat holdings and certain particulars are given as to the permission to occupy and cultivate the shamilat and as to the disposal of those lands when partition takes place. In accordance with this permission plaintiff had been cultivating a considerable extent of the common lands.

The defendants contended that as plaintiff was not originally a proprietor in the village but only a purchaser, he was not entitled to any share in the common land.

The deeds of sale by which plaintiff or his predecessor in title became purchasers of lands in the village contained no reservation to the vendors of the common land which belonged to them.

The lower Courts dismissed the claim, the Divisional Judge holding that plaintiff was not entitled to claim a share in the common land because such share was not specifically included in the deeds of purchase.

Held, that the plaintiff by the deeds of sale acquired certain holdings and became a khewatdar, and the khewat carried with it as appurtenant to it a proportionate share of the common land. PAREM CHAND v. SARDARA.

Plaintiffs, alleging themselves to be owners of a one-third share in the village of Phadana, Lahore District, sued for partition of the whole of the village site according to a particular scheme, and based their claim solely on an entry in the Settlement record that "the "abadi-deh is shamilat and is divisible hasab "rasad khewat." The defendants pleaded that the entry was incorrect; that the tenure of the village was bhayachara, and that there was no shamilat in the abadi which was divisible. The District Judge having found that there was no divisible common land of the village in the abadi, gave plaintiffs a decree, in accordance with defendants' admission, for partition solely of any common land within their patti that might be found unoccupied. Plaintiffs appealed to the Divisional Judge, who reversed the decree of the lower Court and granted plaintiffs a decree for separation of their share in the shamilat abadi-deh, but did not specify the exact land assigned thereby to plaintiffs. Defendants appealed to the Chief Court, and it was held that the onus of proving that there was shamilat in the abadi which could be partitioned and that partition thereof was feasible rested upon the plaintiffs, and that they had failed to rebut the Statement in the earlier Settlement record that the village site was not liable to partition.

Held, following No. 15 P. R. 1880, Rev., that section 9, clause (2) of the Tenancy Act, 1868, read with section 10 of the Tenancy Act, 1887, should be construed to mean that no right of occupancy in the common lands of a pattidari village community should be acquired by a pattidar of the village under Chapter II of the said Acts, there being in this respect no distinction between pure and impure pattidari villages.

No. 1 P. R. 1897, Rev., referred to and considered.

The distinction between a pure and an imperfect pattidari village does not depend upon the maintenance or disuse of ancestral shares, but upon the existence or absence of shamilat-i-deh belonging to the village proprietors as a body. 104. Shamilat land—Suit by khewatdar to obtain share in village common land—Relinquishment of part of claim.

Plaintiffs and defendants were representatives of two families who originally owned each a half share of a certain patti. Previous to 1864 plaintiffs' ancestors had been absentees, but in that year they returned and instituted a suit against the ancestors of the defendants for possession of their original half share. The dispute was eventually compromised, the plaintiffs agreeing to accept 7 ghumaos of land and to relinquish the remainder of their claim. In 1896, the village shamilat was divided, 202 kanals 7 marlas falling to the share of the patti owned by the parties. Shortly after plaintiffs applied for partition of the latter. The application was opposed by defendants, who denied that plaintiffs had any share in the land so allotted; the plaintiffs were referred to a regular suit to establish their right by the Revenue Courts. They therefore filed a suit for half of the shamilat that had fallen to the share of their patti. The first Court dismissed the suit as barred by sections 13 and 43 of the Civil Procedure Code, inasmuch as the present claim should have been included in the suit brought by the plaintiffs' predecessors in 1864. On appeal the Divisional Judge held that plaintiffs were entitled to a decree for possession of a share in the shamilat proportionate to their holding of 7 ghumaos.

Held, that the suit as laid was not barred by reason of section 43, Code of Civil Procedure, even if that section could otherwise be applied, as the plaintiffs' predecessors were under no obligation in 1864 to expressly sue for a share in the shamilat in addition to their claim for possession as khewatdars of part of the holding, and that when the 7 ghumaos were awarded to them, they became in respect of such land full proprietors with a right to the enjoyment of everything appurtenant to their holding.

The plaintiff and the proprietor in the village sued for demolition; the defendant and the consenting proprietor admitted that on the vacation of the site by them it would revert to the whole proprietary body.

Held, that in the absence of proof of substantial damage to the plaintiff his suit must fail, as he had not proved that he had ever exercised any specific rights over the site

106. Common land—Joint vacant piece of land in mohalla—Right of suit of some of the inhabitants of the mohalla affecting such land—Plaint—Alternative reliefs—Injunction when to be granted—Discretion of Court—Damages.

The plaintiffs sued to recover possession of a piece of land situate in front of their houses and shops alleging that it had been jointly enjoyed by them, and that the defendants Nos. 1 and 2 having obtained a fictitious deed of sale of a portion thereof from defendant No. 5 had taken possession and commenced to build thereon, the relief sought being either a decree for possession of the land or an injunction restraining the defendants Nos. 1 and 2 from building thereon. The lower Appellate Court gave the plaintiffs, "as members of the community," a decree for possession, and also issued a permanent injunction to the defendants prohibiting the erection of any building on or other interference with the land in suit.

Held (i) that the claims were not inconsistent, the difference being between sole right and joint right, and that the plaintiffs were at liberty to claim in the alternative exclusive possession or an injunction to restrain the defendants from interfering with their rights as co-sharers in the land in suit;

(ii) that the land in suit not being a public thoroughfare, the suit lay;

(iii) that the plaintiffs were entitled to sue in their own right for a relief common to themselves and others, and that the failure to sue on behalf of those others was not a bar to their suit;

(iv) that inasmuch as the exclusive occupation by the defendants would have materially injured the plaintiffs they were entitled to the injunction issued by the first Court.

In suits for the recovery of possession of immovable property when resisted by a plea of adverse possession, the plaintiff is bound to prove possession and dispossession within twelve years, but where the property in dispute, up to a short time before suit, remained waste and unoccupied, held, that the plaintiffs were not required to prove acts of possession within twelve years of suit, they had only to prove a prima facie title not extinguished by limitation in such a case. Waste land allowed to remain so by the proprietor cannot be held to be a discontinuance of possession, and the onus is in such a case shifted on to defendant to prove when his possession became adverse.

Held also, that one or several of many co-sharers can sue to prevent invasion of their common property by a mere trespasser, and that in such a case a decree for sole possession, or for possession on behalf of other co-sharers, should not generally be given, the proper form of decree should be for the restoration of the property to its condition prior to the trespasser's invasion, and so preserve the invaded rights which the plaintiff and other co-sharers possessed in the property.

Held, that as the rights of a proprietor in the shamilat of a village are not a mere accessory to the land separately held by him, and that a sale of the latter does not ipso facto convey any rights in the former to the purchaser.

A clause in the Wajib-ul-arz providing that shares in the shamilat are proportional to the khewat lands held by each proprietor cannot confer any rights in the common land on the purchaser not conveyed by his deed of sale.

109 Partition—Partition of shamilat-deh including the land which had been assigned to an ala-lambardar in virtue of his office—Compensation for disturbance or improvements—Punjab Tenancy Act, 1887, sections 69, 72.

Plaintiffs sued for partition of the shamilat-deh including land which had been assigned to an ala-lambardar in virtue of his office, and which since his death had remained in possession of his heirs. The deceased ala-lambardar and his brother had sunk a well, built a house, and made an enclosure wall on the land the subject-matter of the dispute. The points in dispute were whether the occupants of that plot on being dispossessed of so much of it as exceeded their shares were entitled to compensation for improvements or disturbance; and, if so whether such compensation should be paid by the proprietors who under the partition would benefit by the improvements or by the whole body of persons who sought partition.

Held, on the analogy of the proviso to section 69 of the Tenancy Act, that the heirs of the original ala-lambardar were not entitled to any compensation for disturbance, but that they were entitled to receive compensation for improvements as a condition precedent to partition from those village proprietors only who would benefit by the improvements for the cost of so much of the same as such heirs would cease to enjoy.

In estimating the compensation to be awarded for any improvement the Revenue Officers should act upon the principles laid down by section 72 of the Tenancy Act.

113. Common land—Possession of one co-sharer Adverse possession—Abandonment.

Held that as in common holding the possession of one co-sharer is the possession of all, mere occupation and enjoyment by one to whatever period it may extend to does not constitute an adverse possession as against the other co-sharer, unless the one in possession is able to show most clearly and emphatically his own adverse possession or abandonment by other.

An absentee in a common holding who leaves his property in the hands of a co-sharer, asserts his rights to succeed to a relative on the opening out of a succession in the village and objects on the first invasion of his rights by the person left by him in charge of his share of the holding cannot be deemed to have abandoned his property, as in such cases mere length of time or absence does not affect his rights. Defendant pleaded (inter alia) that he was not a shareholder, inasmuch as there was no written acceptance by him of shares as required by Table B of Act XIX of 1857. Held, that the defence was good; however strong the evidence as to defendant having in fact taken shares and held himself out as a shareholder, by voting as such, and by offering his shares for sale, yet unless he accepted them in writing as required by the Act, neither could he insist on receiving shares, nor could the bank compel him to pay calls upon them. 4. Articles of Association—Pledge of shares—Preferential lien of Company on shares of indebted members—Restraint of assignment of shares by indebted members.

Plaintiffs were a banking company, and by their deed of partnership or articles of association (clauses 27, 28 and 29), a member indebted to the company was prohibited from disposing of or transferring his shares without the consent of the directors. And by clause 36, "in order to "facilitate the pledging of the shares of the "bank by way of collateral security for any "loan of money the party desirous of "pledging his shares should apply to the "manager for a declaration that the bank "consented to such pledge, and the manager "should be authorized and empowered to "order the secretary to enter a memorandum "of such pledge and of the duration thereof "in the books of the bank, and to write "a letter to the applicant certifying the "consent of the bank to such pledge; and "thereupon the pledgee or party advancing "money on the security of such shares, "should be entitled to hold them free of all "claims of the bank against the debtor "pending the duration of such pledge and "until repaid the amount advanced: provid- "ed also, that the manager should be at "liberty to withhold his consent to any "pledge in any case in which the applicant "should be indebted to the bank to such "an amount as should render it necessary "in the judgment of the manager to retain "the bank's lien on the shares of such "applicant."

On the 28th January, 1864, defendants lent D. a shareholder of the plaintiffs' company, Rs. 10,000 on his pro. note, and the same day obtained from plaintiffs a certificate as follows: "Certified that twenty shares "of this company, of Rs. 500 each, numbered "622 to 631 and 1,606 to 1615, belonging "to Mr. D, are registered in this office as "pledged to Chunna Mall Salig Ram for a "loan of Rs. 10,000 or for the unpaid balance "thereof, for a period of six months from "this date, with due regard to clauses 27, "28 and 29 of the deed of co-partnership."

Before the expiration of the six months viz., on the 7th July 1865, the bank lent D Rs. 8,000, and D pledged to the bank, as security for the loan, 90 other shares. On the 8th November 1869, D gave defendants a pro. note for Rs. 13,545, being the principal and interest due upon the note of the 28th January, 1865,—the object of the defendants in taking this note being to prevent the law of limitation barring their claim against D. Defendants sued D on his second note and obtained a decree. Subsequently, plaintiffs sued D for the Rs. 8,000, and also obtained a decree. The defendants in execution of their decree attached the twenty shares pledged to them; the shares were put up for sale and bought by the defendants. Plaintiffs sued defendants for a decree declaring their right to realize their debt due from D, from the twenty shares purchased by defendants.

Held, that the effect of the certificate was not to limit the duration of the pledge of the shares by D to defendants, to six months only; but merely amounted to a declaration that the plaintiffs had no lien on or claim against the shares; that the pledge was not affected by the defendants taking the second pro. note from D, but enured as collateral security for that note also; and that the articles of association, though they gave plaintiffs a lien on the shares of those members indebted to them, and power to prevent an assignment of such shares so long as their debt was unliquidated,—gave plaintiffs no preferential lien on shares already pledged with the consent of the plaintiffs to a third party to secure a debt at a time when the shareholder was not indebted to the bank. Where Articles of Association of a Company empowered the Directors generally to do all such acts as under the Indian Companies Act and Articles of Association are directed or authorised to be done by the Company in General Meeting, held, that this authority did not absolve the Directors from the necessity of observing the established principle which should regulate their management of the Company's affairs, and if their acts were not reasonably necessary for efficient management, the Company would not be bound by them. Held further, that to establish ratification by the Company of acts ultra vires of the Directors it was necessary for the plaintiff to prove (1) that the shareholders present at the meeting at which it was alleged that ratification had been accorded had clear knowledge of what was to be ratified, and (2) that the absent shareholders had individually assented to the ratification.

Whether a particular clause in an agreement should be held to embody a condition vital to the contract, or one subsidiary to its main purpose must depend upon the intention of the contracting parties, and if possible that intention should be gathered from the terms of the agreement itself.

6. Public Company—Articles of Association—Directors exceeding borrowing powers—Adoption and ratification of ultra vires acts of Director—Lien on present and future property.

The articles of Association of the defendant company provided that the Directors might, from time to time at their discretion, borrow any sum or sums of money for the purposes of the Company, but so that not more than Rs. 4,00,000 should be owing at any one time without the sanction of a General Meeting. The Directors exceeded their borrowing powers, but the excessive borrowing had been brought through the balance sheets of the Company to the notice of the shareholders who, instead of objecting to it, endorsed the actions of the Directors by passing the accounts and declaring dividends. Held, that the above acts of the Company constituted sanction and ratification of the excessive borrowing by the Directors. Held also, that as in equity there could be a vaild assignment of property to be subsequently acquired the plaintiff had a lien on all the goods of the Company which had been obviously acquired by the latter by means of the overdraft allowed by the plaintiff bank—Held further, that the defendants had failed to substantiate their contention that the goods of the Comany were wrongfully taken possession of by the Bank or sold for inadequate sums and without reasonable notice to the Company, or that the inadequacy of price exceeded the amount claimed, or that, by the fact of their taking over possession of the defendants' property, the plaintiff's remedy to recover any balance which remained due after credit of the sale

Held, that the relationship between a Company and its Managing Agent being that of principal and agent, it is the duty of the latter to render proper accounts to the former. 11. Company—Contracts by Directors with Company—Duty of disclosure of Director's interest—Articles of Association—General words—Ratification and adoption of Contracts.

The plaintiffs sued the defendant Company and its Managing Agents for damages on the allegation that they were offered the appointment of mutsaddis to the defendant Company by its Managing Agents on condition of their financing the Company to the extent of Rs. 70,000 and their remuneration had been fixed at eight annas per cent. of all purchases of raw materials and Re. 1-6 per cent. on all sales of its produce except such as the plaintiffs declined to guarantee and countersign and that in addition to the above the Managing Agents of the Company had agreed to give the plaintiffs a quarter of their own commission which by the Articles of Association of the Company had been fixed at 7½ per cent. on the gross profits of its business. The plaintiffs had accepted the offer which had been embodied in an agreement drafted by the legal adviser of the Company with a further condition that they were irremovable for twenty years except for personal dishonesty and that they were not to be bound to make any purchases and sales for the Company unless they were willing to do so. That plaintiffs had duly performed their part of the agreement but the defendants had terminated the said agreement in violation of its express terms without the plaintiffs' consent.

The defendants' contentions amongst others were, that the agreement was invalid and not binding on the Company—

(a) because it had been entered into with one of the Directors without the knowledge of other Directors and the shareholders;

(b) because it has been entered into by the Managing Agents in excess of their authority and was against the interests of the Company.

It appeared that the contract purported to be one with the defendant Company and the Directors' interest in it was patent in the writing in which it was embodied. There was no concealment and it was drawn up or revised by the standing counsel of the Company who had never before he appeared to conduct the defence on behalf of the Company pointed out its invalidity or impropriety. In the Articles of Association of the Company it was provided that the office of a Director should be vacated if he should enter the Company's service or become a Director in a similar or competing Company or become directly or indirectly interested in any similar business without the sanction of the shareholders at a general meeting and that he should not vote when any question relating to any such contract is put before the general meeting of the shareholders.

Held, that under the circumstances as found the contract did not come within the prohibitory rule that a Director of a Company by reason of his standing in a fiduciary position to the shareholders could not make a binding contract for profit to himself in a transaction in which the Company was interested without the knowledge and sanction of the shareholders, which is of general application, and consequently the plaintiffs were entitled to maintain their action against the Company.

Held also, following Tara Chand v. Ganesh Flour Mills Company, Limited, Delhi (17 P. R. 1901), that although the Articles of Association of the Company empowered the Managing Agents to engage mutsaddis on such terms as they might think fit, that that authority did not absolve the Managing Agents from the necessity of observing the established principle which should have regulated their management of the Company's affairs in the usual way and according to the ordinary course of business, and as their acts were unreasonably and excessively onerous the contract was ultra vires and the Company was entitled to repudiate it.

Authority conferred in general terms must be construed as authority to act in the usual way and according to the ordinary course of business.

An agreement which had never been submitted either to a general meeting of the shareholders or to a special meeting of the shareholders summoned for that particular purpose could not be held to be ratified and adopted by the Company as to render the Company liable merely because the plaintiffs were allowed to work for sometime as mutsaddis of the Company. Held, that acts bonâ fide done by a director or manager of a Company are valid, notwithstanding any defect that may afterwards be discovered in his qualification and this applies not only between the Company and outsiders, but also between the Company and its members—Indian Companies Act, 1882, section 92.

Held also, that the form of a suit is not bad because the relief prayed for does not affect each defendant equally, and also that even if the suit had been open to objection on the ground of misjoinder, there having been no material prejudice to the defendants on the merits, the decree of the lower Court could not be reversed merely on this technical ground—Civil Procedure Code, section 99.

Held also, that a Company cannot be made plaintiff in a suit without its consent expressly given (order I, rule 10 (3) of the Code) and neither one or several shareholders can sue in the name of the Company unless they were authorised by the majority at a general meeting of the Company or shewed that they have exhausted all reasonable means of obtaining the institution of the suit by the Company or that the case is one of urgency and the plaintiff has the support of the majority.

Held also, that one or more shareholders suing on his or their own behalf cannot obtain in a Court of law a declaration that the election of certain persons as directors was null and void on account of irregularities or even illegalities in their election, nor an injunction to restrain those persons from acting as directors these being matters relating exclusively to the internal management of the Company, with which Courts generally decline to deal at the instance of any person other than the Company itself.

Held also, that a chairman presiding at a meeting of a Company has to decide to the best of his judgment all questions that arise at such meeting, e. g., the right of persons to vote or their disqualification, and if he acts bonâ fide, he is not liable to pay damages to any party, who can afterwards satisfy a Court of law, that a particular ruling of the chairman was erroneous or that it resulted in such party being deprived of a right to which he is subsequently found entitled. Purchase by Bank of its own shares—Ultra vires—Claim based on deposit receipts—Admissibility of pleas by Official Liquidator going behind such receipts—Separate proceeding—Void transaction—Acquiescence—Validity of pleas in bar of Official Liquidator's grounds of defence.

In a proceeding under section 128 of the Indian Companies Act, the petitioner put in a claim as a creditor of the Punjab Bank (then in liquidation) for certain monies alleged to be in deposit with the Bank at the date of the winding-up order, and for which he held deposit receipts. The claim was resisted by the Official Liquidator, as regards part of the sum claimed, on the ground that it was the money accruing from the sale of certain shares in the Bank held by the petitioner himself and sold by him to the Bank at par.

COMPANIES (ACT X OF 1866)—concld.

Section 128—concld.

Held that the purchase by the Bank of its own shares was ultra vires of the Bank, there being nothing in the memorandum or articles of association expressly authorizing such a transaction, and a purchase by a Company of their own shares not being a legal transaction, unless there is a clear and special authority authorizing the Company to make such purchase.

Held further, that the Official Liquidator was competent to raise a plea going behind the deposit receipts upon which the claim was based by the claimant, and was not bound to question the validity of the original purchase by the Bank of the shares, either by a proceeding under the Indian Companies Act directed to placing the claimant upon the list of contributories, or by a regular Civil suit directed to procuring a rescission of the contract and a refund of the money paid by the Bank, as the transaction being ultra vires, and therefore not merely voidable, but wholly void and never at any time binding on the Company, did not require to be set aside, and no separate proceeding was therefore necessary to test the validity of the transaction.

Held further, that the Official Liquidator was not barred from questioning the validity of the sale by acquiescence on the part of the head manager and the board of management, as the transaction being ultra vires on the part of the Company, neither acquiescence nor ratification would be enough to bind the shareholders who had no notice of the transaction when it took place, and were not proved to have acquiesced in or ratified it subsequently.

To constitute a bar by acquiescence, both parties must be acquainted with all material facts, and the conduct of the party entitled to offer opposition to the act of the other must be such as to give rise to a reasonable belief of his consent, and the other must have been induced thereby to do something from which he might otherwise have abstained. 2. Compensation to house-owners—Delhi Palace Fortifications—Acts of Government officers binding on Government.

To carry out the fortification of the palace at Delhi, a quantity of houses around it were cleared away. The owners of these houses were in the enjoyment of the rights of private property, and were not in the position of those who suffered by the acts of the State before the complete restoration of civil jurisdiction, or who suffered after that restoration from acts already done by Government. The better fortification of the palace was no more an act of State than any other improvement of the town. When the demolitions were contemplated, it was considered how the owners of the houses were to be compensated; and the following scheme was sanctioned by Government: That a sufficient number of houses which had become confiscated and had otherwise fallen into the hands of Government, should be put up to auction, and that the owners of the demolished houses should be allowed to bid at the auction up to the estimated value of their own houses without making any payment to that extent; that the market value of the demolished houses should be determined by a proportionate deduction from or addition to their estimated value, according as the confiscated houses were sold for more or less than their estimated value; and that every owner of demolished property should receive or pay a percentage of profit or loss, as the case might be. It was left to the Government officers at Delhi to sell what property out of the confiscated houses they might think best to sell, provided that the estimated value of the property to be sold should be equal to that of the demolished houses. Accordingly, a note or ticket was given to each owner of the value at which his house had been estimated; these tickets at an early period became transferable or negotiable at a greater or less discount, and the plaintiff held and sued upon 130 of them.

On the 16th July 1860, it was agreed between the Deputy Commissioner and the ticket-holders that a list of confiscated property worth seven lakhs be prepared and the property put up for sale; that profit or loss should be shared by the owners of the demolished houses; that purchasers should not be required to pay more than 50 per cent. of any loss, but non-purchasers should pay their full share of the loss. At the same time a notice was issued by the Government officers to the ticket-holders to the effect that if the proceeds of the sale equalled the estimated value of the demolished houses, the ticket-holders would be paid in full, and that they would share any excess or any loss: further, that the ticket would be taken as cash for the amount recorded in it, the holder paying any excess or receiving any difference as the case might be. This notice was objected to by the ticket-holders, and a second notice was issued stating that "the value of the demolished property shall not be paid in cash by Government; and if the sale realized more than the estimated value, it will be distributed rateably, and if less will be deducted rateably, excepting those who purchased from those desirous of cash payment." A lithographed list of the houses for sale was circulated according to the resolution of, 16th July 1860.

Tickets were issued to the value of Rs 8,08,000. To pay the holders and defray the expenses of the sale, etc., Government intended to sell confiscated property to the value of Rs. 8,77,000. The additional property was not specified in the same way as that entered in the lithographed list, but was put up for auction as the sale of the specified property proceeded. While the auction was proceeding, specified property worth several lakhs of rupees which had belonged to the ex-King of Oude, was withdrawn, and other property of an inferior value was substituted for it, and the profit on the total result of the sales was less than it would otherwise have been. To make up for this deficit, the Deputy Commissioner lowered the original estimate of the property put up for sale by Rs. 30,000, and thus increased the rate of profit realized.

In March 1862, the Deputy Commissioner paid a dividend of profit to the actual ticketholders, but not to those who, having been ticket-holders, had given up their tickets in payment at the auction sale. Against this several of the purchasers protested; and the Deputy Commissioner replied that the intention of Government was that holders of tickets and those who desired cash for them should alone share in the profit and loss, and that those who purchased property would not so share.

In June 1862, the Deputy Commissioner fixed the profits of the sales hypothetically at 19·77 per cent.; and dividing that profit amongst all the ticket-holders, Government declared a dividend of 3 annas $5\frac{1}{8}$ pies per rupee, payable at the Delhi Treasury to every ticket-holder, who would give a receipt in full.

Upon these facts, it was contended for the defendant that if plaintiff, a non-purchasing ticket-holder, would admit that all ticket-holders alike were entitled to share the profits, the Deputy Commissioner's aggregate of profits might be taken as correct; otherwise, the plaintiff should be paid according to the actual profit, which was about 13 per cent. on the value of tickets issued (viz., Rs. 8,08,000).

Held, that, though the offer of 19·77 per cent. profit was conditional, yet the defendant had taken no account of the alleged default on the part of Government in the withdrawal of the Oude property; that Government was bound to sell particular property according to the lithographed list, and not what confiscated property it chose: that it was impossible for Government to insist on paying only a profit calculated on the bare receipts of the sales; and that the proper payment of profit to be made, having regard to certain admissions made for the defence, was the hypothetical estimate of what would have been the profit if all had gone right, made by the Deputy Commissioner.

Held also, that Government could not insist upon dividing the profit with regard to the original scheme, as that was never carried out as sanctioned,—the changes that took place being the addition of a list of houses for sale, an addition which if in fact unauthorized did not appear to be so; the substitution of other houses for those in the list, and the calculation of a profit by reference to what would have been the profit if the list had been adhered to:—but that the acts of the officers of Government, which were done within the scope of their authority, were apparently if not in fact, duly authorized by Government, and these acts led the non-purchasing ticket-holders to believe that they were exclusively entitled to a profit of 3 annas $5\frac{1}{8}$ pies per rupee; and that accordingly plaintiff was entitled to profits at that rate.

Held, also, that the notices mentioned did not amount to an agreement excluding parol evidence of the true contract between Government and the ticket-holders. LALA SAHIB SINGH v. THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA IN COUNCIL. 57 P R 1869

5. Contract—Consideration, sufficiency of—Tender to supply stores at fixed prices, when it amounts to a valid contract—Continuing offer—Reasonable notice.

The Commissariat Department invited tenders for the supply of such gram as it might require for a period of twelve months. The defendant sent in a tender to supply the gram for that period at a certain fixed price in such quantities as the Department might order from time to time. By one of the terms of the tender the plaintiff was bound to give fifteen days' notice if more than 1,000 maunds of gram was required at a time. The plaintiff accepted the tender, and on 12th September gave notice to the defendant (which was not despatched from plaintiff's office until the 14th) that he would require delivery of 1,400 maunds on or before the 28th September. The defendant having failed to deliver the gram (although several extensions were allowed to him), the plaintiff rescinded the contract and brought an action for damages for non-delivery against the defendant.

Held—

(i) That there was a sufficient consideration for the defendant's promise to supply the gram, although there was no binding contract on the part of the Commissariat Department to order any.

(ii) That the tender made by the defendant and accepted by the plaintiff was not a contract by itself, but created a series of continuing offers on the part of the defendant which plaintiff was at liberty to convert into contract by giving orders in accordance with the terms of the tender.

(iii) That the notice given by plaintiff on the 12th September was not a legal notice in accordance with the terms of the tender, inasmuch as the time allowed in it was too short for the quantity required, and that the subsequent extensions of time granted by the plaintiff could not remove the defect in the original notice and none of them could be treated as a sufficient notice by itself, and that, therefore, non-delivery of gram under such notice did not amount to a breach of contract and plaintiff's claim for damages therefore failed.

The parities to the case were ala and adna maliks of Mauza Thoa, in the Dera Ismail Khan District. As regards the preservation or loss of rights of adna Maliks in cases of alluvion and diluvion, the Wajib-ul-arz provided that the land attached to wells will on restoration belong to the former owner adna malik); that in case of lands not attached to wells, if a portion of a field or plot be carried away and be again thrown up opposite the remaining land, the former adna malik will take so much of it as is required to make up his old holding; but if the whole field or land be carried away, it will belong on restoration to the ala maliks as shamilat, and the ala maliks will have full power to give it to adna maliks or not, and for its cultivation those powers and rules will come into force which are laid down for the shamilat. It also contained the following clause: Lekin jis malik adna ki zamin amum burd hogi banisbat digar malikan adna uska pahle hak hai ki banjar shamilat se ya zamin baramad shuda se bakadr rakba burd shuda ke usko mile, aur aisi zamin ki liye malik adna ko jadid jhuri jo ek rupaya fi acre se ziyada na howe deni hogi aur khilaf dastur ala malikan ko aisi zamin ke liye jhuri lene se inkar karne ka ikhtiyar na hoga.

Held, that the proper interpretation of this clause was that if the ala maliks did not require the lands themselves, and it became a question of letting them out then the first persons entitled to admission were the adna maliks who had lost a good deal of land (amum). Both those who had lost all their land and those who had lost a considerable part (and who might not wish to wait for the chance of a restoration—mahaz), would come under this head, and might claim to be accepted in prefereuce to other adna maliks or outsiders on payment of the fair customary rent, which the ala maliks might not refuse to accept on the plea that they could get a higher rent by competition. B contended that A.'s entire share in the shamilat-i-deh passed to him under these words. Held, that on a proper construction of the document only a share in the common land proportionate to the land sold was intended to be conveyed and that the word hissa should be construed with reference to what immediately preceded it, i.e., the quantity of khewat land sold. 46. Grant by Government—Construction—Joint and several interests—Survivorship.

The proprietary right of the village of Shamapur was at the absolute disposal of Government as confiscated property of the late Raja of Ballabgarh (Delhi District) The recommendation of the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab in 1859 as to the disposal of the confiscated village, which the Government of India approved, was as follows:

> "The jagirdars are kinsfolk of the late "Raja, being descended from common" ancestor. I recommend that "the lands "be released to them and their male" issue in perpetuity subject to good "conduct. I would also grant them "the proprietary right in free gift, the pensions to cease on their receiving possession."

The District Judge in construing the grant held that each of the four grantees became entitled under the grant to a fourth share of the village in severalty. and that there was no right of survivorship.

Held that the effect of the grant was a grant to the parties jointly with a right of survivorship. The grant was to the members of the family jointly without any definition or limitation of interests to the parties severally.

Accordingly, in the present case, in the absence of any severance of the joint ownership, the whole interest granted would vest in the last survivor.

In 1873 a dispute having arisen between plaintiff and his brother, J., regarding certain property, plaintiff and J. agreed to compromise the suit then pending between them, and a registered deed of release was drawn up, whereby it was agreed that plaintiff, in consideration of the receipt of Rs. 350, would make no claim in respect of the property during J.'s lifetime or after his death, in the lifetime of his offspring or widow. J. shortly before his death executed a mortgage of his house in favour of one A. B., defendant No. II, and, upon the death of J., plaintiff sued A. B. and defendant No. 1, who was the daughter of J., on the allegations that he was entitled to the said house under Muhammadan law, and that the mortgage was fictitious and without consideration. Defendants contended that the mortgage was valid and for full consideration, and that plaintiff was debarred from suing by reason of the deed of release of 1873. The first Court dismissed the suit both on the ground that the mortgage was valid and also that the plaintiff was estopped under the deed of release from suing in respect of J.'s property, but the Divisional Court, although holding that the mortgage was valid, held that plaintiff was not debarred by the said deed from claiming to succeed his brother, and gave the plaintiff a decree for possession of half the house on payment of half the mortgage money. Plaintiff appealed to the Chief Court, and it was argued, on his behalf, that the deed merely referred to the rights he was then suing for in succession to his father and not to any rights that might accrue to him upon his possible survival of his brother.

Held, that, looking at the reference in the deed of release to J.'s widow and offspring and to the time subsequent to J.'s death, the deed clearly contemplated that J. should enjoy the property he had released from any claim by the plaintiff, and that, after his death, his widow and offspring should so enjoy it, and that plaintiff had renounced any possible right of succession thereto. A transfer or an agreement to transfer rights of succession to accrue in future, though they cannot, under section, 266 (k) of the Civil Procedure Code, 1882 be had recourse to in execution of decrees are not unenforceable as being opposed to public policy.

48. Document, construction of—Kul haqiat ka tisra hissa—Inclusion or exclusion of share of shamilat.

The decree-holder having brought a suit against his judgment-debtor for recovery of the money due under the decree, a razinama was drawn up to the effect (i) that the respondent was to be responsible for his brother's share of the debt, and was to pay the decree-holder a certain sum without further costs, and (ii) that the respondent was to execute a mortgage with possession of a one-third share of his entire interest (kul haqiat ka tisra hissa) and a bond bearing interest for Rs. 100 in appellant's favour by a certain date, failing which the appellant was to be at liberty to execute his whole decree in the usual way. After the said date, the decree-holder applied for execution on the ground that the bond and mortgage deed had not been executed by the judgment-debtor according to the razinama. The latter pleaded that he was ready and willing to execute both documents, but that the decree-holder insisted on including a third share of the shamilat in the mortgage, which he declined to do, as there was no such agreement in the razinama. The lower Courts held that the words "kul haqiat ka tisira hissa" were not meant to include a proportionate share of the shamilat.

Held, that the wording of the razinama was faulty, but, though not to be construed with the strictness appropriate to a formal and regularly drawn up deed, must be governed by the rule that the obviously plain meaning of the words used must not be nullified by importing extraneous considerations.

CONSTRUCTION—contd.

Held, therefore, that the document must be construed to mean that one-third of the entire share of the judgment-debtor was to be included in the mortgage including his share in the shamilat. BAJU SHAH v. HUKMA.

49. Premature suit—Agreement to pay money to third party—Refusal to account to promisee as to such money—Method of taking account—Interest.

On the 9th January, 1879, one B. L. executed a deed whereby he leased certain lands to defendant for a period of two years, i.e., up to Rabi Sambat 1938. On the 28th October 1879, B. L. executed another deed in favour of defendant in which the period of the lease was fixed at twelve years, "not to be cancelled before the expiry of that time." At the end of this latter deed, a "P. S." was added to the effect that "the condition set "forth above will remain in force even in case "of default of money after the expiry of the "term of twelve years." On the 17th October 1891, plaintiffs, as representatives of B. L. sued defendant for possession and for a sum of money which they alleged to be due to them after taking of accounts. Defendant contended, inter alia, that the suit was premature, inasmuch as (a) the second deed had superseded the first and had fixed the period of twelve years from the date on which it was executed; and (b) that the meaning of the "P. S." was that if the land had not been redeemed within twelve years, the lease would be continued on the old terms for another twelve years.

Held, having regard to the time usually fixed for the expiry of an agricultural lease and reading the two deeds together, that the latter deed was not intended to supersede the earlier deed as to the commencement of the lease, and that therefore the lease was for a period of twelve years from Rabi, Sambat 1936.

Held, further that the proviso in the "P.S." was simply added at the last moment to prevent any difference as to the terms upon which the lease should run after the expiry of the twelve years which might expire before the full sum was made up.

Semble: Inasmuch as the plaint, originally filed on the 17th October 1891, was returned for amendment on the 8th March 1892, and not represented until the 16th March 1892, the suit was not premature.

Held, that when A has contracted with B. in consideration of the mortgage or lease of certain land, to make certain payments for B. to C., there is no privity of contract between A. and C. and B., and B's representatives are entitled to an account from A. of all sums of money in his hands under the contract, it being no answer on the part of A. to decline to account for such money on the ground that it was payable to a third party.

50. Construction of mortgage-deed—Limitation Act, 1877 2nd Schedule, articles 75, 132, 147.

The mortgage-deed in question provided as follows:—"The mortgagees shall pay the "mortgage-money by instalments of Rs. 60 "a year, together with interest at the rate of "8 annas per cent., without raising any ob-"jection or dispute. In case of default of "payment of an annual instalment, together "with interest at the aforesaid rate, the "mortgagors will put the mortgagee in pos-"session of the mortgaged share of the "house. If the mortgagors raise any "objection, the mortgagee will be at "liberty to at once get possession by bring-"ing a regular suit. Afterwards the mort-"gagors will redeem and get released the "mortgaged share on payment of the mort-"gage-money, together with the fixed amount "of interest."

The deed was executed in 1881, and the first default in payment of the instalments took place in 1882. In 1897 the mortgagee sued for Rs. 797-6-0 principal and interest due on the mortgage, and prayed for attachment and sale of the mortaged property.

Held, with reference to the language of the deed, that the intention of the parties was to hypothecate the property in the first instance, giving the mortgagee the power of taking steps for assuming possession and so converting the mortgage into a purely usufructuary one, but, as the mortgagee failed to so convert it, the transaction remained no more than a promise to pay by the obligor who had hypothecated his property as a collateral security.

Held, therefore, that as the plaintiff had failed to enforce payment within twelve years of the first default in payment by taking possession and so carrying out and developing the contract, the suit was barred under article 132 of the Limitation Act, 1877. In 1860 certain waste lands in tahsil Mailsi, of the Mooltan District, belonging to the Government and known as barbarani lands, were leased to one Ghulam Mustapha (the grandfather of the plaintiffs) for the period of the then current settlement. After the lease had been granted the grantee petitioned Government for sanction to dig two water-cuts at his own expense, one for irrigation of the land in Ludan, which was occasionally watered from the Sutlej, and the other for irrigating the land known as Khai, a Government jungle from the same river. On 4th of December 1861 the Commissioner of the Division permitted the opening of both the water-cuts, as he considered that a considerable area of land would be benefited, and that there would be increase of Government revenue. Ghulam Mustapha Khan then commenced the construction of the canals which was completed after his death by his son Ghulam Kadir Khan (the plaintiffs' father). On the expiration of the period of the then current settlement the Government by a sanad, dated 20th March 1886, made a grant of a tract of land, which was irrigated or capable of being irrigated by the canals, to the plaintiffs' father, but at the same time stipulated that it should have the right to intervene when necessary in the management and control of the canal, Ghulam Kadir having died and dissensions having arisen between his sons, the Government in 1890 took possession of the canals, declaring them to be their own property. The plaintiffs, who are three sons of Ghulam Kadir, sued for a declaration of their right to possession as proprietors of three-fourths of the canal.

Held, following the principles enunciated by Lord Kingsdown in Ramsden v. Dyson (L. R. I. H. L. 129) that in equity the plaintiffs have acquired proprietary rights in so much of the Government lands as was required for the construction and maintenance of the canal and are entitled to a declaration that, subject and without prejudice to the privilege conferred upon the Government by the reservation clause of the sanad, dated 20th March 1886, to a proprietary right in three-fourth shares of the Hajiwah Canal, Held also, that the reservation clause did not give the Government a right to seize and confiscate the canal, but that it gave them the right from time to time whenever they think it necessary in the interest of the public without payment of any compensation whatsoever, to take into their own hands the management, control and distribution of the waters of the canal without being in the position of receivers, managers or trustees for the proprietors or accountable to them for the profits. A contracted with a railway company for the supply of certain quantities of ballast; and he also sub-contracted with B that the latter should supply the kunker in 2 years and 6 months. On the grounds that B was carrying out his sub-contract in an unsatisfactory manner, and that the rate of progress was such that the ballast would not probably be delivered within the time, A terminated the contract with B at the end of 5 or 6 months, and sued for damages.

Held that it was not sufficient for A to show that B had begun his work so badly that in self-protection A had taken the work away from his sub-contractor, and had afterwards incurred losses which would not have resulted if the contract with B had continued. B was under no terms to deliver particular quantities at certain times; and until the time for performance elapsed, or so much thereof as would have rendered it impossible for him to perform his contract, in the absence of any refusal on his part to proceed, no cause of action had accrued to A.—A clause in the contract between A and B was that if the latter delivered the ballast in an unsatisfactory manner, or should the rate of progress be such as to create an opinion that the ballast would not be delivered within the specified time, A should have the power of terminating the contract by giving two months' notice: Held, that A's right to rescind the contract under this clause did not necessarily convey with it a right to damages; but if the rescission by A were not merely an act of precaution on his part, but was forced upon him by B, a suit for damages would be maintainable.

42. Measure of damages.

Plaintiff contracted with a Railway Company to deliver sleepers at Rs. 2-15-0 each, and then contracted with defendant for supply of a given number of sleepers by defendant at Rs. 2-8-0 each, within a given time. Defendant having ceased to deliver, plaintiff sued for damages. Held, that as defendant knew of the contract of plaintiff with the Railway Company, the proper measure of damages was the difference of rate in the two contracts. 43. Guarantee.

Plaintiff proposed to M to take a building contract; before the agreement was complete, M urged a prior engagement, and proposed R and B to undertake the work in his stead, promising to overlook their work generally. To this plaintiff agreed, and ultimately the contract was entered into with R and B. R and B failed in their contract, were guilty of acts of fraud, and finally absconded; whereon plaintiff sued M, R, and B jointly and severally, for damages. Found, that M had not connived at the fraud of R and B, and was not pecuniarily interested in the contract made by them; and held, under the circumstances, that M was not liable for damages. 44. Separate or Entire—Reduction of price for inferior work.

Defendant was under contract with Government for the supply of doors, and plaintiff was under a sub-contract with defendant to make the doors. The doors were made and delivered in batches by plaintiff to defendant, and the latter paid for every batch except the last, which Government rejected as not coming up to the contract. Other batches of doors supplied by plaintiff had been of inferior quality, and defendant had been put to expense in making them good. In a suit by plaintiff for the price of the last batch, defendant contended that plaintiff was bound to supply doors according to pattern, and that the payments made by defendant to plaintiff were not in full discharge of claims for work completed, but a general advance in respect of an entire contract.

Held, that the contract between plaintiff and defendant was not entire, but that there was a separate contract for each batch; and that defendant had no remedy in reference to the inferior quality of the batches of doors accepted and paid for.

Held also, that defendant might have reduced the price of the last batch from the contract price to the actual value, had he not by working up the doors prevented their actual value at time of delivery from being ascertained.—BERTOLA v. PEER BUKSH. 45 P R 1869

45. Plaintiff estopped from replying to plea that contract was illegal.

In a suit for the custody of a wife, defendant pleaded that plaintiff had sold the woman to him for Rs. 300. Plaintiff replied that the sale was void for illegality.

Held, that plaintiff's replication was bad, on the ground that it was not open to a party to an illegal contract to ask the Court to relieve him from its stipulations. HAKAM v. KAHNA. 10 P R 1870

46. Construction of contract—"Fortius contra proferentem."

On the 11th October 1868, the plaintiff commenced certain buildings for the defendant, an Executive Engineer, 1st Division, Agra Canal, without any agreement as to the rates of payment. On the 4th February 1869 the parties executed an instrument, by which the defendant agreed to pay the plaintiff for the buildings at certain rates higher than the ledger rates of the Public Works Department. In the middle of March 1869 the work was stopped by the defendant. In a suit for the price of the work done, the plaintiff claimed to be paid for the whole of the work at the contract rates; the defendant contended that for work done prior to the 4th February 1869, the plaintiff should be paid according to the ledger rates only.

Held, that construing the agreement most strongly against the defendant, he was liable at the contract rates for all work that had not been paid for at the time when the contract was made. MOTEE RAM v. THE EXECUTIVE ENGINEER, AGRA CANAL. 15 P R 1871

48. Contract with Independent Rajah—Cession of territory to British Government—Effect of, upon rights of contractee—Reservation of rights by transferring State—Construction of contract—Custom of place where made—Appropriation of property—Laches of owner—Right to injunction to restrain further injurious acts.

In May 1865, the Rajah of Chumba, an independent and absolute ruler, secured to M. by an instrument written in English, the sole right to quarry slate and to hold slate quarries within a specified portion of the Rajah's territories for the term of ten years, in consideration of the payment by M of Rs. 1,000 a year. It had been the custom in Chumba for the Rajah to grant to his subjects by written instruments the right to quarry slate for a certain consideration,—the right in each instance being confined to a specified locality and limited by a fixed period of time. In these instruments, the word "slate" was represented by the vernacular "sél" and "quarry" by "sél-kakhan." In the Chumba territory there were to be found blue clay slate (fit for building purposes, and which, if properly quarried, would make inferior slabs), roofing slate and slab slate. By sél the Rajah and his subjects understood only roofing and slab slate, and therefore no right was conveyed to the grantees by the vernacular instruments in the blue clay slate. In 1866, the Rajah ceded to the British Government a portion of his territory called Balún, which was also a part of the territory within which M was entitled to quarry slate under his agreement of May 1865. The Superintendent of Chumba (a British Officer appointed in 1866, at the Rajah's request, to assist him in the management of his State) arranged the terms of the cession of Balún; and in a letter to the Commissioner of Amritsar, submitting these terms on behalf of the Rajah, took into consideration the value of the blue clay slate as a building material, as an item forming part of the basis of calculation on which the value of Balún was estimated; and in the same letter brought to notice that Balún was included in M's agreement of May 1865, by which he had the sole right for ten years of working the slate quarries in the land included in it, and requested that if slate were found in the ceded lands, Government would not interfere with M's right. In 1867, 1868, and 1869, the Government made roads and erected barracks on Balún; in so doing—in levelling the top of the hill, making roads, and using blue clay slate found in the hill for building the barracks—M. (and T to whom M assigned his rights in the quarries in February 1868) alleged that the Government had violated the rights secured by the Rajah to M by the agreement of May 1865. During the progress of the work at Balún, neither M nor T made any complaint of the infringement of their respective rights, or put forward any objection, of which official notice could be taken, to the appropriation of the blue clay slate.

In a suit brought by M and T for compensation for the slate appropriated and used by Government.—Held, that the Court had jurisdiction to entertain the suit, inasmuch as, the Rajah of Chumba having only made the broad proposition that the British Government was to be allowed to take slate of some kind from Balún without accurately separating what slate was intended from the material referred to in M's agreement which the Rajah required to be recognized, the Government was responsible in a Civil Court for an alleged breach of the rights secured or intended so to be.

Held also, that upon the evidence the intention of the Rajah of Chumba was to secure to M only the right to quarry roofing and slab slate, and that M had not an exclusive right to the blue clay slate.

Held also, that the laches of M and T in not taking objection to the appropriation of the slate, barred them from recovering compensation, if otherwise they were entitled to compensation.

Found, that there had been no systematic quarrying of slab slate, and that there was nothing to shew that the incidental quarrying of it had taken place to any appreciable extent.

Held, that if in the course of excavating blue clay slate (which Government had the right to quarry), blocks of slate which, if quarried differently, might be termed slab slate, were incidentally or casually extracted, no damages were recoverable for such blocks.

Held also, that as a continuation of the excavations might interfere with the rights of T (the assignee) to quarry roofing and slab slate (for as they excavated down, the Government agents were coming to splitting slates), T was entitled to an injunction to restrain the Government making further excavations. Plaintiff bought certain nazul premises at public auction and paid the price, Rs. 2,220. By the conditions of sale, the sanction of Government was necessary to complete the transaction; and before that sanction was obtained or applied for, plaintiff was convicted of criminal breach of trust. The Magistrate convicting him was the Deputy Commissioner who held the purchase-money (Rs. 2,220), and to cover certain losses sustained through the plaintiff's offence of breach of trust, the Deputy Commissioner appropriated the sum of Rs. 2,220, declined to give possession of the premises, and re-sold the property, which was bought by the defendants. Plaintiff having undergone his term of imprisonment, sued the defendants for possession. Held, that the sale to the plaintiff not having been sanctioned by the Government, he had no title to the premises. SALIG RAM v. GOKAL SINGH. No 47 P R 1874

51. Master and servant—Contract, whether for a term of years or determinable upon notice—Contract governed by law of place of performance—Power of Governors of a School to dismiss Master—Jurisdiction of Court over the matter.

The late Bishop of Calcutta (Dr. Cotton) established a School at Simla, and framed certain statutes or rules for its conduct or management. By those rules, the Head Master had power to appoint Assistant Masters, their number and salary being fixed by the Governors; and the Assistant Masters were liable to be removed by a vote of the Governors present at any meeting.

Plaintiff in April, 1871, engaged himself in London to serve in the School as Assistant Master; received £100 as passage money from London to Simla, and executed a bond by which he obliged himself to pay the sum of £200 to the Head Master of the School, the condition of the bond being that if the plaintiff "during five years from the commencement of his duties faithfully discharged all "the duties of his said office of Master," the bond should be void. At the time of entering into this engagement, plaintiff was not made acquainted with the above-mentioned rules or statutes (though he was informed that there were Governors of the School), but he became aware of them about three years afterwards. In June 1874, plaintiff was accused by the Head Master of misconduct or insubordination, and he submitted the matter to the Governors for decision, who, after making an investigation, dismissed the plaintiff from his Assistant Mastership. Plaintiff thereupon sued the Governors for damages for wrongful dismissal, alleging, with reference to the bond of April, 1871, that his engagement was for five years.

Held, that the plaintiff and the Governors had not entered into any contract, express or implied, whereby the latter were bound to employ the former for the full term of five years.

Held also, that plaintiff was bound by the above-mentioned rules and statutes, and that under them the Governors could dismiss the plaintiff whenever they thought fit to do so; and that no suit would lie against the Governors for exercising that power, if they acted fairly and honestly.

Held also, that if there were any contract in this case superseding the power of the Governors to dismiss the plaintiff under the statutes, that contract must be governed by the law of the country where it was to be performed; and by that law (the law of India), plaintiff would be entitled to only one month's notice of dismissal. The money was paid, but defendant did not perform his part of the contract, and it was found by the Court trying the case that defendant never intended procuring a wife for the plaintiff, but obtained the money under false pretences. Held, that a suit to recover back the sum of Rs. 200 was maintainable. 54. Contracts in aid of prostitution—Immoral—Void.

It is immoral to advance money to a prostitute expressly to enable her to carry on her trade; and money so advanced cannot be recovered. Every advance of money to, or contract made with, a prostitute, is not necessarily immoral; it is a question of fact whether in the particular case, the loan or subject-matter of the contract was meant by the plaintiff to be applied to or used for the defendant's immoral trade, or whether the plaintiff knew that the defendant intended so to apply or use it. 55. Immoral Contract.

The plaintiff leased a house to the defendants, one of whom was a tailor, the other a prostitute. The female defendant carried on her profession on the premises. Plaintiffs sued for rent due.

Held, by BOULNOIS, J., that it was not to be assumed that the plaintiff knew that the house was hired for the sole purpose of the female defendant practising her calling, and the rent was recoverable.

Held, by LINDSAY, J., that if the plaintiff knew that the intention of the defendants in hiring the house was that the woman should practise her profession there, the rent was not recoverable; but, as a fact, this was not known to the plaintiff.

Held, by CAMPBELL, J., that though, as a fact, the plaintiff knew the purpose for which the female defendant required the premises, he was entitled to recover his rent. SULTAN v. NANU. 22 P R 1877

Plaintiff therefore sued for the Rs. 120, advanced for the marriage expenses, and got a decree from both the Lower Courts.

CONTRACTS—contd.

58. Joint promissory notes—Construction of instrument—Marginal entry.

Certain promissory notes were executed by the defendants and one C. in favour of the plaintiff. Each promissory note contained a joint and several promise by the persons executing them to pay a certain sum of money within a fixed period. On the margin of the notes the following words were printed, the rate of interest being filled in ink, and the initials of the aforesaid C. being attached at the foot thereof, but at a time subsequent to the execution of the notes by the defendants:

"N. B.—In case of default of payment of "this promissory note at maturity from any "cause whatever, the amount to bear interest "from due date at Rs. 3-2-0 per cent. per "month."

Held, that the marginal entry did not form an integral part of the promissory notes executed by C. jointly with the defendants, the said entry being entirely distinct from the operative words of the promissory notes, though written or printed on the same sheet of paper, but that the alteration or addition in the marginal entry after the execution of the promissory notes would not render them void as against the defendants. Held, that the above document amounted to a contract to sell, though not a complete sale on the 8th March, and the contract was to sell all the stones for Rs. 10,000 on the defendant approving of them, and the contract being indivisible the defendant could only be released by returning the whole when the time allowed for approval expired. Plaintiff, who was a co-sharer with defendant No. 2 in the village of Mughalpura, claimed a right of pre-emption of certain land arising out of a mortgage by conditional sale by defendant No. 2 in favour of defendant No. 1, and relied, in support of his claim, upon entries in the Wajib-ul-arz of the village made in 1842 and 1880. These entries were to the effect that there had been no mortgage or sale in the village up to 1842 and 1880, respectively, but that every co-sharer was thence forward to be at liberty to mortgage or sell his share for necessity or to pay arrears of Government revenue, provided that he first offered the said share to certain specified persons. It was urged, on behalf of plaintiff, that these entries either (a) established a custom in his favour, or (b) evidenced an agreement sufficient to support his claim.

Held, (i) by the Full Bench, that these entries were not agreements, and (ii) by the Divisional Bench, that they were sufficient evidence of the custom set up. DILSUKH RAM v. NATHU SINGH. 98 P R 1894 F. B.

62. Sale to three persons—Shares of vendors specified distinctly, but purchase-money for all shares mentioned in lump—Joinder of parties—Indivisible contract—Limitation.

One Mussammat R. sold certain land to three brothers for a lump sum of Rs. 2,000, but the deed of sale recited that two-thirds of the property were sold to two of the brothers, M. S. and G. S., and one-third to P. S. The said deed was executed and registered on the 29th March 1892, and on the 21st February 1893, plaintiffs who were proprietors of the village where the said land was situate sued for pre-emption in respect of the sale. G. S. had died previously to the institution of the suit which was brought against M. S., both in his capacity of vendor and of representative of G. S. and P. S., but on the 10th April 1893 P. S. informed the Court that there was another brother of G. S. who ought to be impleaded as his representative, and accordingly the said brother was made a defendant on the 24th April 1893, by which date plaintiff's suit as against him was barred by limitation. The first Court, however, held that though the suit was barred in respect of the two shares sold to M. S. and G. S., it was within time as regards the share of P. S. and decreed accordingly. This decree having been reversed on appeal, by the Divisional Judge, plaintiffs appealed to the Chief Court.

Held, that the contract of sale as regards the vendor was one and indivisible, the specification of the shares in the sale-deed being merely an arrangement among the purchasers inter se which did not affect the vendor, who had contracted to take Rs. 2,000 for the whole land, and could not have been compelled to sell to one or other of the vendors his specified share on payment of a proportionate share of the purchase-money.

Held, further, that plaintiff's suit being barred as against the brother of G. S., who was impleaded after limitation, was also barred as against the other brothers. KESAR SINGH v. PANJAB SINGH.

63. Contract—Sub-letting contract, what is—Assignment - Illegality of assignment of or sub-letting of contract as opposed to public policy.

A contract by which the plaintiffs agreed to supply the Commissariat authorities with certain bhusa contained a recital to the effect that the contract was not to be sub-let, although it could be transferred with the approval of the official by whom it was sanctioned. Subsequently the plaintiffs entered into an agreement with the defendant, under which the defendant was actually to supply the bhusa to the Commissariat Department, paying the plaintiffs one anna for each rupee's worth supplied. The defendant made default, and the plaintiffs had to perform their contract, and thereby incurred an alleged loss of Rs. 221 for which they sued the defendant. The first Court found that the agreement between the parties was void as being opposed to public policy, and dismissed the suit.

Held, that the defendant was not entitled to avoid fulfilling the terms of his agreement with the plaintiffs on the ground that it was opposed to public policy, merely because the plaintiff had, done something which under the terms of their contract with the Commissariat Department they possibly should not have done. Where two parties, competent to contract, have formally entered into an agreement, one of them cannot be permitted to get rid of his obligation unless the plea that the object of the agreement is opposed to public policy is thoroughly well substantiated.

Disputes having arisen between the parties with reference to the bhusa transactions, plaintiff filed a suit at Kasur to recover the amount due to him.

Held, that as under the Contract Act there is no liability for a commission agent to render accounts to his principal at his place of business unless there is an express agreement to do so, no cause of action arose in Kasur and that the Munsiff of Kasur had no jurisdiction to try the case. 65. Contract—Alteration of contract by the Court—Interest—Zamindar and Bania.

CONTRACTS—concld.

A suit for possession of certain land on two mortgage-deeds was dismissed by the first Court on the grounds that the deeds had been executed under undue influence and that there was no consideration for them. The Divisional Judge on appeal reversed the findings of the first Court and gave plaintiff a decree to the effect that he should have possession unless the principal amount advanced was paid to him by a certain date, but he disllaowed interest simply because the debtor was a zamindar. On further appeal being preferred by the plaintiff it appeared from the evidence taken on remand that not only was there no undue influence, but the terms regarding the interest and the rates agreed upon were by no means unfair or extortionate.

Held, that although transactions between banias and zamindars require to be strictly scrutinised, yet in cases where it is not shown that the zamindar had been overreached or that he had agreed to terms merely because the bania had been able to exercise undue influence over him or where the terms of the contract are neither inequitable nor oppressive the Courts in India are not competent to decline to enforce the terms of the contract in its entirety on the sole ground that one of the party is a zamindar. Plaintiffs sued in the Small Cause Court at Delhi on the allegations that, on the 7th December 1895, they wrote to the defendant to buy certain goods at Bombay and to despatch them by railway with all possible speed to Delhi; that other letters and a telegram were sent to him for this purpose; that on the 23rd December he replied promising to send the said goods within two days, but that they did not in fact reach Delhi till 11th January 1896, when they were no longer required. Plaintiffs refused delivery and sued for recovery of Rs. 200, which they had remitted to defendant as an advance to make the purchases, with expenses and damages, in all Rs. 234-11-6. Defendant pleaded that the Court had no jurisdiction to try the suit, inasmuch as the whole cause of action arose at Bombay. For the plaintiffs it was contended that the goods were at defendant's risk until they reached plaintiff's hand; that plaintiffs had not indicated any particular railway to which the goods were to be handed over in their letter and could not recover them from the railway; that in reality the transactions should be treated as one for the sale of goods as plaintiffs did not know who were the actual vendors of the goods; and that, in any event, the contract was made in Delhi, as it was not complete until the defendant's acceptance of plaintiff's offer was communicated to them at that place.

Held, that the Small Cause Court at Delhi had no jurisdiction to try the case, which was in reality a suit against an agent for an account of money received by him as such for his principal in the course of the agency business.

Although an offer made by letter does not become a contract binding against the promisee until acceptance thereof is communicated to the promisor, the communication of such acceptance does not make any change in the place where the contract is made, but only affects the time of its coming into force.

Held, therefore, that the plaintiffs, proposal having reached defendant at Bombay and having been accepted at that place, the contract between the parties was made at Bombay. MUHAMMAD SHAFI v. KARAMAT ALI.

It was found as a fact that it was impossible under the circumstances that the defendant could have bonâ fide believed, when the deed was executed, that the executing plaintiff was a person who was sui juris and competent to contract and that therefore the case was not one where an agreement was subsequently "discovered to be void" (vide section 65 of the Contract, Act), but rather one where an agreement was taken from a person who was known to be a minor at the time, but was misrepresented as of full age, and which was therefore known to be void ab initio. It was further found that the mortgage as a whole was not a proper one or beneficial to the interests of the minors.

Held, that the mortgage-deed must be regarded as invalid, but that before the plaintiffs' possession of the property could be restored they must repay to the defendant so much of the consideration money expressed in the deed as had been applied to the benefit of the estate of the minors.

Plaintiff, who was a Barrister-at-Law and enrolled as an Advocate of the Chief Court and practising in the Punjab as such Advocate, sued in respect of the fees for services rendered in his capacity as an Advocate and for services ancillary thereto.

Held by a majority of the Full Bench (Frizelle, Stogdon and Chatterji, JJ.), that the suit was not maintainable, as the plaintiff was incapacitated from making a contract of hiring as an advocate by the usage and constitution of his bar.

Held, per Roe and Rivaz, JJ., Contra, that the suit was maintainable, as no such incapacity attached to the plaintiff.

Held, further per Curiam, that if the principal service rendered could not be the subject of a contract, no service which was merely ancillary thereto and of no value without the principal service, could be the subject of a contract or give rise to any independent cause of action. Held, that a sale of a minor's property by a brother who was neither a guardian legally constituted nor a natural guardian under the minor's personal law is void ab initio and cannot be upheld except on the ground of its being justified by the necessities of the minor or of his estate or beneficial to his interests.

When a person deals with a minor with full knowledge of his minority he is not entitled to claim from him equity when compelled to restore matters to the status quo. It is not just to compel a person to pay any money in respect of a transaction which against him is void.

4. Act IX of 1872, sections 15, 16—Specific performance of lease—Coercion—Undue influence—Coercion must refer to the agreement sought to be got rid of on that ground—Unconscionable bargain.

In a suit brought to enforce specific performance of a lease, it was contended inter alia for the defendants that the lease was not executed by them voluntarily but in consequence of fraud and coercion practised on them by the Tahsildar to compel them to pay up the revenue due by them to Government for the previous harvest.

Held, that assuming that the Indian Contract Act does not require, contrary to the English law, that the coercion should be exercised by or even known to the other party to the contract, the coercion must at all events have been exercised with the intention of causing the person so treated to enter into the agreement which is sought to be got rid of on that ground: as therefore there was no evidence in the present case connecting the Tahsildar with the particular transaction sought to be set aside, the plea on that ground alone must fail.

It was further urged that plaintiff took advantage of defendants' position and drove an unconscionable bargain, but this contention was held to fail for want of proof, there, being nothing to show that the consideration paid by plaintiff was so grossly inadequate, with reference to the state of things existing at the date of the contract, as to evidence fraud or undue advantage having been taken by him. Plaintiff sued to obtain possession of a house which he alleged he had purchased from one of the defendants by registered deed of sale. It was urged by the defendants among other pleas that subsequently to the deed of sale the plaintiff had executed a deed by which he relinquished all claims to the house and promised for himself and his heirs never to sue for it. It appeared that two days after the execution of the deed of sale a complaint under sections 447 and 342 of the Indian Penal Code was brought against the plaintiff, and that the deed of relinquishment was given in consideration of the compounding of the offence under section 447.

Held, that as the offence for the compounding of which the deed of relinquishment was given by plaintiff was not one which could lawfully be compounded, and as the execution and delivery of the deed by plaintiff and its acceptance by defendant in consideration of the offence being compounded were acts prohibited respectively by sections 214 and 213 of the Indian Penal Code, the consideration for the agreement was unlawful within the meaning of section 23 of the Contract Act, both because it was forbidden by law and because it was opposed to public policy, and the deed was accordingly void under that section.

Where the element of intention is expressly made part of the definition of an offence, the offence is not one which comes within the exception to section 214 of the Indian Penal Code and may lawfully be compounded.

Held further, that when a criminal prosecution is instituted against a person and such person fearing the result of such prosecution enters into an agreement in favour of the complainant in consideratiou of his abandoning the prosecution, it cannot be held simply upon these facts that the consent of such person to the agreement was caused by coercion, as defined in section 15 of the Contract Act, nor yet by undue influence as defined in section 16. 6. Contract—Undue influence.

In a suit upon a registered mortgage deed where the defendants (mortgagors) pleaded undue influence and in support of their plea were only able to prove that to this extent pressure had been put upon them to execute the mortgage deed as security for the payment of a debt, namely, that a choice had been given to them of executing the deed or being at once put into Court.

Held, that such pressure did not amount to "undue influence" within the meaning of section 16 of the Indian Contract Act as amended by Act VI of 1899. In order to reap the benefit of that section it was necessary for the defence to establish that the executants of the deed were induced to sign it because the plaintiff was in a position to dominate their will and had used that position to obtain an unfair advantage over them.

In the absence of evidence that the parties to a bond were not on an equal footing, or that the obligor did not fully understand the transaction, or was in the clutches of an extortionate money-lender, the mere fact that the rate of interest was high is insufficient to raise a presumption of undue influence such as is contemplated in section 16 of the Contract Act. Plaintiff sued upon a registered bond purporting to have been executed by the defendant, a married pardanashin lady of Delhi. The defendant admitted execution, but pleaded that the bond was without consideration and fictitious for fear of her husband who was addicted to extravagance and waste. It was proved that the defendant was the daughter of plaintiff's maternal uncle, and had been brought up in plaintiff's house and married from there, and that in fact the plaintiff was the only relation she had on her father's side, that the plaintiff held a position of active confidence with reference to her, as her husband being an unbusiness-like man, she had to call in plaintiff's aid in order to save the family property from being wasted which had been gifted to her by her husband in full ownership. The bond sued upon was executed in plaintiff's house at Hathras, and all the witnesses and persons present at the execution were his servants, dependants, or friends. There was no one to help the defendant with advice or other assistance, her husband with whom she had all along continued to live not being even present.

Held, that such circumstances were sufficient to modify the ordinary presumption arising out of a recital in a registered bond, "that when a bond is registered and its execution is admitted by the defendant the "onus of proof of want of consideration and "of free consent not having been given would "lie on the party seeking to get out of its "effect," and that the onus of proving good faith, fair dealing, and full and free consent must be laid on the party interested in upholding the transaction, and in the absence of such proof the deed must be declared as not binding on the executant.

Upon a suit by the lender against the borrower for recovery of the amount due on the promissory notes.

A purchase of Bank shares held to have been under all the circumstances a contract voidable, under section 17 of the Indian Contract Act.

A person who has been induced to enter into a contract voidable on the ground of fraud, may rescind the contract within a reasonable time after discovering the fraud. The contract continues valid until the party defrauded has determined his election by cancelling it: if he once determined his election, it is determined for ever.

Where a purchase of Bank shares was voidable by the purchaser on the ground of non-disclosure of material facts which it was held to have been the duty of the vendors,—the de-facto Directors of the Bank,—to disclose, and the facts withheld subsequently came to the knowledge of the purchaser, and the purchaser, after a reasonable time had elapsed, took active steps both as a shareholder and as a Director qualified by the purchase to act as such, held, that the purchaser's election was determined by his conduct in affirmance of the contract, and he could no longer repudiate the purchase.

Held also, that the purchaser could not contest his liability as a contributory in respect of the shares so purchased, merely on the ground that the shares had been acquired ultra vires by the Directors, as the shares had a legal existence which their acquisition by the Directors had not destroyed. 3. Act IX of 1872, sections 17, 23—Void agreement—Agreement involving injury to property of another—Agreement of which object is fraudulent.

Plaintiff sued the defendant upon an agreement admitting the latter as a partner in a contract, for which plaintiff had already tendered, to supply wheat to the Commissariat Department, for his share of the losses incurred in such contract and for damages. It was admitted that the plaintiff was aware that defendant was at the time in the employment of the Commissariat Department, and that in tendering for the contract he had to state that no one connected with the Department was at the time of the tender nor should afterwards be admitted as a partner with him. The lower Appellate Court dismissed the suit on the ground that the agreement sued upon was void.

Held, that though the object of the agreement sued upon could not be held to involve or imply injury to the property of another, within the meaning of section 17 of the Contract Act, the rights which it was the object of the agreement to infringe not being rights of property, still the object of the agreement being fraudulent, it was equally rendered void by the same section.

The false representation made to the Commissariat Department was "a promise made without any intention of performing it," and was made to deceive the Agents of the Department, and to induce them to enter into the contract with plaintiff on behalf of the Department. It was therefore "fraud" as defined in section 17 of the Contract Act, and the object of the agreement between plaintiff and defendant being to obtain a contract from the Commissariat Department for the benefit of both, which could not be obtained for both without fraud, was fraudulent within the meaning of section 23, and therefore unlawful. 4. Act IX of 1872, sections 14, 17—Contract entered into with one person on his representation that he was another person—Fraud—Absence of free consent.

In a suit brought by the plaintiff on a contract which he alleged had been entered into between him and the Secretary of State, through the Superintendent, Northern State Railway, and broken by the latter, the defendant's plea was that he did not contract with the plaintiff, the only contract being one entered into with S., a brother of the plaintiff, who represented himself as plaintiff, and with whom no contract would have been entered into, but for this representation. The Lower Court finding that the defendant's agent was deceived by the conduct of the plaintiff and his brother as to the person with whom he was dealing, held that there was no valid agreement and no contract.

Held, upholding the order of the lower Court, that the deception practised by the plaintiff amounted to fraud within the de-

1. Act IX of 1872, sections 18, 19, 116—Misrepresentation—Warranty.

In a suit to recover the price of a pair of mares sold by the plaintiff to the defendant, the main pleas for the defendant were (1) that the contract was voidable at his option on the ground of misrepresentation as defined in clause (1) of section 18 of the Contract Act; and (2) that there was a warranty and a breach thereof entitling the defendant to compensation from the plaintiff. In support of these pleas the defendant relied inter alia upon an assertion made by the plaintiff in a letter forming part of the contract of sale that the mares were sound, whereas it appeared after the sale that the mares were unsound, though admittedly not to the plaintiff's knowledge. The material portions of the plaintiff's letter, which was written in answer to a letter from the defendant asking for particulars about the mares, were as follows:—

"I think your queries would be more satisfactorily answered by a friend, if you have one in the station, and I shall feel more satisfied. All I can say is that the mares are thoroughly sound * * * *

P. S.—I would prefer your buying them after you have satisfied yourself with regard to them through a friend" * * *

Held, that the above amounted to a misrepresentation within the meaning of section 18, clause (1) of the Contract Act as to the soundness of the mares, as the letter could only be construed as a "positive assertion" of soundness, coupled with a recommendation to the defendant to satisfy himself on this point before purchasing, and it further appeared on the facts that the assertion thus positively made was not warranted by the information of the plaintiff, and that the defendant's consent was caused by it.

But held further, that the contract was not voidable by the defendant on the ground of the above misrepresentation, as it was proved that he had the means of discovering the truth, i. e., the unsoundness of the mares, with ordinary diligence.

Though according to the law in England the falsity of a representation made by a vendor and relied upon by a purchaser precludes the former from imputing to the latter negligence in ascertaining the truth, this is not the law in India, when there is merely misrepresentation as distinct from fraud, under the clear enactment in the exception to section 19 of the Contract Act. Whether the party misled had the means of discovering the truth with ordinary diligence is a question of fact to be decided in each case with reference to the circumstances.

Held also, that the above letter did not amount to a warranty of soundness, the affirmation contained therein being a representation not amounting to a warranty for want of the requisite intention.

In the absence of any definition of "warranty" in the Contract Act, the definition accepted by the English law, being consistent with the language of the Indian Act, may be accepted, according to which "an affirmation at the time of sale is a warranty, provided it appears in evidence to have been so intended," the intention being a question of fact to be determined from the nature of the sale and the circumstances of the particular case. In a suit by plaintiff to recover from defendant the Rs. 750 as damages for breach of contract, held that the contract was not one which could be enforced in a Court of law, the agreement between plaintiff and defendant being so intimately connected with the transaction by which plaintiff purchased a wife, that the payment to Mussammat B. must be regarded as a consideration opposed to public policy, and, therefore, one which rendered the promise to indemnify plaintiff against loss a void agreement under sections 23, 24 of the Contract Act. In a suit, the parties to which were Muhammadans, in which plaintiff claimed to recover Rs. 759 which he advanced to defendant on the promise that she would marry him when divorced from her husband, it appeared that Rs. 300 of the sum claimed were paid to the husband for the divorce and the balance to the defendant to pay her debts.

Held, by Plowden and Smith, JJ., that as the divorce had taken place in pursuance of the above agreement, the contract had been executed in part and was no longer executory, and therefore upon the principle above stated the plaintiff could not recover the money advanced by him to promote the divorce.

Held, further, by the full Bench (Plowden, Tremlett and Smith, JJ.), that the plaintiff could not recover the money advanced to the defendant to enable her to pay her debts, as an agreement to advance money to a woman in consideration that she will procure a divorce and marry the plaintiff, even where the parties are Muhammadans whose personal law allows a wife to purchase a divorce, is a void agreement under section 23 of the Contract Act, as being for an unlawful object or consideration, and therefore the consideration or object of the agreement sued upon being unlawful in part the whole agreement was void under section 24 of the Contract Act.

A, a Hindu, agreed to pay a sum of money to B., in consideration of B. giving his sister in marriage to A.'s nephew. Held by the full Bench, that the agreement was void, its object being opposed to public policy. It is a matter of public concern that all persons, whatever their personal law, who have authority over minors, should faithfully perform their duties towards them and especially in respect to marriage, the institution of marriage being itself a matter of public concern. The policy of the law in conferring power of consenting to a minor's marriage is to secure the benefit of the minor. The object of an agreement of this kind is to procure by corrupt means the guardian's consent to the desired marriage, and is, in substance, a bargain and sale of the minor in marriage. The tendency of such agreements is to subordinate and postpone the interests of the minor to those of the guardian Such agreements are, therefore, opposed to the policy of the law and to public policy.

Held, further, that such transactions were not countenanced by the usage of the country. The practice was neither followed nor approved by the Hindu community at large.

S. married his daughter elsewhere and the ptaintiff sued N. for damages.

The plaintiff's father D. betrothed his marriageable daughter to N. receiving Rs. 1,200 from him: the marriage took place shortly after the betrothal. S. agreed to give his infant daughter to the plaintiff's son, and N. guaranteed the performance of S.'s undertaking.

The Divisional Judge held the agreement to be a contract of guarantee.

Held, that there was no enforceable agreement of guarantee; the agreement was entirely for the benefit and satisfaction of N. himself and his promise was nudum pactum. He could in fact do nothing more than endeavour to induce S. to marry his daughter to the plaintiff's son, and if the parties contemplated that he should purchase S.'s consent, such an undertaking on his part would be void according to the view expressed in the Full Bench decision reported as No. 128 *P. 10. Suit for recovery of money paid to agent for unlawful purpose—Suit instituted before execution of unlawful object—Principal and agent—Contract Act, 1872, section 23.

Locus penitentiæ.—Plaintiff sued on the allegations that he paid a sum of Rs. 300 to the defendant, a friend of his, to procure him a bride; that defendant had represented that this sum was to be paid to the bride's father in advance, and the betrothal performed on the 9th Nauratara; that no betrothal had taken place, and that defendant on being asked to refund had denied the receipt of the money. Defendant denied the transaction altogether. The first Court found that plaintiff's allegations were proved, and that he was entitled to recover, but the Divisional Judge, on appeal, held that the defendant had undertaken to act as a mere procurer, that the contract was opposed to morality and public policy, and, following No. 116 P. R.. 1880, dismissed the suit without going into the facts. Plaintiff appealed to the Chief Court.

Held, that inasmuch as, upon the true construction or the transaction, defendant was merely a go-between or agent of the plaintiff for paying the money to the bride's father, the property in the money did not pass to the defendant but remained with the plaintiff so long as it continued in defendant's hands, or until it was paid over to the father of the intended bride.

Held, therefore, that the suit was maintainable.

A person who pays money to his agent, whether on the agent's representation or of his own motion, for an unlawful purpose is entitled to a locus penitentiæ, and can call back his money at any time before the purpose is executed, nor in such a case can the agent, merely because he was entrusted with an unlawful commission, repudiate his liability to refund and appropriate the money to his own use.

Held, by the full bench, that inasmuch as the intention in requiring a surety for the appearance of an accused person to answer a criminal charge is that the surety shall at his own personal risk see to the appearance of the accused according to his bail bond, it is opposed to public policy to allow the surety to recover from his principal any part of his bail bond that may have been forfeited

12. Hindus—Suit by wife for dissolution of marriage—Ante-nuptial agreement—"Public policy"—Contract Act, 1872, section 23.

In a case in which the parties were Hindus, a wife sued for dissolution of her marriage, and based her claim thereto on an ante-nuptial agreement to the effect that her husband was bound, under certain circumstances, to let her go.

Held, that such an agreement was contrary to public policy and unenforceable, it being against the policy of the law as administered by British Courts to allow persons by a contract between themselves to avoid a marriage on the happening of any event they may think fit to fix upon.

Plaintiff sued for possession of $\frac{3}{11}$ths share of certain plots of land sold at an auction by Government on the allegation that the plaintiffs and defendants before the auction had entered into an agreement to buy the land in partnership and thereafter to divide it, and that they had paid their quotas of the portion of the purchase money deposited on the day of the sale and were willing to pay the balance, and had been wrongfully refused their share by the defendants. The first Court having decreed the claim, the Divisional Judge reversed it on the ground, amongst others, that the alleged agreement was void as opposed to public policy, inasmuch as the parties had agreed to purchase the property at the auction jointly and not to bid against each other. Also found that the form of suit was really one for specific performance of a contract in writing, and that the first Court had no jurisdiction to try it.

Held, that under the circumstances of the case the agreement was perfectly lawful and one that should be enforced, being more in furtherance of public policy than against it.

Held also that clause 10 of section 7 of the Court-Fees Act was not applicable as there was no agreement to perform. The defendants had already performed the contract they had made to buy the property and the title vested in the plaintiffs as soon as the purchase was effected, and they had become joint-owners with the defendants, and thirty 14. Contract—Contract entered into in violation of Army Regulations, India—Contract opposed to public policy—Void contract, Contract Act, 1872, section 23.

Paramount public policy requires that men of full age and competent understanding shall have the utmost liberty of contracting, and that their contracts when entered into freely and voluntarily held sacred and enforced by Courts of Justice unless they contravene a positive rule of law. In a case where the plaintiff, a regimental bania, sued the defendant, a sowar in his regiment, to recover Rs. 371-14-3 due on a book account, and the Court dismissed the suit on the ground that the plaintiff being prohibited by section 85, para. 2063, Army Regulations, India, Volume II, Part 2, from lending money to the rank and file over and above the daily rations on pain of punishment, the dealings between the parties were contrary to public policy and the contract void.

Held, that the plaintiff was not precluded from suing. Section 85 of Army Regulations, India, not having the force of law, the punishment mentioned therein being merely departmental, the contract sued upon was not in contravention of any statutory prohibition, though it might be against the rules of discipline, and that it was therefore not void as against public policy.

"Balance Rupees 323. One rupee per cent per month has been fixed as interest on it. Besides this there is no other account between us up to 18th Assoo, 1923, (Signed)—Fazl Dad."

The items composing the balance of Rupees 323 were barred by limitation on the 18th Assoo 1930, when the balance was alleged to have been struck; and thus plaintiff, who brought his suit on the balance, could only recover by showing that the entry amounted to a promise to pay within the meaning of section 25, clause 3, of the Contract Act.

Plaintiff sued for the principal and interest alleged to be due on a registered bond executed by the defendant shortly after attaining his majority for money advanced to him as loans by the plaintiff while he was a minor, which loans were admittedly not made for necessaries.

Held, that though the agreement sued upon did not amount to a contract, as it was made without legal consideration, still it fell under the first part of clause 2 of section 25 of the Contract Act, inasmuch as it was a promise to compensate the plaintiff for what he had already voluntarily done for the promisor, viz., for the goods and cash he had voluntarily made over to him; but that this would only cover the actual advance and not the interest, the undertaking to pay which was merely an empty promise.

6. Muhammadan Law—Gift to heir—Deathbed gift—Hiba-bil-iwaz—Indian Contract Act, 1872, section 25 (2)—Agreement for consideration.

In a suit for the administration of the estate of one M. I., deceased, one of the heirs M. S., son of the deceased, claimed as his sole property an item of Rs. 3,000, which was the principal item in dispute in the case. The claim was based upon a rukka written by the deceased dated 26th July 1888. In support of the rukka it was contended that M. S., having been appointed manager of his father's shop at Calcutta, the assignment in question was not gratuitous but by way of remuneration for work done, or a hiba-bil-iwaz, and was valid therefore with reference to section 2 or section 25 (2) of the Indian Contract Act, 1872. On the other hand, the validity of the gift was questioned upon the ground (1) that it was a gift to an heir without consent of the other heirs; (2) that it was a gift made in contemplation of death and was therefore opposed to Muhammadan Law.

Held, (1) that viewed simply as a gift, the direction entered in the rukka, which was written under the apprehension that there was immediate danger of death, violated the rule of Muhammadan Law relating to marz-ul-mout or death-illness, and was therefore invalid.

(2) That the transaction in question did not constitute a hiba-bil-iwaz, which did not include the case of a gift in consideration only of natural love and affection or of services or favours rendered, but was limited to mutual or reciprocal gifts between two persons each of whom is alternately the donor of one gift and the donee of the other.

(3) That the transaction evidenced by the rukka was not an agreement for consideration as defined by section 2 of the Contract Act there having been no promise on the part of M. I. to remunerate his son for services to be rendered, nor did it fall within the purview of clause (2) of section 25 of that Act, as it was not a promise to compensate one who had voluntarily done something for the promisor, and moreover, as an agreement made in violation of a rule of Muhammadan Law binding upon the parties to the agreement, it could not, by the terms of the section itself, be enforced. MUSSAMMAT SALAMTI JAN v. MUHAMMAD SHAFI. 61 P R 1893

7. Gift of land by husband to wife—Contract Act, 1872, section 25—Punjab Laws Act, 1872, section 5—Statement before settlement Officer—Subsequent mortgage of gifted property by donor—Voluntary conveyance in fraud of creditors.

A. gifted certain lands and a house to his second wife for her support, and appeared before the Deputy Superintendent of Settlement and prayed that mutation might be effected in the donee's name. Mutation was formally sanctioned, but subsequently the donor mortgaged the gifted property as well as other lands to plaintiff, who now sued to recover the mortgage-money and interest from all the property included in the deed. The donee, who was impleaded as a defendant, pleaded that plaintiff could not claim against the property gifted to her, and plaintiff in reply contended (a) that the gift was void under section 25 of the Contract Act, (b) that the donee never took possession of the property, and (c) that the gift was in fraud of creditors and invalid.

Held, (a) that the question as to the validity of the gift should be determined by reference to section 5 of the Punjab Laws Act, (b) that the fact that subsequently to the gift, A., in transactions with third parties, called the property his own, was not sufficient to counteract or nullify the formal statement made by him before the Settlement Officer that the property belonged to the donee, and (c) that inasmuch as A., though heavily in debt at the time of the gift, was a man with a large amount of property and was not shown to have been deprived in consequence of the gift of the means of paying his debts, the gift was not void as being in fraud of creditors. 8. Suit for balance of account—Promise to pay.

Plaintiff sued upon a balance of account alleged to be in writing of the defendants' father which was to the following effect:

"Bais tahrir anke mublagh Rs. 1,500, ek "hazar panch so rupae ke nisf jiske mublagh "sat so pachas rupae Sikke chehre shahi hota "hai az sari nau hisab karke babat hisab bala "jo ki hamrah Hafiz Muhammad Naim Sahib "aur Haji Abdul Hakim Sahib ke sath hai "mere zimme baki raha hai, lihaza yeh "chand kalme bataur sanad likh deta hun ke "sanad rahe aur waqt hajat kam ave."

The defence contended that as the above balance was struck more than three years after the previous balance the claim was barred by limitation.

Held, that the above entry constituted a promise to pay within the meaning of clause 3 of section (25) of the Indian Contract Act and as such created a fresh starting point of limitation.

9. Suit on balance of account—Acknowledgment of subsisting liability—Promise to pay a barred debt.

Plaintiff sued upon a balance of account, dated 7th May 1902, alleged to be attested by the defendant which was to the following effect:—

"Baki rahe lene lekhe uparle de, akhrin "3,760—Baisakh parvishta 27, Sambat 1959. "Ticket ek anna lagaya gia, zabani Bibi "Jasodan, bewa Hukam Chand, zat Khatri, "sakin Qasba Hajipur, Kanungo, mublagh "3,760 rupaya ba-zima Jasodan ke Shankar "Das Shah ke dene rahe, etc."

The defence having pleaded limitation, it was discovered that the account between the parties ended in 1878, since when nothing was paid or received, but with a view to keep the claim alive for the purposes of limitation eight balances were struck just within three years of one another, i. e., in 1881, 1884, 1887, 1890, 1893, 1896, 1899 and 1902. Of these, the first two were signed by a brother of the defendant, and the third, fourth, fifth and sixth by persons alleged to be her agents, of which fact there was no proof at all on the record except the bare statement of the plaintiff himself, and the seventh and eighth were alleged to have been attested by the defendant herself.

Held that the entry in suit, i.e., of 1902 neither amounted to a valid acknowledgment of debt, nor to such a promise to pay as would give a new period of limitation in the one case under section 19 of the Limitation Act, and in the other under section 25 (3) of the Contract Act. It did not amount to an acknowledgment, because the entries of 1887 to 1896 not having been signed by some one duly authorized in this behalf by the defendant the latter acknowledgments referred to a barred debt and were made after the expiration of the period prescribed for its recovery. Similarly, being a bare statement of account and containing none of the ingredients required by clause 3 of section 25 of the Contract Act, it was not a promise to pay within the meaning of that section. amounts to a mere acknowledgment of liability in respect of an existing debt and does not import a promise to pay the same so as to constitute a fresh cause of action independently of the debts on which the balance was based and cannot therefore be made the basis of a suit. Section 27.

Contract in restraint of trade—Relief.

The female plaintiff when feme sole entered into a contract to serve the defendant as milliner and dress-maker for three years. After two years' service under the contract, she married the other plaintiff, and defendant consented to a rescission of the contract of service in consideration of the plaintiff's promising that the female plaintiff would not carry on the trade of milliner and dress-maker for a certain term and within certain local limits. The new agreement also contained a clause that if she did so trade, the plaintiff would pay the defendant Rs. 10,000 as a penalty. Plaintiff's sued to have the contract cancelled. Defendant pleaded that though it must be admitted the contract was void under section 27 of the Indian Contract Act, so far as it restrained the female plaintiff from trading, yet it was void only to that extent, and if she elected to trade she was bound to pay the defendant according to the agreement, her promise to pay being based on a consideration, viz., her release by the defendant from the residue of her term of service. The defendant further pleaded that plaintiffs had no cause of action, and could not sue for cancellation of the contract.

Held, that the contract to pay the penalty was void, under section 27 of the Contract Act, on the ground that if the plaintiff could not set up in a particular trade without paying Rs. 10,000, that in itself was a restraint upon her trading.

Held also, that, though defendant had not threatened to enforce the payment of the penalty, the position of the plaintiff was such that the suit would lie, as it was of the first necessity to her to discover whether, without incurring a heavy liability, she could establish a trade; and as the contract could not be enforced against her, it was against conscience for the defendant to retain the instrument. —Sections 28 and 127, Ill. (b)—Promise by creditor to forbear to sue debtor—Void agreement—Agreement partly void and partly enforceable.

Forbearance by a creditor to sue a debtor, or a promise to forbear either absolutely or for a time, is not unlawful. On the contrary, there is express authority in section 127, illustration (b) of the Contract Act, for holding that a promise to forbear for a time is lawful, and by consequence a promise to forbear absolutely, and the forbearance itself, are lawful.

Where the agreement between the parties consisted of a promise by the plaintiff to forbear to sue a third party absolutely or for a time, and in consideration thereof the defendants made certain promises to indemnify plaintiff for any loss he might incur thereby, held, that such agreement would be void under section 28 of the Contract Act only as far as it restricted the plaintiff from suing his debtor. Upon performance by plaintiff of his promise, such performance having taken place at defendant's desire, plaintiff would be entitled to enforce defendant's promise according to its tenor. Defendants pleaded that they had a general running account with plaintiff, of which the indigo transaction was merely one incident, and that on the whole account, after allowing plaintiff the actual price of the seed, there was a balance due to them from plaintiff of Rs. 2,697-15-3, which amount they claimed by way of set-off. It appeared that defendants, as commission agents, did a large gambling business, in the course of which they purported to make purchases and sales for their constituents, but that such purchases and sales were mostly nominal and of a wagering character. Elaborate accounts were kept, showing the profits and losses of each constituent; according as prices rose or fell, and speculations succeeded or failed, and the winnings or losings of the respective constituents were adjusted, generally, in defendants' books. It was not proved that defendants had actually paid in cash to any of their constituents the sums alleged to have been lost by plaintiff in such wagering transactions, or that they had settled by final cash payments all the balances due to the numerous third parties who had won what plaintiff had lost; it was, however, shown, from their books that defendants had made themselves liable to that extent as a matter of account. The set-off claimed included the amount of defendants' commission fees in respect of the said transactions.

Held, as regards the amount claimed for losses incurred by the plaintiff, that, in accordance with the principle that an agent, before he can recover from his principal the amount claimed for losses on a wagering transaction entered into under the principal's instructions, must prove either an actual payment upon the principal's behalf or that a liability has been incurred which is enforceable at law, defendants were not entitled to recover the said amount, inasmuch as plaintiff's losses were not proved to have been settled by actual payments, and it was still open to defendants to repudiate the liability evidenced by the mere statement of account, by advancing the plea that the dealings were wagering transactions.

Held, as regards the charges for commission fees, that defendants were not debarred from recovering the same on the ground that they were earned in respect of services relating to wagering transactions.

5. And Section 213—Principal and agent—Badni (wagering) contracts—Void contract—Suit for profits received by defendants as plaintiff's agents—Liability of agent to render accounts to his principal.—Defendants as plaintiff's agents arranged with third parties for the delivery to plaintiff of 20,000 maunds of gram on a certain date, and three weeks after sold the said gram as his agents at a profit, the plaintiff sued the defendants for differences between the purchase and sale price after deducting the commission to which the defendants were entitled. The defendants admitted the purchases and sales, but pleaded that the transactions were badni, and that they had realized no profits.

Held, that as there was never any intention that the gram should be delivered, and it was only intended that differences should be settled, the transactions were badni and void under section 30 of the Contract Act, but not illegal, and the defendants were liable to the plaintiff for any profits received by them. The defendants as agents being bound to render proper accounts to the plaintiff, under section 213 of the Act, which they had failed to and in the absence of any objection on their behalf as to the amount of profits calculated the plaintiff was entitled to a decree for the amount claimed.

Held, that an agent can maintain a suit against his principal to recover the actual payments which he has made as agent under the express instructions and on behalf of his principal or for a liability incurred by him to a third party if that is enforceable by law, though the contracts in respect of which the claim is made were transactions known as badni transactions, but he cannot include in it an adjustment of a badni loss against a badni gain on behalf of his principal. 7. Wagering contracts—Principal and agent—Rights and liabilities of—Right of agent to recover from principal sums due on account of wagering contracts—Contract Act, 1872, Section 30.—Held by the Full Bench—

(1). That a cash payment made by an agent on account of a badni transaction entered into on behalf of a principal is legally recoverable from the principal.

(2). That enforceable liabilities incurred by an agent on such transactions to a third party are also recoverable.

(3). That if an agent dealing badni for a principal loses a sum of money on the transaction and having no previous account with the third party authorises him to enter up in his books a debt against him he cannot without paying the money recover the amount from his principal.

(4). If in such a case the agent already has dealings with the third party and is owed money by him on accounts with which the principal has no concern and the sum lost as aforesaid being less than the sum due to the agent is settled by a credit in the agent's books, and a debit in the third party's books, the amount so credited and debited is recoverable by the agent from the principal.

Section 30—concld.

(5). That in a similar case if the debit owed to the agent is less than the sum lost by him on account of his principal and the matter is settled by a debit and credit as aforesaid plus a payment in cash of the balance due by the agent, the latter can recover from his principal both the amount adjusted by debit and credit and the amount of the cash payment.

(6). That if in such a case the sum already owed to the agent by the third party is equal to the sum lost as aforesaid to the third party and the agent authorises that party to set off one against the other in his books, and treat the account as squared the agent can recover the sum in question from his principal. Kashmiri Lal v. Girdhari Lal (74 *P. By section 37 of Act IX of 1872 "promises bind the representatives of the promisors in case of the death of such promisors before performance, unless a contrary intention appears from the contract." And by section 203, Act VIII of 1859, if a "decree be against a party as the representative of a deceased person, and such decree be for money to be paid out of the property of the deceased person, it may be executed by the attachment and sale of any such property, or if no such property can be found, and the defendant fail to satisfy the Court that he has duly applied such property of the deceased as shall be proved to have come into his possession, the decree may be executed against the defendant to the extent of the property not duly applied by him in the same manner as if the decree had been against the defendant personally."

Held, that the legal representative of the deceased, whether the latter were a Hindu or not, was only liable to perform the promise or pay the debts of the deceased to the extent of the property of the deceased received by him.

Held also, that the existence of assets and receipt or possession thereof by the representative must be enquired into before decree, unless a primâ facie case of receipt, or right to receive, not denied by the defendant, appeared; and that such case appeared on proof that the defendant was entitled to existing assets without proof that they had come into his actual possession.

Three plaintiffs, of whom one was a minor, sued to recover the rent for eleven years of two shops rented by the defendant. Exemption from the ordinary law of limitation was claimed on the ground that one of the plaintiffs had attained majority only about a year before suit, while another was still a minor, and that during their minority there was no one qualified to give a discharge without their con urrence. For the defendant, it was contended that Mussammat Shahzadi Khanam, one of the co-owners, could have given a discharge at any time during the period in question without the concurrence of the minors.

Held, by the Chief Court, that Mussammat Shahzadi Khanam could have received payment of the whole rent during the disability of the minor co-owners and given a valid discharge for the same without their concurrence; that time consequently ran against them all during the period of the said disability; and that three years' rent only was recoverable in the present suit. In 1888, the respondent's father took from the petitioner's father some land on lease for seven years, commencing from 11th August 1888, and executed a registered deed. The lessee died before the expiry of the lease, and his son has remained in possession ever since. In 1898, the petitioner, his father, also then being dead sued the respondent, for arrears of rent for 1892, 1893, 1894, on the basis of the registered lease. The plea on behalf of the respondent before the Financial Commissioner was, that as he was a minor when his father executed the lease, it was not binding on him. Held, that in accordance with section 37 of the Contract Act that promises bind the representatives of the promisors in case of the death of such promisors before performance, the registered contract of his father bound the respondent, especially as he had possession of the property, the subject of the lease during the period for which rent was claimed. In a suit to recover the amount due on a mortgage bond, it appeared that the bond was in favour of three persons, of one of whom only the plaintiff claimed to be the representative. There was no allegation that the person whom the plaintiff represented was in fact solely entitled under the bond, nor did the plaintiff ask the permission of the Court under section 30 of the Civil Procedure Code to sue on behalf of all the persons entitled on it, nor did the bond itself contain anything to indicate an intention that the right to claim performance by the mortgagor should not rest with the persons in whose favour the mortgage was made jointly.

Held, that the case was governed by section 45 of the Contract Act, and that the plaint disclosed no cause of action on which the plaintiff was entitled to sue alone. JOWALA NATH v. RUPA.

5. Non-joinder as plaintiffs of co-promisees—Contract Act, section 45.

Held, by the Full Bench that an objection by a defendant that one of several co-promisees cannot sue alone to enforce payment of a debt due to them jointly is an objection falling within and governed by section 34, Civil Procedure Code.

Per PLOWDEN, J.—When a plaint discloses that the suit is on a promise made to the plaintiff, or plaintiffs named in the plaint, jointly with others who are not made parties to the suit the Court can and ought to consider and decide whether it should be returned for amendment under section 53, Civil Procedure Code, or whether it should be received leaving the question of parties to be dealt with by defendant under section 34 or by the Court under section 32, Civil Procedure Code. If the objection is taken in time by the defendant under section 34, he is entitled to an order of the Court under section 32, that any person who ought to have been joined as plaintiff be made a plaintiff, if he consent and otherwise be made defendant, if practicable. If the objection is not made in time, the defendant cannot afterwards, either before or after judgment, take an objection founded solely upon the non-joinder of the other co-promisees either in that form or in the form of an objection that the plaintiff or plaintiffs alleged a promise to himself or themselves alone and that there is a variance between this allegation and a proof of promise to him or them and others jointly with him or them.

Per POWELL, J.—The objection that where several partners lend money to the defendant and jointly receive a promise of repayment from him, section 45 of the Contract Act is as a matter of substantive as distinguished from Procedure Law a bar to the right of any one of the parties alone to claim repayment of the whole debt is not valid in law. The joinder or non-joinder of parties must always depend on some rule of substantive law, and the procedure rule does nothing more than provide that certain rules of substantive law, certain rights and obligations arising out of such law can only be enforced or given effect to in a particular way or under particular limitations.

to the plaintiff and two others jointly. The plaintiff denied this allegation and adhered to the claim as stated in the plaint.

Both the lower Courts found that the defendants' allegation was correct, and that the moneys claimed were due, if at all to the plaintiff and two others. The lower Appellate Court further considered whether the plaintiff should be allowed to amend his plaint, and decided that it was useless to permit this, as the amended claim would be barred by limitation.

The plaintiff then preferred a further appeal to the Chief Court: he did not accept the finding as to the debt being due, if at all to two other persons jointly with him, nor did he ask for permission to amend his plaint.

Held, by the Full Bench, that the Court, finding that the lower Courts had rightly held that the debt if due was not due to the plaintiff but to the plaintiff and others jointly, the proper decree to make was one dismissing the appeal thus confirming the decree dismissing the suit without going into the question whether the precise ground on which the lower Appellate Court refused to permit an amendment of the plaint was correct, or whether the plaintiff could be permitted to amend his plaint.

Plaintiff had a money decree against one L. S., jagirdar of Majra, and had possession of the village, the revenue being then payable in kind, by virtue of a patta from the said L. S. On the 30th May 1891, the latter granted a lease of his jagir rights for twenty years to his son, R. D., and the defendant, T. S., in equal shares, stipulating to receive Rs. 500 a year from them and they in their turn undertaking to pay Rs. 225 annually on account of cesses and the nazrana due to Government from the jagirdar into the tahsil. Of the balance Rs. 275, one-half was to be paid by the lessor to R. D., and out of the other half the defendant, T. S., was to pay Rs. 100 annually to the plaintiff in liquidation of his decree against the lessor and Rs. 37-8-0 to the lessor himself. On the 31st May 1891 T. S. executed the bond now sued upon in favour of plaintiff, whereby he agreed to pay the amount of the plaintiff's decree, which was fixed at Rs. 1,400, in yearly instalments of Rs. 100 each payable before Jeth each Sambat year from 1948. In case of default, the whole amount due at the time was to be realizable at once. On the said date plaintiff wrote a document (called a receipt) in favour of T. S. and R. D., by which he declared that he had given up possession of the village which he had been holding under the jagirdar's patta and stipulated that he would pay the revenue due on account of the lands held by him, as owner or mortgagee to them. Plaintiff having sued to recover Rs. 1,250 on the bond upon the allegation that T. S. had paid him Rs. 150 only of the stipulated instalments and had failed to pay the rest, T. S pleaded that the consideration for the bond, viz., the lease of his jagir by L. S. had failed as it was incapable of enforcement and that plaintiff by his own conduct in paying the jagir dues to L. S. contrary to his agreement was precluded from suing on the bond. It was proved that plaintiff had paid the revenue of his lands direct to L. S. since Rabi 1892 and not to the lessees as agreed upon, and that T. S. had realized batai for Kharif 1891. The first Court accepted T. S.'s plea and dismissed the claim so far as it was based on the bond, but the Divisional Judge, on appeal decreed plaintiff's suit in full on the ground that the bond was an independent contract, the consideration being the release of L. S. from his liability under the decree. T. S. appealed to the Chief Court.

Held, upon the facts as above stated, that the contract between plaintiff and T. S. was contained in the bond and the so-called receipt read together and not in the bond alone, and that plaintiff's failure to pay the jagir dues to T. S. and R. D., as he had agreed to do, was a sufficient ground for T. S. avoiding his contract as contained in the bond.

The consideration for a contract is extraneous to its terms, and there is no legal objection to proof being given that the recital of the consideration in a written contract is incomplete or is in reality something different. TARA SINGH v. SOHNU SHAH. 17 P R 1898.

2. Act IX of 1872, sections 39, 62—Substitution of new contract—Incomplete contract—Right of rescission—Right to revert to old consideration.

Defendant in consideration of an old debt and a present advance executed a deed in the form of a mortgage bond in favour of plaintiffs, in which it was stipulated that possession of certain landed property of the defendant was to be transferred to the plaintiffs as security for the debt, but it appeared that as a fact such possession was never given, and the deed remained unregistered. In a suit by plaintiffs for the recovery of the debt with interest, the defendant pleaded that the proper remedy of the plaintiffs was to sue for specific performance and for the repayment of the debt, adding that, when such a suit was brought, a plea of want of full consideration would be advanced. The suit was eventually dismissed by the lower Appellate Court on the ground that, though the existence of a debt was admitted by the defendant, that debt was in the eye of the law discharged by the acceptance of the bond above alluded to, and that therefore plaintiffs had no remedy except upon such bond.

Held, (reversing the above order) that though it is open to parties to a contract to substitute a new contract therefor, in which case the original contract need not be performed (section 62, Contract Act), yet in this case there was no completed "contract" within the meaning of the section quoted, and the defendant's refusal to perform his promise, viz., to have the deed registered and to transfer possession justified the plaintiffs in rescinding the new agreement under the provisions of Section 39 of the Contract Act, and they were therefore entitled to revert to their original consideration, and to use the bond as an acknowledgment, which it clearly contained, of a liability subsisting on the date of its execution.—RAJA RAM v. MEHAR KHAN.

3. Contract—Novation—New contract reduced to writing but inadmissible in evidence—New contract not duly completed—Suit based on former contract.

On the 22nd Bhadon, Sambat 1948, a balance was struck by defendant in plaintiff's favour for Rs. 1,800, and subsequently defendant received from plaintiffs two sums, one of

Rs. 300, the other of Rs. 400, making up a total of Rs. 2,500, and Rs. 125 paid on account of interest. To a suit by plaintiff based on this account, defendant pleaded that subsequently to the striking of the balance, plaintiff had agreed, in writing, to take the amount due to him in 10 years with interest at 4 annas per cent., payable annually, and that in the face of the said new contract for the discharge of defendant's liability, plaintiff's present suit on the old balance and subsequent advances would not lie. It was admitted that the document embodying the alleged new contract was insufficiently stamped, and was inadmissible in evidence, and that no evidence aliunde could be given of its terms. It was further found by the first Court, and accepted by the Chief Court, on appeal, that the plaintiff did in fact take the document in question, but that he did so without fully considering its nature, and that immediately after he came to know of its defects, he insisted on a proper bond on a sufficient stamp being executed, which the defendant refused to give.

Held, that the alleged new contract set up by defendant could not be successfully pleaded in bar of plaintiff's claim because (a) the new contract having been reduced into the form of a document, inadmissible in evidence, could not be proved, much less operate as a discharge of the former contract, and (b) assuming that the factum of the new contract could be proved, the naked promise to pay the old debt in ten years at reduced rate of interest was not sufficient to extinguish the old liability.

Held, further, that in any case plaintiff was entitled, on defendant's refusal to give a proper security for the debt, to treat the old contract as subsisting and to sue on the same. UDHO SHAH v. HIRA SHAH.

Defendants owed some money to the plaintiffs on book account, they executed certain hundis in discharge of that debt. On maturity the hundis were dishonoured. The plaintiffs sued the defendants on the original debt, the defence being novation of contract.

Held, that the plaintiffs not having endorsed or lost or parted with the hundis under such circumstances as to make the defendants liable upon them to some third parties, were entitled to sue on the original debt which had not been extinguished by the fact of the receipt by plaintiffs of the hundis by way of security.

Plaintiff sued in the Small Cause Court, Lahore, on the allegations that defendant had promised that, in consideration of the sum of Rs. 100, he would either put plaintiff on the track of certain cows which had been stolen from him, or would return him the money; that plaintiff had paid defendant the said sum, but that the latter had neither pointed out the cows nor returned the money, and that, therefore, plaintiff sued him for refund of the same. The Court found that the money had been paid as alleged, and held that plaintiff was entitled to sue for its recovery, as defendant, not having done the service for which he had received it, could not retain money for doing nothing. Defendant applied to the Chief Court for revision, and it was contended, on plaintiff's behalf, that under section 25 of Act IX of 1887, the decree of the Small Cause Court could not be set aside merely on the ground of error of law.

Held, that the scope of section 25 of Act IX of 1887 is wider than that of section 622, Civil Procedure Code, and that the Chief Court, when acting thereunder, is competent to correct errors of law made by Judges of Small Cause Court.

Held, further, that plaintiff's suit was not maintainable on the ground that if defendant had actually received the money, he had committed an offence under section 215, Indian Penal Code, and that, therefore, plaintiff could not make out his case without showing as part of it that he had himself been guilty of an illegality, viz., of abetment of the said offence.—ARUR SINGH v. KHUDA BAKHSH.

Plaintiff sued to recover Rs. 580 on the following grounds: He stated that the first three defendants, who represented a firm at Rawalpindi, sent their agent, defendant 4, to Meerut to purchase sugar for them. After sugar had been purchased and made over to the Railway at Meerut for transmission to Jhelum, defendant 4, in whose name the bill of lading had been made out, came on to Jhelum to await the arrival of the sugar and there pawned it to plaintiff for Rs. 600, making over the bill of lading to the plaintiff: defendant 4 then paid up Rs. 150 out of the Rs. 600 which he had borrowed, but left the bill of lading with the plaintiff. On the arrival of the sugar at Jhelum, plaintiff presented the bill of lading to the Railway authorities, paid Rs. 125 freight from Meerut, and claimed the sugar; but defendants 1—3 represented to the Railway authorities that the sugar belonged to their firm and so got delivery of the sugar. Plaintiff therefore claimed Rs. 450, the balance of Rs. 600 lent on the security of the sugar, and Rs. 125 paid as freight at Jhelum, plus interest, in all Rs. 580, for which he declared all four defendants responsible as the firm was bound by the acts of its agent. Defendant 4 did not appear, and defendants 1—3 disclaimed all liability.

Held, with regard to the claim for Rs. 450, the balance of the money advanced on the sugar, that though there was no absolute proof of collusion between the plaintiff and defendant 4, it was impossible to hold the firm responsible for the act of their agent. It was clear from the subsequent conduct of defendant 4, that he was wholly unauthorized to make the pledge, and plaintiff, who was aware that defendant 4 belonged in some capacity at least to the firm could by ordinary care have found this out; that therefore the circumstances were such as to raise a reasonable presumption that the pawnor (defendant 4) was not acting in good faith, so that according to the first proviso in section 178 of the Contract Act the pledge could not be considered valid.

With regard to the claim for the Rs. 125 which was paid by plaintiff for the freight of the sugar at Jhelum, held, that the plaintiff was entitled under section 69 of the Contract Act to be reimbursed by defendants 1—3, as plaintiff, who was in possession of the bill of lading, was interested in paying the freight which the defendants 1—3 were bound to pay, and having paid it could sue to recover the amount from the said defendants, and further that the defendants could not claim to avoid the plaintiff's claim to be reimbursed this payment, by the plea that they had furnished their agent with the necessary funds to clear the goods.

Held, further, per Rattigan, J., that if section 69 of the Contract Act were not applicable to the last item of claim, plaintiff could recover the item under section 70, as he never intended to let the defendant have the benefit of this payment gratuitously. PRABHU DYAL v. JIWAN SINGH.

Held, that though section 28 of the Legal Practitioners Act prohibits the recovery of any money under an agreement not recorded in a particular manner, and thus supersedes those provisions of the Contract Act under which agreements can be enforced generally, it does not touch section 70 of the last named, which has no relation to express agreements, but is intended especially to deal with cases where remuneration can be claimed in the absence of an agreement. Held, that whereas in the present instance, a pleader sues upon an alleged oral contract for remuneration for services rendered to a client, he cannot succeed, because the contract is not in writing; and because there is a contract, he cannot fall back upon section 70 of the Contract Act and claim reasonable remuneration.

If there is no agreement on the subject of remuneration amounting to a contract under the Contract Act, operating independently of section 28 of the Legal Practitioners Act, the pleader's right to remuneration is measured by section 70 of the Contract Act.

If there is an agreement which amounts to such a contract, the pleader cannot enforce it unless it is reduced to writing and filed in Court as required by section 28, Legal Practitioners Act. If these conditions are

A obtained a decree against plaintiff in the Meerut Court; defendants (Delhi Bank) obtained a decree against A in the Delhi Court. Under an order of the Delhi Court, plaintiff paid defendants the amount of their decree against A. Execution was then taken out in the Meerut Court by A against plaintiff, who pleaded that he had paid the amount to the Delhi Bank. The Court overruled the objection, holding that it could not recognize the payment at Delhi; whereupon plaintiff paid A the amount of his decree. Plaintiff sued defendants to recover back the money paid by him at Delhi in satisfaction of the defendant's decree against A. Held, that plaintiff was entitled to recover the money from the defendants under section 72 of Act IX of 1872; the payment having been made under a mistake. 2. Mistake—Liability of person to whom money is paid under mistake of fact.

A was a tenant holding under B. On B's death he was induced to take a lease of the same property from B's widow to whom he regularly paid rent. Subsequently the executors of B sued A and obtained a decree for the full amount of the rent due from him since B's death.

Held, that as the parties entered into the agreement under a mistake of fact, A was entitled under the provisions of section 72 of the Indian Contract Act to recover back the whole amount he paid as rent to B's widow.

3. Breach of contract to transfer business—Measure of damages.

In a suit for damages for breach of contract, it appeared that the defendants contracted to transfer their business, including stock and outstandings, to the plaintiffs, and to pay them Rs. 1,650 in consideration of the plaintiffs paying the debts of the firm, that the defendants did not complete the transfer, or pay Rs. 1,650 to the plaintiffs, and that the plaintiffs sued for damages accordingly, which they assessed at Rs. 2,000. It further appeared that the liabilities of the defendants' firm were Rs. 5,500.

Held, that the plaintiffs were entitled to recover compensation for loss or damage, in terms of section 73 of the Contract Act; that if the plaintiffs had suffered any loss or damage such loss or damage had arisen from their having been prevented from making the profit (if any) which would have accrued to them, if the defendants had fulfilled their promises, and the plaintiffs had fulfilled theirs—that is to say, the plaintiffs had been deprived of any surplus, which would have remained in their hands in the form of stock and money after paying Rs. 5,500 minus Rs. 1,650 due by plaintiffs, that is, after paying Rs. 3,850 to defendants' creditors, and realizing outstandings due to defendants, less costs of recovering the same; that in order to recover anything the plaintiffs must prove that the total of the value of stock and net recoveries from outstandings due to defendants would have exceeded Rs. 3,850, and the plaintiffs were entitled to recover from defendants any sum thus arrived at in excess of that sum, within the amount of Rs. 2,000 claimed by them. 4. Bond payable by instalments—Interest payable on default from date of bond—"Penalty"—Compensation for breach of contract—Primary and secondary obligations—Act XXVIII of 1855, section 2, and Indian Contract Act, 1872, sections 73, 74.

Held, in the case of a bond payable by instalments, that when a promisor engages to pay each instalment on a specified date without interest, and in the event of a breach of his engagement, with interest from the date of his bond, the primary obligation is to pay the instalment on the date specified, and the subject of the promise is the secondary obligation to make compensation for the breach of the primary obligation, the right of the promisee to compensation being regulated either by section 74 of the Contract Act when there is an agreement as to the compensation to be made, and it satisfies the requirements of the said section, or by section 73, when there is no agreement, or it does not satisfy the terms of section 74.

When a contract in the above terms fails to indicate, either expressly or by implication, a date up to which the interest is to be calculated and the period therefore remains indefinite, it cannot be said that a sum is named within the meaning of section 74 of the Contract Act.

Section 2 of Act XXVIII of 1855 was not intended to override the general law of contracts and compel the Courts to enforce any and every agreement which might be made as to payment of interest, and there is nothing in the said section to restrict, or in any way effect, the power of the Courts to adjudicate upon the right to recover the interest claimed, or the operation of sections 73 and 74 of the Contract Act in respect to the compensation to be made upon breach of a contract to pay money with interest. What is recoverable in a suit upon a breach of a contract to pay money with interest is compensation in money by way of damages and not interest eo nomine, though the stipulated rate of interest may be good evidence of the proper measure of the compensation.

5. Section 74—Penalty—Stipulation to pay higher rate of interest after a certain time.

The defendant borrowed a sum of money for six months at 3 per cent. per mensem, the bond (which was the only security plaintiff took for the loan) stipulating that if the loan and interest were not repaid within 6 months then 10 per cent. per mensem should be paid after that term on the total sum of the unpaid loan and interest which had accrued during the term of 6 months. The loan was not repaid, and plaintiff demanded payment, upon which defendant said that he should like time to be given and that he was willing to pay interest for the accommodation. Plaintiff gave time, and at the expiration of 2 months sent in a claim for interest, calculated, for those 2 months, at 10 per cent. per mensem. Defendant paid the amount so claimed for interest. In August 1874, plaintiff sued for the balance due, allowing credit for all payments, and claiming the unpaid part of the loan and interest thereon at 2 per cent. for 6 months, and then interest at 10 per cent. according to the terms of the bond.

Held, that defendant was liable for the full amount claimed; that as to the question whether the stipulation for payment of higher rate of interest was in the nature of a penalty to secure the punctual payment of the money lent and the lower rate of interest, the parties showed an intention that 10 per cent. and nothing less, should be paid; and the intention of the parties is that which governs the question,

Held also, that the stipulation in such cases is not to pay a sum of money by way of a penalty, but to pay money by way of interest, and the Court is bound to decree the sum mentioned in the agreement under section 2 of Act XXVIII of 1855, section 74 of the Contract Act being wholly inapplicable. 6. Section 74—Penalty—Liquidated damages—Agreement to pay higher rate of interest in default of payment of principal on due date.

M. B. executed two mortgage-bonds in favor of H. M., stipulating to pay interest at Re. 1-4-0 per cent. per mensem for two years, and after that period at Rs. 2-8-0 per cent. Held, that the contract to pay interest at the double rate in default after two years was a valid contract, and H M. was entitled to claim interest at Rs. 2-8-0 per cent. under it.

An agreement to pay a double rate of interest in default of repayment of the loan by a given date is not in the nature of a penalty, but of liquidated damages, and one to which effect ought to be given as being the agreement of the parties. HONDA MAL v. MUHAMMAD BAKSH 25 P R 1879

7. Plaintiffs sued to redeem certain property from mortgage. The mortgage-deed provided that interest should be paid at 12 per cent. per annum on the principal sum at the expiration of one year, and in default of its being paid on that date, the interest should be added to the principal, and on the consolidated sum interest should be paid at 18 per cent. per annum. Held, that the increased rate of interest was intended to operate as a penalty.

The question whether the provision as to a higher rate of interest is to be treated as liquidated damages or as a penalty is a question of law to be decided on a consideration of the whole instrument in each case. BARMA MAL v. GOKAL CHAND 51 P R 1879

In a suit for compensation for breach of a contract, it appeared from the instrument upon which the suit was founded that the contract of the debtor was to re-pay Rs. 1,500 by monthly instalments of Rs. 65; that by clause 2 of the agreement should he fail to pay any one instalment on or about a fixed date in each succeeding month, the creditor was at liberty to foreclose the bond and to demand the whole unpaid balance, which might be due on such failure; and that by clause 3, so long as the foreclosure due to the failure entered in the above condition should last and the amount remain unpaid, the creditor was at liberty to charge interest at the rate of 5 per cent. per mensem on the amount due on the date of foreclosure.

Held, that the case fell within section 74 of the Contract Act, as there had been a breach of contract to pay instalments, and the balance due at date of default with interest thereon at Rs. 60 per cent. till date of payment was the sum named as the amount to be paid in case of such breach.

The question was one of intention and construction and in the present case clauses 2 and 3 "ascertained the compensation for a breach "of the obligation" expressed in the first clause of the instrument (see Abdulla v. Mussammat Kulvanti (No. 150 P. R. 1883). DHANPAT v. KASHI RAM. 106 P R 1887

9. Future interest—Sum named—Section 74, Contract Act—Penalty—Equitable relief.

Plaintiffs mortgaged their land to defendant, the latter to be placed in possession and enjoy the produce in lieu of interest. The mortgagors had the right to redeem within five years, but after that the land was to be considered as sold to the mortgagee for the principal sum advanced, or interest at the rate of 2½ per cent. per mensem was in future to be paid.

Held, in a suit for redemption by the mortgagors, nearly 12 years after the expiry of the said term of five years, that they were not entitled to claim in equity to be relieved from the burden which they had deliberately imposed upon themselves.

Semble: the provision as to interest in the present case was not a sum named which could be relieved against under section 74, Contract Act.

Section 75.

Act IX of 1872, section. 75—Rescission of contract—Suit for compensation for non-fulfilment of contract—Omission to sue for formal rescission.

There is no positive rule of law that when, after a voidable contract has been fulfilled, one of the parties subsequently discovers facts, which if known at an earlier stage would have entitled him to rescind the contract without instituting legal proceedings, the only mode in which such party can obtain relief is by a formal adjudication of rescission through a Court.

Where therefore plaintiff sued for compensation for damages sustained through the non-fulfilment of a contract of sale which was voidable by reason of the misrepresentation of the defendant, and the question was whether there had been such a rescission as would entitle the plaintiff to recover the damages, held, that the plaintiff was not bound to sue for rescission of the contract, nor was the plaintiff's omission to communicate to the defendant before suing him the rescission of the contract, (which was sufficiently clearly communicated by the act of suing for damages as soon as the defendant became aware of the suit)., fatal to the maintenance of the present claim for damages. R. L. of Rohtak was robbed of a currency note by one N., who brought it to Delhi and with the assistance of H. got it cashed by R. N., who passed it for full consideration to M.

The Rohtak police traced the note to M. D., seized half of it and gave it in as evidence in the criminal case against the thief N. The latter was convicted, and by order of the Magistrate the half note was handed over to R. L., who subsequently sued before the Judicial Assistant of Rohtak and obtained a decree (ex parte) against M. D., for the other half note, or (alternatively) for Rs. 100.

In a suit by M.D., against R.N., from whom he received the note, to recover its value, held that M. D. was not entitled to recover, he having received full consideration from R. N.

3. Bonâ fide holder—Goods—Stolen money.

Plaintiff received from B. a certain sum of money in satisfaction of a lawful debt. Shortly before this payment, a theft had taken place in the treasury at Lahore in which B.'s son was implicated. The Police traced the money to the plaintiff and had it produced as evidence in the criminal case against the thieves. The Magistrate, acting under section 517 of the Criminal Procedure Code, directed that the money produced be handed over to Government as part of the stolen property. Plaintiff applied for restoration of his money, and on refusal instituted the present suit. The defence was that Government held the money under a lawful order, that the plaintiff was not a bona fide holder inasmuch as he abstained from making an inquiry into the title of the previous holder—the son of B.—who had committed the theft and that he got no better title to the money than the thief himself under section 108 of the Contract Act.

Held, that section 108 of the Contract Act did not apply, that the question of good faith did not arise in the case, that the plaintiff had received the money as current coin in payment of a lawful debt, and was therefore entitled to its recovery. B challenged the subsequent sale to C. Held that, inasmuch as B allowed A to retain possession of the horses after his purchase, and led C to believe that A was the owner, the sale by A to C was binding, and that C acquired under section 108, Exception 1 of the Contract Act, a title which could not be impeached by B.

The plaintiff changed a Government currency note belonging to the defendant, which note subsequently turned out to be a stolen one, and the Court deciding the criminal case ordered the plaintiff to return the note to its original owner. Plaintiff instituted a suit against the defendant from whom he received the note to recover its value. It was admitted that the defendant was a bonâ fide holder of the currency note. The lower Court found the plaintiff entitled to recover the amount paid by him to defendant as damages, vide section 109 of the Indian Contract Act.

Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to maintain the suit against the defendant. Sections 108 and 109, Indian Contract Act, had no bearing on the sale, for the passing of the note for money could not be considered to be a sale of the note within the meaning of that Act.

concocted a story about a burglary having taken place at their shop in order to account for the loss of his (plaintiff's) jewellery, which in point of fact had been made away with by the defendants, and on the contention, even if the burglary actually took place defendants were liable as they failed to exercise due care and caution in respect of the articles deposited, the defendants pleaded that the jewellery in question as well as other articles belonging to themselves were really stolen, and that they were not in any way responsible for the loss.

Held, that as the articles were actually stolen from defendant's shop, and they had taken as much care of the articles bailed to them as an ordinary prudent man would under similiar circumstances take of his own goods of the same quality and value, and having regard to sections 151 and 152 of the Indian Contract Act, 1872, the defendants were not liable. 5. And section 161—Bailee not responsible for the loss of the thing bailed.

Plaintiff, a jeweller of Lahore, sued there to recover from the defendant, a jeweller of Calcutta, the value of certain jewellery sent by him to the latter for repairs and subsequently lost. It appeared that the parties method of transacting business was that the plaintiff used to receive jewellery for repairs from customers and send it off by post uninsured to the defendant, who after executing the necessary work returned the same uninsured by V.-P.P. the value being the sum due to defendant for the work. The plaintiff having sent defendant in the ordinary way a parcel of jewellery for repairs with a request for its return by first post, the defendant returned the articles duly repaired according to the usual practice by V.-P. P. uninsured, the sum to be recovered from plaintiff being the amount of his charges for the work done. The parcel was received in the Lahore Post Office and a postal peon took it to the plaintiff's shop, but as the latter did not find it convenient to pay then he refused delivery and asked the peon to keep it for him till he should send for it. Two days after the plaintiff sent an employee for it, but the parcel could not be found and in fact it was discovered to have been lost. The defence contested the claim. Held, that the defendant was not liable for the loss of the parcel, as it did not arise from his negligence, and moreover the previous conduct of the plaintiff estopped him from urging that the neglect on defendant's part to insure on the particular occasion was a want of such care as a man of ordinary prudence would under similar circumstances have taken of his own goods.

Held also, that the Post Office holding the jewellery at Lahore was plaintiff's agent and not defendants' and, therefore, loss by the Post Office did not render defendants liable. BOSECK & CO. v. MANDLESTAN.

2. Pledge—Pledge by co-owner in possession—Contract Act, 1872, sections 108, 178, 179.

N. M. and K. L. had made at Calcutta a necklace, valued at above Rs. 6,500. This was sent to K. L. at Delhi for sale there, but was pledged by K. L. to S. R., a jeweller of Delhi, for a certain sum, which K. L. appropriated to his own purposes. N. M. and K. L. were joint-owners of the necklace with equal interests therein, but S. R. had no notice that K. L. was not sole owner, and had no reason to presume that K. L. was acting improperly in making the pledge. The lower Courts held that the rights of the parties were governed by section 179 of the Contract Act, 1872, and that N. M. could recover possession of the jewel on payment of half its value or, in the alternative, could recover half its value from S. R.

Held, on appeal by S. R., that though the answer to the question, whether a given person was in possession of the thing pledged must depend upon circumstances which may vary in each case, in the present case K. L., one of the co-owners, held the jewel in his safe custody by the express direction of the other co-owner, and was, therefore, a person "in possession" of it within the meaning of section 178 of the Contract Act, and, as such, was capable of making a valid pledge of it in its entirety.

Section 178 of the Act is, in its terms, wide enough to include any person who is "in possession" of a thing, whether his interest be Husband and wife—Power of wife to pledge husband's credit—European Christians.

In a case where the husband and wife were European Christians, held, that in order to make the husband liable for goods purchased by, and supplied to, his wife, it is necessary to prove that the relation of principal and agent existed between them, or that the conduct of the husband was such as to estop him from pleading that there was no such agency, or as to show that he clearly ratified the acts of his wife acting as his agent in respect of the purchases in question, and that it is not sufficient to show that the tradesman bonâ fide believed in the existence of the agency. Such agency must in fact exist, and though in respect of "necessaries" supplied to the wife while living with her husband there is a presumption that it does exist, the presumption is rebuttable, and is rebutted when it is proved that the wife had not her husband's authority.

In the present case, held, on the facts that the wife was not acting as the authorised agent of her husband in making the purchases in question, and that the husband had not

Held, that plaintiff suing for the balance of money due to him for work done for a Rana in his State situate outside British India was entitled under section 230 (3) of the Indian Contract Act, IX of 1872, to sue the defendant, the Rana's agent (qua the work) in British India, from whom plaintiff had actually got the contract.

Semble, that article 56 of the second schedule of the Indian Limitation Act is applicable to such a suit.

Held further, that a letter addressed to the Rana by the defendants within 3 years from the date of the completion of the work by the plaintiff was a sufficient acknowledgment of liability in respect of the plaintiff's claim within the meaning of explanation (1) to section 19 of the Indian Limitation Act, as it admits in clear and definite language that plaintiff has a good and subsisting claim. Held, that the rule of law to regulate succession in the case of a Hindu convert to Christianity should be determined by ascertaining the course of his conduct and the usages adhered to by him since his conversion, and therefore where it appeared that he and his family had severed all connection with Hindu society and in matters relating to social intercourse, marriages and the similar usages, abandoned all caste distinctions and had thoroughly identified themselves with the members of the religion of their adoption, it is in accordance with justice, equity and good conscience to apply to them the rules of inheritance prescribed by the Indian Succession Act, 1865.

On the 3rd March 1892, A. S. and others sold to the Madrassa Tibbia in Delhi through its Manager H. A., certain land in a village with all accessory rights, the sale-deed being registered on the the 16th March 1892. Subsequently plaintiffs, who were biswadars of the village, sued both the vendors and the vendee for pre-emption, the latter being sued as "the Madrassa Tibbia through its Manager, H. A." (inter alia) that the land had been purchased in the name of the Madrassa Tibbia of which he was sole proprietor. This allegation being denied by plaintiff, H. A. contended that the said Society being an unregistered corporation could not be sued through its Manager or Secretary, and declined to plead or act on its behalf. The District Judge thereupon returned the plaint for the names of the members of the Society to be entered and returned by the 8th May 1893, the time being subsequently extended to the 25th May. On the latter date it was ordered that all the members of the Society as per lists filed by plaintiffs should be impleaded as defendants and summonses issued for the 3rd July 1893. On the 30th August 1893, about thirty of the defendants so impleaded appeared and pleaded that H. A. was not the sole proprietor of the Madrassa Tibbia, and that the suit was barred by limitation by reason of the added members of the Society having been brought on the record after the expiry of more than one year from the date of registration of the sale-deed. The District Judge held that H. A. was not the sole proprietor of the Society, and dismissed the suit as barred by limitation, under section 22 of the Limitation Act. Plaintiffs appealed to the Chief Court.

Held, (i) that H. A. was not the sole proprietor of the Madrassa Tibbia; (ii) that inasmuch as when plaintiffs instituted their suit they intended to sue as the vendee, the Madrassa Tibbia as a body, and not merely its Manager, H. A.,—the members of the Society although not specifically named being comprised in the designation "Madrassa Tibbia,"—the whole of the members were parties from the date of the institution of the suit, and it was consequently not barred under section 22 of the Limitation Act; and (iii) that plaintiffs who owned land in the village had a right to pre-empt the land in dispute as against the Madrasas Tibbia which did not own any land therein. 25. Appellate Court, jurisdiction of—"Costs to be costs in the cause," meaning of—Power of Court in awarding costs.

Held, (following the decision of the Full Bench of the Calcutta High Court in 6 W. R. 187) that a Court can in regular appeal review the exercise of the discretion of the Lower Court as to the award of costs, but that in special appeal the Chief Court cannot interfere, unless the order made as to costs is contrary to law.

Plaintiff's suit was decreed with cost by the Assistant Commissioner. The additional Commissioner dismissed an appeal by defendant from that order, with costs; but on defendants appealing specially to the Chief Court, the appeal was accepted, and the case remanded for re-decision to the Court of first instance. The Chief Court ordered that costs of the appeal to that Court should be costs in the cause. The Assistant Commissioner in giving his final order decreed all the costs incurred in all the Courts in plaintiff's favour, and the Additional Commissioner upheld this order on appeal.

COSTS—concld.

Held, by the Chief Court, (1) that as regards the costs incurred in the Chief Court, the order of the Assistant Commissioner was legal, as the order of the Chief Court empowered him to deal with such costs, the words "costs of the appeal to be costs in the cause," meaning that it is left to the Court which passes the final orders in the case to say by which party such costs are to be borne; (2) that as regards the costs incurred in his own Court, the Assistant Commissioner had power to deal with them whether incurred before or after the decree of the Chief Court; but (3) that as regarded the costs of the first appeal to the Additional Commissioner, the order of the Assistant Commissioner was ultra vires, as there was no order empowering him to deal with such costs, and the order of the Additional Commissioner having been cancelled by the Chief Court, it was not competent to the Assistant Commissioner to order that the said costs should be paid by either party. Valuation of suit for purposes of Court-fee—Suit under section 283, Civil Procedure Code, 1882—Court-Fees Act, 1870, section 7 (ii) (c) and 2nd Schedule, article 17 (ii), (iii).

Plaintiff in execution of a money decree had a house belonging to his judgment-debtors attached, whereupon defendants objected that the said house had been previously mortgaged to them. The District Judge ordered that the property should remain under attachment, but that it should be sold subject to the mortgagees' lien. Plaintiff then sued his judgment-debtors and their mortgagees, the successful objectors, and prayed that he might be declared to have a preferential right to the attachment of the house in dispute, in supersession of the said order of the District Judge, and that any other relief which the Court might think proper might be granted to him. The suit was valued for the purposes of jurisdiction at Rs. 7,000 but a Court-fee stamp of Rs. 10 only was affixed to the plaint.

Held, by the Full Bench, that the plaint had been sufficiently stamped either under clause (i) or clause (iii) of article 17 of the 2nd Schedule to the Court-Fees Act. SARDAR DIAL SINGH v. BELI RAM. 51 P R 1897

Section 7 (IV)

Suit for account—Value of relief sought—Jurisdiction—Course of appeal—Authority of Appellate Court disclaiming jurisdiction, to order payment of additional Court-fee.

The plaintiff sued the defendant for an account valuing the relief sought at Rs. 100, and expressing his willingness to pay the Court-fee due upon any sum decreed in excess of the amount in accordance with the provisions of section 11, Court-Fees Act, 1870.

After the defendant had produced the books containing the parties' accounts and a commission had examined the same the plaintiff filed a petition stating that he appeared to be primâ facie entitled to recover a sum over Rs. 12,000, and praying that the matter might be fully investigated. No amendment of the plaint was, however, either asked for or ordered, and the suit eventually resulted in a decree in the plaintiff's favour for Rs. 2,343.

The plaintiff then appealed for a further sum of Rs. 1,716 and the defendant, against the decree in the plaintiff's favour, for Rs. 2,343.

Both parties presented their appeals to the Divisional Judge, who held that the appeals lay to the Chief Court.

Held, that the appeals lay to the Divisional Judge: under section 7, clause (iv) of the Court-Fees Act, the valuation of the original suit for purposes of Court-fee is fixed at the amount at which the relief sought is valued in the plaint. This, in the present case, was Rs. 100 and the amount was never altered by any amendment of the plaint; and under section 8, Suits Valuation Act, 1887, the value of a suit for an account as determinable for the computation of Court-fees and the value for purposes of jurisdiction shall be the same.

The value of the suit for purposes of jurisdiction was Rs. 100 and the appeal lay to the Divisional Court under section 39, Punjab Courts Act (as amended).

Semble.—If an Appellate Court has no jurisdiction to hear an appeal, it is not competent to it to pass orders for the payment of any additional Court-fee which it considers should have been levied in the first Court.

Law—Suits on behalf of minor for partition of joint family property.

Plaintiff, a minor, aged 17, at the date of institution of the suit, sued through his next friend for partition of his one-third share of the paternal estate. The plaint, which bore a Court-fee stamp of Rs. 10, alleged that all the parties were in joint possession of the entire property, the first defendant, however, having the sole control as manager of the joint family; and, for reasons specified in the plaint, the plaintiff prayed to be put in separate possession of his admitted one-third share of the estate, which he valued at Rs. 53,227-1-1.

Held, that the suit was liable to an ad valorem fee as being one "to enforce a "right to share in any property on the "ground that it is joint family property" within the meaning of section 7, sub-section (iv), clause (b), of the Court-Fees Act, 1870, and nonetheless such because plaintiff's share was admitted and merely his right to separate possession denied, the said clause having been so framed as to cover all cases within its general purview in which something more than a mere declaration of right is sought for, and consequential relief, whether it be in the form of joint possession, separate possession, and injunction, or other appropriate relief, is asked for.

Semble.—Even if the property did not fall under the category of joint family property, a suit for partition thereof would still be liable to an ad valorem fee under sub-section (iii) or sub-section (v) of section 7, according to the nature of the property.

Although no malversation on the part of defendant No. 1 had been proved, the Court under the particular circumstances of the case and with especial reference to plaintiff's age at the date of institution of the suit, and to the fact that after attaining his majority he had elected to prosecute his claim, decided that at the date of suit it was sufficiently clear that it would be in plaintiff's best interest to order a partition instead of dismissing the suit. 2. Partiion—Suit to enforce a right to share in joint family property—Valuation for purposes of jurisdiction and Court-fee—Suits Valuation Act, 1870, section 8.

Held, that for purposes of Court-fees in a suit to enforce a right to share in joint family property by partition and for the delivery of the possession to the plaintiff of his share, the value of the suit is the amount at which the plaintiff values his share. In such cases the value as determinable for the competition of Court-fees and the value for purposes of jurisdiction are identical.

(3) Enforcement of the provisions of a will	1,000
or Rs. 2,500 in all.

The District Judge having found, on a preliminary objection raised by the defendant, that the value of the property attached to the institution in question was Rs. 2,53,037-13-11, directed the plaintiffs to file additional Court fees, and upon their refusal to comply with such order rejected the plaint under section 54, Civil Procedure Code.

The plaintiffs thereupon appealed to the Divisional Judge, who returned the memorandum of appeal for presentation to the Chief Court holding that though he would have had jurisdiction, looking only at the claim as valued in the plaint, his jurisdiction had been taken away by the District Judge's decision that the true valuation was Rs. 2,53,038.

Held, that this view of the law was untenable, and that the appeal should be returned for presentation to the Divisional Judge. The suit being other than any of those referred to in section 7, paragraphs v, vi and ix, and paragraph x, clause (d) of the Court-Fees Act, and the value for the computation of Court-fees and for purposes of jurisdiction being the same by virtue of section 8 of the Suits Valuation Act, 1887; and such value being determinable according to the amount (in this case Rs. 2,500) at which the relief sought was valued in the plaint or memorandum of appeal, the Divisional Judge had jurisdiction to entertain the plaintiffs' appeal notwithstanding that the District Judge had decided that the true value of the relief sought was in excess of Rs. 5,000. 4. Suit for removal of mahant, for declaration of right to appoint a successor and to enforce the provisions of a will—Value of relief sought—Valuation by plaintiff, power of Court to revise—Appeal—Court-fees Act, 1870, section 7 (iv) (c) and 12 (1).

Plaintiffs sued on the allegations that they were the gurbhais of the defendant who was the present mahant of a certain akhara, in succession to one B. B., who died in 1885, leaving a will appointing defendant as his successor, but authorising plaintiffs to control his management of the institution and to have him ejected from the mahantship if he failed to carry out the essential provisions of the said will; that defendant had by his misconduct and disregard of the testator's wishes forfeited all right to continue in the mahantship; and that they, therefore, prayed as follows:—

(i) that defendant may be declared unfit to continue the mahant of the institution and may be removed;
(ii) that plaintiffs be declared entitled to nominate his successor as provided in the will;
(iii) that, if the above reliefs cannot be granted, defendant may be compelled to comply with the provisions of the will; or
(iv) that plaintiffs be granted such other relief as the will contemplates and the circumstances of the case permit.

Plaintiffs valued the relief sought in clause (i) of the plaint at Rs. 1,000; that mentioned in clause (ii) at Rs. 500, and the alternative relief asked for in clause (iii) at Rs. 1,000; and filed Court-fees upon Rs. 2,500.

The District Judge, on an objection by defendant, held that the claim was undervalued and ordered plaintiffs to make up the deficiency in the Court-fees upon the total value of the property attached to the institution, and on their failure to do so, rejected the plaint. Plaintiffs appealed to the Divisional Judge, but their appeal was dismissed on the ground that the suit was in reality one for possession of the property belonging to the institution and the plaint should have been stamped accordingly. Plaintiffs thereupon lodged a further appeal in the Chief Court, and it was contended, inter alia, on behalf of defendant that no appeal lay from the first Court's decision as to the valuation, in view of the provision in section 12 (1) of the Court-Fees Act, 1870.

Held, that section 12 (1) should be construed as enacting finality only in the matter of the actual assessment of the valuation of the property, and as allowing an appeal to proceed upon all questions of the construction of the Act, whether the contention is as to the section or clause applicable, or as to the meaning of any particular clause or section.

Held, further, that in cases where the plaintiff seeks the removal of a trustee or manager of an institution, but does not seek possession of the property for himself as trustee or manager, it is not necessary to file full stamp on the value of the property of the trust or institution; that in such a case the valuation of the relief sought in the plaint rests with the plaintiff; and that when the plaintiff has valued his relief at a sum which is prima facie not unreasonable, it is not open to the Court to challenge or revise such valuation.

The Court held that the valuation stated in the present plaint was reasonable and should be accepted. BAWA MANGAL DAS v. MAHANT NARINJAN DAS. 56 P R 1895

1. Valuation of suit for purposes of jurisdiction and Court-fee—Suits Valuation Act, 1887, sections 8, 9.

Held, that section 8 of the Suits Valuation Act so far governs section 7 (iv) of the Court-Fees Act as to indicate that it was not the intention of the legislature that a purely arbitrary value should be fixed by the plaintiff, and that it follows from section 8 and the Rules under section 9, Suits Valuation Act, that in an injunction suit, where no damages are claimed, the Court-fee payable is on the jurisdictional value fixed by the plaintiff within the limits laid down by the Rule.

Suit by mortgagee for possession of land—Foreclosure under Regulation XVII of 1806—Value of suit for purposes of jurisdiction—Suits Valuation Act, 1887, section 3.

A suit for possession of land by a mortgagee by conditional sale who claims to have foreclosed his mortgage under Regulation XVII of 1806, is a "suit for the possession of land" falling within clause V, section 7, Court-Fees Act, 1870, and is not a "suit by a mortgagee to foreclose the mortgage" falling under clause IX of the section, suits for foreclosure of mortgages being unknown in the Punjab where foreclosure takes place as a ministerial and not a judicial proceeding under the Regulation of 1806.

For purposes of jurisdiction under section 3, Suits Valuation Act, 1887, the value of the subject-matter of such a suit is to be calculated at thirty times the revenue assessed upon the land, in accordance with the rules made under the Act. Section 7 (V) (b)—concld.

The Courts below rejected the plaint on defendant refusing to file additional stamps as on a suit valued in accordance with section 7, clause V (d) of the Court-Fees Act, 1870. Plaintiff appealed, insisting on his right to value the suit at five times the jama under section 7, clause V (b), when a preliminary objection was taken that the appeal was barred by section 12, clause I.

Held, by the Chief Court, that the appeal was not barred, as the question was not merely one relating to valuation for the purpose of determining the amount of fee chargeable on the plaint, but whether a particular article of clause V of section 7 applied to the suit.

Held, further, that the plaintiff's prayer really was for possession jointly with the defendants of khata No. 409, with an interest therein to the extent of seven-fifteenths, and that the whole khata being part of an estate paying annual revenue to Government and recorded in the Collector's register as separately assessed with revenue, within the meaning of clause V (b), the value of the suit must be deemed to be five times the revenue payable on the khata. Held, that under section 7 (v) (e) read with section 9 of the Court-Fees Act, 1870, the value for purposes of Court-fee must be computed on the jurisdictional value of the house as finally fixed by the Court. ABDUR RAHMAN v. CHARAG DIN. 19 P R 1908 F B

The plaintiff sued to have a deed of gift delivered up by the defendant to be cancelled. The plaintiff alleged that at a time when he was non compos mentis the defendant obtained from him a deed of gift of a house; that when plaintiff recovered his soundness of mind, he revoked the gift and received back the deed from the defendant, and that the latter subsequently obtained possession of the deed, which he still retained. The plaintiff sued on a ten-rupee stamp, the value of the house being Rs. 1,600, and his suit was dismissed on the merits by the original Court; he appealed to the Commissioner on a ten-rupee stamp, and obtained a decree. Defendant appealed to the Chief Court on a stamp of Rs. 10, and BOULNOIS, J., on the 25th May 1876, holding that the stamp should be an ad valorem stamp, ordered the plaintiff to file full stamps for the Lower Courts, and the defendant a full stamp of Rs. 105 for his appeal to the Chief Court, fifteen days being allowed. On the 30th May the defendant filed his stamp, but plaintiff did not tender his until the 3rd July, explaining that owing to some informality in a money order, he could not get the money in time. Held, that plaintiff's default not being wilful his suit should not be dismissed under section 10, clause 2, Act VII of 1870. The lower Appellate Court dismissed under section 12, clause II of the Court-Fees Act the plaintiffs' appeal to his Court upon their failure to comply with an order to file within a certain period Court-fee stamps both for the Court of first instance and for the Appellate Court.

Held that, as it appeared that no question had arisen in, or been decided by the first Court as to the amount of fee chargeable, that the 2nd para. of section 12 of the Court-Fees Act was inapplicable, and the lower Appellate Court was not competent to require from the plaintiffs an additional fee in respect of the first Court.

Plaintiff sued to have his title in certain land affirmed, alleging that he was full owner and in possession, and was recorded as owner in the first Settlement, but at the revised Settlement was shown only as an occupancy tenant. The first Court dismissed the suit on the merits, and the plaintiff appealed to the Divisional Court stamping his appeal with a ten-rupee stamp. The Divisional Court held that the land was worth Rs. 1,000, and that the plaintiff could not recover Rs. 1,000, worth of land on a stamp of Rs. 10, and as the plaintiff refused to increase the stamp, dismissed his appeal.

Held, on a further appeal by plaintiff that under article 17 (3), schedule II of the Court-Fees Act, a stamp of Rs. 10 was sufficient for the suit as laid, which was not to recover the land, but to have the plaintiff's title to land, of which he professed himself to be already in possession, affirmed; and further, that section 12 of the same Act was no bar to the present appeal, in which the contention was not as to the valuation of the suit, but rather as to its nature, that being the matter on which the Divisional Court had gone wrong. 3. Court-fees Act, 1870, sections 12 (ii), 16, 17—Suit for specific performance of contract to sell, and for pre-emption on sale—"Distinct subjects"—Appeal and cross-objection—Court-fee payable—Joinder of causes of action—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, sections 44 (a), 45 and 561.

Plaintiff sued, alleging a contract to sell him a house for Rs. 2,500, out of which Rs. 100 were paid as earnest-money, and a subsequent sale (in guise of a mortgage by conditional sale) to a third party, and prayed for a decree either for (i) specific performance of the contract of sale on payment of Rs. 2,400, or (ii) for pre-emption on the sale on payment of Rs. 2,500, or whatever might be found to be the market-value of the house. The plaint was stamped in accordance with the value of the first claim only, and the objection of the defendant as to the stamp which was taken by him in the first Court was not disposed of by any formal order.

The first Court decreed the claims in the alternative, and they were both included in the defendants' appeal to the Divisional Judge, which was valued on the same principle as the plaint. The Divisional Judge, having reversed the decree as respects the first claim, but upheld it as regards the second, the defendants appealed to the Chief Court from the latter portion of the judgment, and the plaintiff put in cross-objections dealing with the former portion. A preliminary objection was taken by appellants that the Court-fee of Rs. 2 on the petition of cross-objections was insufficient, and that it should be calculated on the value of the claim for specific performance to which such cross-objections related. It was also urged that the plaint should be stamped, in accordance with section 17 of the Court-Fees Act, on the values of the two distinct claims therein included.

Held, that appellant's contention was correct. Plaintiff alleged two distinct causes of action, viz., the contract to sell, and the subsequent sale giving him a right of pre-emption if not rendered nugatory by the previous agreement, and his suit, therefore, embraced two "distinct subjects" within the meaning of section 17 of the Court-Fees Act, even though alternative, and not cumulative, relief was alone asked for; and as the plain object of that section is to prevent any loss to the revenue, owing to separate causes of action being lawfully combined in one suit, the fees to be paid are to be the same as if separate suits had been filed. Therefore, under section 16 of the Act, respondent was bound to stamp his cross-objections calculated on the value of the claim for specific performance, about which the appellants had not appealed.

Held further, that under section 12 (ii) of the Act, plaintiff would have to pay additional Court-fees in the first Court, as the question of valuation was there raised and "wrongly decided," defendants' objection being overruled by implication.

The plaintiff appealed, urging that the first Court was wrong in ordering that the decree for possession should be null and void in default of payment by him within the time fixed by the decree.

Held by the Full Bench, that the subject-matter in dispute in such appeal was the validity or invalidity of a decree for possession of property valued at Rs. 15,000, and the Court-Fee was that leviable under article I of schedule 1 of the Court-Fees Act for a memorandum of appeal not otherwise provided for in the Act calculated upon Rs. 15,000. On 28th January 1879, application for review was filed on half stamp, under article 4, schedule I of the Court-Fees Act (VII of 1870), the defendant's pleader claiming the benefit of section 5 of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877), the last day allowed under the Court-Fees Act having fallen on a holiday, and the petition having been presented on the re-opening of the Court.

Held, that the provisions of section 5 of the Limitation Act could not be applied to extend the period fixed in the Court-Fees Act, and the application having been present-

The relief claimed by plaintiff in the lower Court against certain insolvent defendants consisted of (1) a prayer for certain money with interest, and (2) a declaration of plaintiff's right as equitable mortgagee to be first paid out of certain specified property. The lower Court gave the plaintiff a decree for the full amount claimed, but refused to grant the declaration sought, whereupon the plaintiff appealed in regard only to the declaration thus refused.

The prayer for relief in the plaint was as follows :—

> The plaintiffs pray that by issuing a declaratory decree on this point, their right may be secured, namely, that the will of 3rd January 1890 after the death of the widows shall have no effect on the reversionary right of the plaintiffs, or whatever relief they may be found entitled to.

In reply to the Court, the plaintiffs said that their suit was "waste tansikh wasiyat namah."

The District Judge thereupon returned the plaint, which had been filed upon a stamp of Rs. 10 for amendment and representation on full stamp.

The District Judge's order was affirmed on appeal by the Divisional Judge.

Held, that the plaint had been correctly stamped. If the facts alleged by a plaintiff regarding a particular document are such as to entitle him, on proof of these facts, to a declaration that it shall be inoperative against him, and also to have it delivered up and cancelled in whole or in part, and the plaintiff's prayer is for such a declaration and for setting aside the document, or for such other relief as the Court think fit, he does ask for consequential relief.

Plaintiff sued under section 77 of the Registration Act, 1877, for a decree directing registration of a receipt for Rs. 100 said to have been paid as earnest-money of the price of a house which, it was alleged, defendants agreed to sell for Rs. 2,500. No value was put on the suit in the plaint, which was written on a Rs. 10 stamp, but in his appeal plaintiff valued it at Rs. 100.

Held, that (i) as regards Court-fees, the suit fell under article 17, clause (vi) of the 2nd Schedule to the Court-Fees Act, 1870 ; and (ii) that although the property might have been agreed to be sold for Rs. 2,500, the suit did not "involve directly any question respecting property of the value of Rs. 1,000 or "upwards," within the meaning of clause (a) of section 40 (i) of the Punjab Courts Act, 1884, but was an unclassed suit, of which the value, for purposes of jurisdiction, was Rs. 100 only. placed under the superintendence of the Court is placed under a qualified incapacity, viz., incapacity to do acts directly binding his property, and that his property is not bound by his acts which purport to charge it, but are done in contravention of the enactment in section 38 of the Act. There are no sufficient grounds in the terms of the provisions of sections 34—38 of the Act for holding either that the disqualification extends to incapacitating a person, otherwise competent to do so, from contracting debts, or that it exempts his property from the liability to which it is ordinarily subject of being applied to the discharge of his debts by process of law. The first proviso to section 35 of the Punjab Laws Act has not the effect of excluding the jurisdiction of the Court of Wards except in the case of a jagirdar or lambardar who engages direct for the payment of the land revenue, as the proviso says nothing about engaging direct for such payment, and though the settlement of the estate must have been made with the minor's father, as one of the owners, under the provisions of section 30 of the Land Revenue Act, it may have been made with him through the lambardar as his representative.

Section 12 of Act XL of 1858, which expressly empowers the Civil Court to direct the Collector to take charge when the minor's estate consists in whole or in part of land or of any interest therein, puts the Collector, when such direction has been given, in a similar position to what he would have held had the property and person of the minor come under the jurisdiction of the Court of Wards. 1. Act IX of 1861, section 3—Guardianship of minor—Application by mother who had previously entrusted her children to a third party under an agreement not to take them back during their minority without repaying the outlay incurred—Mother's right to an unconditional order notwithstanding such agreement.

On an application under Act IX of 1861 by a mother for the guardianship of her three minor children, it appeared that the petitioner, being at the time a widow and a Native Christian, made over her children to a Missionary in charge of a Mission, executing at the time a stamped agreement by which it was agreed that the Mission should take charge of them and bring them up till they reached the ages of 18 years, and if the said widow should take the said children back, she would repay the outlay already incurred, together with the cost of the children's maintenance. Subsequently, the mother having again become a Muhammadan, brought the present application.

Held by Tremlett and Smyth JJ., that the applicant was entitled to the custody of her minor children, as it appeared that she was of irreproachable character, and was able and willing to support them, and to bring them up in a manner compatible with their station in life, she also being in a better position to control their religious education than the defendant, who professed a religion different from that of the children's father, as in the above view of the case it would be most beneficial in the minors' interests that they should be restored to the custody of their mother who on the death of their father was the natural guardian.

Held further, by Plowden and Smyth, JJ. (Tremlett, J., dissenting as to this) that an unconditional order of appointment should be made in favour of the applicant, without regard to the question whether there were unadjusted claims between the defendant and the applicant connected with the subsisting custody of the minors, and arising out of the applicant's previous conduct, and that the appointment should not be made dependent upon her ability or her willingness to satisfy such claims.

Per Tremlett, J.—That the applicant should as a condition precedent to obtaining the order sought for, be required to make good to the defendant the actual outlay he had incurred in payments made to the applicant or on her behalf, and in maintaining the children so long as they were with him.

Held, that the above splitting of the guardianship was not warranted, and nothing being alleged against the mother except her remarriage which was no objection, so much of the order as gave the aunt rights and made her liable for maintenance must be struck out of the lower Court's order. In a proceeding under Act IX of 1861, it appeared that the petitioner was the father of a minor girl, under the age of puberty, who, when the proceedings were instituted, was in the custody of the defendant or a female member of his family. The petitioner claimed the custody of the child as his daughter, notwithstanding that a marriage between her and the defendant, to which he had not consented, had been performed by the authority of his wife during his absence. The defendant replied that the girl had been married to him by the mother's authority during the absence of the father, and that the father had turned his wife out, and by the custom of Kapur Khatris, a wife was competent to marry the daughter without the father's consent.

Held, that the defendant was not entitled in the present case to any enquiry into the validity of the marriage set up by him as his title to custody, the validity of which marriage was denied; the proceeding being a summary one, and it therefore being a waste of time to enter upon the question, which was not free from difficulty, and to give a decision which would not bind the parties to the marriage inter se, and might be contested the next day by a regular Civil suit; that the main and first issue to be tried was whether the petitioner was a fit person to have the custody of the child as its guardian; that if the plaintiff was proved to be fit, the Court must appoint him guardian, unless the defendant produced a decree declaring him to be the lawful husband, and also proved

5. Act IX of 1861—Discretion of Court under—Principles on which such discretion should be exercised—Custody of minor—Guardianship of minor for purposes of marriage.

The Courts acting under Act IX of 1861 have not an arbitrary power of selecting guardians of minors. Where the legal title is shown to exist, the Order under Act IX of 1861 should follow the law unless substantial grounds be shown for refusing to grant his legal rights to the person who has established them. The discretion vested by the Act is a judicial discretion to be exercised on reasonable grounds and not a mere arbitrary discretion. MUSA v. MUSSAMMAT ROSHNAI. 163 P R 1889

Held, by the Full Bench, that since the enactment of the Guardian and Wards Act, 1890, a suit for establishing a right to the custody or guardianship of a minor cannot be brought in the ordinary way or tried by a Court having jurisdiction up to Rs. 1,000.

So much of rule I, clause iii, as relates to suits for establishing rights to the custody or guardianship of minors has ceased to be operative since the passing of the said Act. GHASITA v. WAZIRA. 10 P R 1897

7. Application by guardian for custody of minor—Appeal—Guardian and Wards Act, 1890, sections 12, 25, 47 (c)—Revision—Right of guardian to custody of minor.

An application by a duly appointed guardian for custody of the minor was rejected by the Additional District Judge on the ground that the proper course for the guardian would be to bring a civil suit against the respondent if she refused to make over the minor to his custody. The guardian appealed to the Chief Court.

Held, that the order of the lower Court was not appealable.

But held, that the said order was open to revision on the ground that the lower Court should have directed the respondent to produce the minor with a view to his being made over to the petitioner, and that in failing to do so the lower Court failed to exercise a jurisdiction vested in it by law. WADHAWA SINGH v. MUSSAMMAT MALAN. 13 P R 1897

8. Custody of minor—Marriage of minor without consent of paternal relation—Respective rights of minor's husband and paternal uncle.

A minor girl, aged about 8 years, whose father was dead and whose mother could not be found, was given in marriage to respondent by her maternal grandmother without the consent of appellant, the minor's paternal uncle. The latter applied for the guardianship of the minor, but the District Judge dismissed his application on the ground that, if the marriage was unlawful by reason of the grandmother's incompetency to celebrate it applicant was "at liberty to seek his remedy in a Civil Court."

Held, that the right of giving the minor in marriage lay with the appellant, and that even if a marriage had taken place between respondent and the minor, the respondent did not thereby acquire the right of guardianship when the paternal relations did not consent to the marriage. Held, that the law in India, while placing all religions on a level before the law, and allowing to the fullest extent the rights of aggregations of individuals to be governed by their own personal law, protects individuals so far as may be from the loss of either rights or property by reason of renunciation of, or exclusion from any religion or caste.

Held, also that the expression "rights" in section 1 of Act XXI of 1850 includes something more than actual rights in property, and that the right to the guardianship and custody of his children by a Muhammadan, who has been converted to Christianity, is a right within the meaning of Act XXI of 1850.

Held, further, that the father, who was the only living parent, and who had the custody of his children, and was making suitable provision for their up-bringing, should not lose his natural rights on the ground of change of his religion. GUL MUHAMMAD v. MUSSAMMAT WAZIR BEGAM. 60 P R 1901

11. Restitution of Conjugal Rights—Muhammadan law—Adultery—Violation of marriage Contract.

In a suit for restitution of conjugal rights, it was pleaded (among other grounds) that plaintiff had lost his rights by reason of his adultery. Held, that the fact of plaintiff having had sexual intercourse with prostitutes during the absence of his wife, she persistently for years having refused to live with him, was not so gross a violation of the marriage contract as to disentitle plaintiff to the coustody of his wife. In suit for custody of wife, the parties to which were Mahomedans of the Gujrat district, the facts showed that a complete ceremony of a marriage, according to the Mahomedan law, had been entered into between the parties while infants of tender age, the contract being made on their behalf by their respective fathers. This marriage was never consummated, and the wife on attaining maturity entered into a fresh marriage with defendant No. 3 by whom she had a son, though she was shown to have full knowledge of the fact of her previous marriage; whereupon the plaintiff instituted the present suit to establish his marital right. No custom applicable to the parties was shown to exist, modifying the Muhammadan law as to the effect of a marriage of the kind in question nor was any such custom distinctly alleged by the defendants.

14. Non-payment of prompt dower before suit—Payment before decree.

In a suit for custody of wife, it appeared that the plaintiff had not paid or tendered before the institution of his suit the amount due to the defendant as prompt dower, urging that he had been excused such payment, but that on the Court finding against him on this point he paid the dower into Court and obtained a decree for the possession of his wife.

This decree was upheld by the Chief Court on second appeal. Mussammat Zebo v. Jewan Khan No. 35 of 1873, Civil) and Muhammad Bakhsh v. Mussammat Begam (No. 141 of 1884, Civil) cited. MUSSAMMAT MULKAN v. MUHAMMAD HUSAIN. 119 P R 1885

15. Defendants pleading acquiescence and connivance on the part of the plaintiff—Validity of such plea.

In a suit by a husband against his wife for restitution of conjugal rights and against the man with whom she was living as his wife for recovery of her person, where the defendants pleaded acquiescence and connivance on the part of the plaintiff, held, that the Court should have raised an issue on the above plea, as a Civil Court may refuse to grant its aid to a husband seeking its assistance against his wife, if it is proved that the conduct of which he complains has been knowingly permitted or connived at by him for a considerable period. 16. Husband acquiescing for several years in his wife's absence from his protection—Gross negligence disentitling husband from obtaining assistance from Court.

In a suit for custody of wife, held, that where a wife leaves her husband and goes off to another man, it is an imperative duty on the husband, if he intends to keep her as his wife and not to sever the connexion, to lose no time and spare no reasonable exertions in tracking and bringing her back, and if he allows years to go by without making any effort to reclaim her, the obvious conclusion is that either he has made up his mind to give her up and let her go, or else that he grossly neglected making the exertions due from him of keeping his wife safe in his protection, in either of which cases he is entitled to no assistance from the Courts. BUDH SINGH v. ASA SINGH. 6 P R 1885

17. Suit for restitution of conjugal rights—Dower—Plea of non-payment.

A suit is maintainable by a Muhammadan husband for restitution of conjugal rights or for recovery of wife notwithstanding previous non-payment of dower. The Court may allow the sum due as prompt dower to be paid into Court before decree, or give a decree with a condition that it can only be executed on prompt dower being paid.

18. Custody of wife—Agreement to divorce—Khula—Agreement opposed to public policy.

A., a Muhammadan husband, took unto himself a second wife C., whereupon his first wife B. left him, A. followed her, and in order to induce her to return to him executed an agreement by which he agreed to divorce C. in four months and promised that in default he should have no claim on B. who might then marry any one she liked. B. on her part executed a deed agreeing to renounce all claim to her dower in case A. did not divorce C. On the expiration of four months, A. did not divorce C. B. continued to live in the same house with A. for some time after which she left A. then sued for custody of B., B. pleaded that she had been irrevocably divorced by 'Khula.'

Held, that there had been no 'Khula.' Neither party wished for a divorce absolute. B. only wished for one in case A. did not divorce C. within 4 months. There was only an agreement to divorce, no actual repudiation but a suspension of repudiation on acceptance by B. which acceptance had to be notified by her on the termination of four months. As B. did not signify her acceptance at the proper time, there was no divorce.

Held, also that the agreement was void, its object and consideration being unlawful and opposed to public policy. MUHAMMAD BAKHSH v. MUSSAMMAT SAHIB JAN.

20. Custody of wife—Husband undergoing sentence of transportation for life at Port Blair—Equity and good conscience.

The lower Appellate Court gave the plaintiff, a Jat of the Jullundur district, who was undergoing a sentence of transportation for life at the penal settlement of Port Blair in the Andaman islands, a decree for the custody of his wife.

Held, that the decree should not have been made and must be reversed, it not being in accordance with the principles of equity and good conscience that a young woman, who had hardly attained maturity when her husband was transported for life, should be directed to proceed to a penal settlement and co-habit with him there. The plaintiff was about ten years of age and the principal defendant, who was a widow, about thirty. It was alleged that the marriage took place when the plaintiff was four and the woman between nineteen and twenty-four.

Held, assuming the plaintiff to have become the husband of the woman, that the Court had a discretion to grant or refuse the order prayed for and the order ought in the present instance to be refused.

25. Hindu Law—Marriage of minor—Minor given in marriage by person other than her guardians—Suit by guardians for custody of minor.

A minor woman having been given in marriage by her mother's sister and her own elder sister, plaintiffs, who were admittedly the guardians of the minor for the purposes of marriage, instituted the present suit with the object of getting possession of the minor, and of disposing of her in marriage for their own benefit. The marriage in question was a perfectly suitable one in all respects.

Held, that, as no reason affecting the propriety of the said marriage could be alleged, plaintiffs were not entitled to the decree for which they prayed, although the persons who gave the minor in marriage had no right under Hindu Law to do so.

26. Custody of wife—Conduct of husband—Discretion of Court.

CUSTODY OF WIFE—concld.

In suits for the custody of the person of a wife, the Court requires from the husband proof not merely that he is the husband of the woman but also that he has done nothing to forfeit his right to such special relief by failure in his own duty towards his wife. He has to show not only that he is not estopped from exercising a claim or privilege, but that he has done his duty in the matter towards his wife so as to entitle him to claim this extreme exercise of authority on his behalf.

Where it appeared that plaintiff's wife, of whom custody was sought, had some time previously absconded with another man, against whom plaintiff instituted criminal proceedings under section 498 of the Penal Code, which he subsequently compromised by divorcing his wife, and that the defendant, R. S., thereafter married the said woman by karewa, held, that inasmuch as plaintiff had done all he could to divest himself of connection with and responsibility for, his wife, the Court was not justified in putting in force the discretionary power vested in it and giving plaintiff a decree for the custody of his wife. (1) Proved.

1. Bedi Khatris of Pak Pattan—Self-acquired property—Gift of extra share to youngest son—Will.

Found that among Bedi Khatris of Pak Pattan, in the Montgomery district, there is no established custom whereby a proprietor's power of alienation of self-acquired property is limited.

Where, therefore, a Sikh father of the above tribe disposed of two shares of his self-acquired property by will in favour of his youngest son, to the exclusion of the two elder ones, held, that such disposition was valid and should be upheld. BAVA NATHA SINGH v. WAZIR SINGH. 63 P R 1880

2. Naru Rajputs—Validity of marriage with women of inferior caste or widow—Gift to son by such wife—Possession—Validity of gift.

One A. A., the father of the parties, a Naru Rajput, gifted half of his land to defendant, whose mother, Mussammat B., was a Moghlani. It was proved that defendant was in fact the son of A. A. by Mussammat B., and had been acknowledged by A. A. as such, but it was found unnecessary to decide whether Mussammat B. was the said A. A.'s lawful wife, or merely his concubine.

In a suit by plaintiffs, the donor's sons by a Rajput wife, to set aside the gift as invalid, held, that no custom had been proved under which the marriage of a Rajput with a woman of inferior caste or a widow, was invalid and under which the son of such a marriage could not succeed.

Held, further, that the gift by A. A. to defendant followed by possession, was valid, though at the time of the gift the donor was the father of an infant son by a Rajput wife. HAIDAR ALI v. SONDHA.

3. Syads of Gujrat—Gift to one son of larger share of ancestral land than would fall to him by inheritance—Muhammadan Law.

Found, that there is no well established custom prohibiting a Syad proprietor in the Gujrat tahsil from giving a larger share in ancestral land to one son than would fall to him by right of inheritance, by a deed of gift accompanied by delivery of possession.

A gift of the above description being valid by Muhammadan Law was therefore upheld. Mahomed v. Walidad (No. 164 of 1879, Civil), Mussammat Karm Bhari v. Hyat Baksh (No. 15 of 1880, Civil) and Nurdin v. Sahibzada (No. 18 of 1880, Civil) cited. SHER SHAH v. JAFAR SHAH. 51 P R 1883

Found in a suit the parties to which were Sials of the Jhang district, that they were governed by the Pagvand and not by the Chundavand rule of succession.

Held, that a gift of land to one son in excess of his ordinary share in order to equalise the shares of his sons is not ordinarily void. AHMAD v. HAJI MAHMUD.

(2). Not proved.

9. Awans of Shahpur district—Pagvand—Chundavand—Ancestral property—Gift by father to one son, prejudicing rights of succession of other sons.

Plaintiffs, Awans of the Shahpur district, sons of A. by his first wife, sued to cancel a gift of ancestral land in mauza Nali, tahsil Khushab, made by A. in favour of B. his son by a second wife, prejudicial to plaintiffs' rights of succession. The parties were, it was admitted, governed by custom and not by Mahomedan Law, and it was found that the rule of inheritance was Pagvand and not Chundavand.

Held, under the circumstances, that the presumption was against the power of A. to make such a gift.

In the absence of proof by defendants of similar gifts having been made and sustained, it was held that this presumption must prevail, and the gift was accordingly declared invalid. BAKHTAWAR v. CHIRAG.

In a suit (the parties to which were Kambohs of the Lahore city) to enforce a gift made by a father of a fourth share of his immoveable property in favour of one of three sons, and reserving also the said son's one-third share in the remainder, it appeared that no act of any kind had been done by the father after the gift to put the donee into possession.

Held, that the gift was invalid on the above ground. BUDHU v. CHIRAGH.

13. Agricultural Khatris, Jhelum district. In a suit the parties to which were agricultural Khatris of the Jhelum district, found, that by custom (1) a Khatri father cannot dispose of the whole of the ancestral land by gift to two sons in presence of a third; (2) he is competent in partition to retain for himself and at his own disposal a share equal to that of a son.

The gift in favour of the two sons to the exclusion of the third held operative only to the extent of one-fourth, the share which the father might have retained for himself. SHEIKH GHULAM HASSAN v. GURMUK AND RAMJI.

14. Mahtons of Hoshiarpur—Will—Power to make a will giving an extra share in ancestral estate to one grandson.

J., a Mahton of the Hoshiarpur district, divided his estate into four shares, giving one share to each of his three sons, retaining one-fourth for himself.

He then made a will of his own fourth share in favour of the son of one of his own sons (in supersession of a will previously made in favour of another grandson).

Held, that the plaintiff, who claimed under the will, had failed to establish its validity by custom. The result of upholding it would be to sanction an unequal distribution by a proprietor of his ancestral property among his sons and grandsons, and the burden of proof was therefore upon him.

15. Gift to grandsons to exclusion of son—Sidhu Jats, tahsil Moga, Ferozepore district.

Found, in a suit the parties to which were Sidhu Jats of the Moga tahsil of the Ferozepore district, that no custom was established empowering an owner of ancestral property to make a gift of half of his land and a house to his grandsons—the children of his only son, who had two wives by each of whom he had male issue, the donees being the children of one of the wives—to the exclusion of their father, the donor's son. BURA v. MAN SINGH.

16. Ancestral land—Non-ancestral house and movable property—Arains of the Ferozepore district—Will.

The plaintiffs sued their half-brother to recover their share of the property left by their father, an Arain of the Ferozepore district, consisting of ancestral land, a non-ancestral house, and movables. The defendants set up a will, the validity of which, as exceeding the power of the donor, was denied by the plaintiffs.

Held, that the alienation of the ancestral land in favour of one son to the exclusion of the others, without their assent, was invalid; but that the bequest, therefore, of the rest of the property in dispute should be maintained.

Per PLOWDEN, S. J.—Ancestral land stands upon a different footing from all other property, ancestral or non-ancestral, and the general presumption undoubtedly is against a father being competent to divide the ancestral land held by him unequally among his sons with effect beyond his life without their assent and what he cannot do by an act inter vivos he cannot do by will.

Where property is not land, and is non-ancestral, and there is full power to dispose of it at pleasure, there is not necessarily any presumption against a will being a valid form of disposition. ACHHA v. GAMAN.

17. Gift in favour of eldest son—"Ancestral property"—Bhatti Rajputs (Muhammadan) of Raiya tahsil, Sialkot district—Riwaj-i-am—Land given in dowry by mother of wife.

On the marriage of one N. B. with one Mussammat U. H., a certain village was given in dowry by the mother of Mussammat U. H., but it was not clear whether the gift was to N. B., or to Mussammat U. H., or to both jointly. In both settlements, however, N. B. had the land recorded as his sole property and was proved to be in possession of it. On the 27th February 1894 N. B., who was then a very old man, executed a deed of gift of the said village in favour of his eldest son by Mussammat U. H. whereupon the other sons of N. B. by his said wife sued to set aside the gift so far as it affected their reversionary rights. The parties were Muhammadan Bhatti Rajputs of Raiya tahsil, Sialkot district.

Held, by the Chief Court, that the gift of the village by the mother of Mussammat U. H. was intended for the benefit of Mussammat U. H. and her sons and not for that of N. B., and was, therefore, upon the principles laid down by the Full Bench in No. 32 P. R. 1895, "ancestral property" for the purposes of the present suit.

Found, that defendants, upon whom the onus rested, had failed to prove that gift of ancestral property in favour of the eldest son to the prejudice of the other sons was valid by custom. KABIR BAKHSH v. NABI BAKHSH.

27. Unequal distribution of ancestral land by father in favour of certain sons to prejudice of remaining sons—Muhammadan Awans of Attock tahsil, Rawalpindi district—Suit for possession of land—Limitation.

One N. A, a Muhammadan Awan of the Attock tahsil in the Rawalpindi district, owned certain ancestral lands in the villages of Mirza and Burhe, and, on the 13th February, gifted to defendants, who were then minors, the half of his lands in Mirza and the whole of his lands in Burhe.

N. A. died in June 1889, and on the 2nd January 1891, plaintiffs, who were the step-brothers of defendants, sued the latter for possession of a half share in the lands of both villages, on the grounds that the gift had been induced by undue influence, that it had never been acted on, and that it was invalid by custom. The District Court, after a remand by the Divisional Court, decreed plaintiff, Mian Khan, possession of ¼th of the land in Burhe and of ¼th of the land in Mirza. Both parties appealed to the Divisional Judge, who held that the claim regarding the whole of the gifted land was time-barred, but rejected the defendants' claim to exclusive possession of the ungifted portion of the Mirza land. The plaintiff having appealed to the Chief Court.,

Held, following the ruling of the Full Bench in No. 116, Punjab Record, 1890, that the suit having been brought within

12 years from the date of the gift was not time-barred, and

Found, that no custom among Muhammadan Awans of Attock tahsil in the Rawalpindi district had been proved, whereby a father is competent to make an unequal distribution of ancestral property between his sons.

Found, in a case the parties to which were Naru Rajputs of the Hoshiarpur tahsil that a father has no power by custom to favour one son in the matter of the distribution of the ancestral estate to the prejudice of his other sons, save for special cause.

In the present case, held that the defendant had failed to prove a sufficient cause for such uneqnal distribution. AMIR KHAN v. SANDHE KHAN. 72 P R 1895

29. Ancestral and acquired property—Awans of mauza Uchhali, tahsil Khushab, Shahpur district—Will.

In a case the parties to which were Awans of mauza Uchhali, tahsil Khushab, of the Shahpur district, the plaintiff sued his half-brothers to recover his share of the property left by their father consisting of ancestral and acquired landed property. The defendants set up a will, the validity of which as exceeding the power of the donor was denied by the plaintiff. The first Court found that by Customary Law the father was prohibited from making an unequal distribution of his ancestral property and could not disinherit the plaintiff and was also of opinion that as the father in acquiring might have used income derived from ancestral property that the whole of the property referred to in the suit came within the definition of ancestral property—the Divisional Judge modified the decree in regard to the nature of the acquired part of the property, which he held capable of being disposed of in accordance with the terms of the will.

Held, that the donor had no power to distribute his ancestral property unequally and disinherit a lawful son, and the fact that he endeavoured to do so by will does not better his position.

Held also, that as under Customary Law property acquired from income or profits of ancestral property did not constitute it ancestral, the onus of proving that the last full owner could not alienate such part at his pleasure rested on the plaintiff, which he had failed to discharge.

37. Exclusion of Nephew—Hindu Law.

Two village proprietors in Ferozepore of the Brahmin caste, left ancestral lands to one nephew, who had long taken care of them and cultivated their land, to the exclusion of other nephews.

38. Jats of Varaitch got of mauza Mahrala, tahsil Phalian—Gift to associated nephews in presence of unassociated brothers and nephews—Validity of gift.

In a suit the parties to which were Jats of the Varaitch got, residing in mauza Mahrala in the Phalian tahsil of the Gujrat district, it appeared that one of the defendants, a childless proprietor, had made a gift of his share in the ancestral land to two of his nephews, who were associated with him in food and residence, giving them possession, and reciting in the deed of gift, which was duly registered, that he had brought up the said nephews, whose father before his death had resided with him, and that now on his becoming old his nephews had agreed to support and take care of him, and in consideration thereof he made a gift of his land to them. Plaintiffs, who were the brother and the sons of another brother of the donor, therefore sued to set aside the gift alleging that the donor had by custom no power to make a gift of his land to two of his nephews to their (plaintiffs') prejudice.

Held, that the gift under the above circumstances was by custom a valid one. Mahomed v. Walidad (No. 164 of 1879, Civil) cited. SULTAN BAKSH v. RAJA. 126 P R 1883

The plaintiffs, the sons of one brother, sued to set aside a gift made by a childless occupancy tenant of his occupancy rights in khatas A. and B. in favour of his nephews, the sons of another brother. It appeared that the occupancy rights in khata A. were held jointly by the defendants, whilst khata B. was held jointly by plaintiffs and defendants.

Held, that the plaintiffs' claim must be dismissed as regards both khatas.

As regards khata A., the defendants must be considered to represent a single tenant, each defendant having a right of survivorship, and the plaintiffs therefore were not the next reversioners and had no right to interfere.

Similarly as regards khata B., the defendants were also joint tenants with the donor, and there was nothing to show that one joint tenant could not gift his share to another joint tenant, or that such a gift was opposed to custom or to the provisions of the Wajib-ul-arz.

Plaintiffs, who were the sons of one brother and the grandson of another brother of one M., sued to set aside a gift made to M. by another brother's son of his equity of redemption in his holding, which was already mortgaged to the donee. The parties were Muhammadan Jats, residents of M. Chakneola in the Gujrat tahsil.

Held, that no custom was proved which would render the above gift invalid, as being made to one heir to the prejudice of others equally entitled, and that therefore the parties were bound by Muhammadan Law, under which the gift would be valid, if made by a person competent to contract, and if possession were given to the donee, without reference to whether he was an heir or not.

74. Custom—Alienation—Gift of occupancy rights—Jurisdiction of Revenue Court.

G., a Hindu Rajput and a sonless landowner of tahsil Unah in the Hoshiarpur district, shortly before his death made a gift of occupancy rights in his land to S, a collateral kinsman but not an heir. In a suit brought after G.'s death by the plaintiffs, collateral kinsmen and heirs of G., for possession of G.'s land, it was contended for the defendant that the Civil Court had not jurisdiction to hear the suit and that the grant by G. of occupancy rights was valid.

Held, that as S. had not taken possession of the land as a tenant during the lifetime of G. the suit was properly brought in the Civil Court.

Held also, that as the gift of occupancy rights was not shown to be a gift within the powers of the grantor, or to be a mere act of management or beneficial to the estate, or to be a gift made for services rendered. It was invalid.

82. Succession of and gift to daughter and daughter's daughter—Muhammadans.

A, a Muhammadan of Bhai Busti Ram, Lahore district, executed a deed of gift of his property in favour of his wife and daughter (his only child). After A's death the donees executed a deed of gift of all the property in favour of M, the daughter's daughter. K, brother of A, admitted the capacity of the latter to make the gift to his wife and daughter, but contended that the gift was intended only for the support of the women during their lifetime, and further that if this were not so the gift to the daughter's daughter was invalid.

The Riwja-i-am, as to the points in issue, was as follows :

Section 125.

The widow took a life estate, and at her death the property went to the descendants (owlád) of her deceased husband's grandfather. Section 144. The daughter did not inherit if there were male issue ; but a gift to the daughter made by the father in his lifetime, conferred upon her proprietary rights, and in such case the estate descended to her childern. Section 145.—If there were no male issue, the daughter succeeded ; but if she died lawaris wa lawuld the property reverted to the near relations of her father. Section 159.—The proprietor could not transfer to a stranger to the exclusion of collaterals ; otherwise he had full power of alienation.

Held, by Lindsay, J., that the gift to M, was invalid, on the grounds that, though the daughter, in the absence of male issue, was entitled to succeed to the entire estate of her father, the succession did not go to the daughter's daughter, the words in section 145, "lawaris wa lawuld," referring to male issue only, and meaning nothing more than " without son and heir, " and that section 159 referred to a male proprietor only.

Held, by Boulnois and Melvill, JJ., that

90. Chuna Jats of mauza Badoki, Sialkot—Gift to daughter's sons—Possession.

In a suit the parties to which were Chuna Jats of mauza Badoki in the Sialkot district, plaintiffs sued to set aside a gift by their cousin of his land to his daughter's sons, who were minors, and as whose guardian their mother appeared in the case. It appeared that the Riwaj-i-am applicable to the parties only provided expressly for gifts to daughters, which were allowed to extend to the whole estate, if no male descendants of the great-grandfather survived, but which, when such descendants existed, were valid for the share which under Muhammadan law the daughter would inherit; and in accordance with the above terms, it was held by the Courts below that the gift was valid against the plaintiffs only for one-half of the property gifted. The plaintiffs in second appeal sought for a decree declaring the gift altogether invalid against them, as it was not a gift to the daughter, but her sons, and further urged that, possession not having been given, the gift was void.

Held, that there was sufficient evidence of a custom under which a gift to daughters' sons would be valid, at least to the same extent as if the gift had beed made to their mother.

Held further, that assuming the custom required that the provisions of Muhammadan law in respect to possession should be complied with, the fact that the donees were minors, who, with their mother, lived with the donor, was a sufficient reason for regarding the possession of the latter as on behalf of the donees, as their guardian. Gulam Muhammad v. Muhammad Amin (No. 86 of 1882, Civil), cited.
